President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear from Brother Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve, so chosen this day. He will be followed by Elder Gordon B. Hinckley.

ELDER HENRY D. TAYLOR

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

At 4:15 yesterday, as the afternoon session of conference was concluding, I was handed a note written by Sister Clare Middlemiss, President McKay's secretary, requesting that I be in President McKay's office at five o'clock. I was there. Shortly after that the lightning struck.

President McKay pointed out that a vacancy or vacancies would exist in the Assistants to the Council of the Twelve, and it was his desire and the desire of the Brethren that I should fill one of those vacancies. There was only one answer that I could give and that was, "Yes, President McKay, I will accept. I will do all I can." This, brethren and sisters, is in spite of a feeling of inadequacy and a knowledge of my limitations.

Today I also would like to pay tribute to my forebears, the Taylors and the Dixons, who joined the Church in foreign countries and came to this land. I am grateful for my parents who have long since passed away, for the training which they gave their six sons and two daughters that whenever a call came from the Brethren, there could be but one answer, and that was to say "Yes," accept the calling, and then serve with all of our heart, might, mind, and strength.

In accepting this calling, I take comfort from a few factors. First is the promise of the prophet that has been quoted once today here, that whenever the Lord has a work for us to do, he prepares a way for us to accomplish it. Grandmother Taylor used to say that "the Lord broadens the back to carry the burden."

I also rely upon the assurance that prayers are being offered up daily throughout this Church for the General Authorities, and I know those prayers are heard and that the Brethren are sustained by the spirit of our Heavenly Father in answer to those prayers.

As we have called missionaries, also branch and district presidencies and others to positions of leadership and responsibility, we have pointed out to them that "often men are called not for what they are, but for what they may become." Now, it is an easy thing to give advice and counsel like that. Sometimes those words come back to us, so in giving counsel it might be well to keep in mind this adage, to "let our words be sweet and tender because tomorrow we may have to eat them."

For the past two and a half years, Sister Taylor and I have been presiding in the California Mission. I am grateful for Sister Taylor, a beautiful and lovely daughter of Zion. Our present calling is probably the most satisfying experience that we have ever had in our lives. We work shoulder to shoulder, traveling about the mission together. Over the years as I have served in other Church positions, Sister Taylor has had to assume the major responsibility in the rearing of our four fine sons. I am grateful for her, for her companionship, and for the support and strength that she is to me.

I would like to express appreciation this day for the missionaries in the California Mission, also for the Saints who reside in southern California and Arizona, in the mission as well as in the thirty-four stakes in southern California and Arizona where the missionaries are working. The stake presidents, the bishops, and all the Saints have been most kind, and very thoughtful and generous to us. We have learned to love the people there and to appreciate them.

I would like to pledge my support this day to the Brethren, that I will do all within my power to help build up the kingdom. Elder Mark E. Petersen once remarked that President Clark had made the suggestion that there are two times when a short talk is in order, at least two times—once is when you are starting a job, and the other is when you are finishing. Well, I am just starting a new calling, so it gives me encouragement to make my remarks brief.

I would like to leave with you today, brethren and sisters, my witness that I know that we have a Heavenly Father, that he loves us, that he is interested in us. I bear my witness to you today on this Easter Sabbath that I believe Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the Savior and Redeemer of mankind, and that through his atonement we will have salvation and also the possibilities of exaltation through our acts.

I am grateful for the life of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I truly believe he talked to our Heavenly Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, in the Sacred Grove in the year 1820. It is my firm belief that under instructions which were given him this Church was organized, and I am so grateful for my membership in this Church. I love it very much.

I am grateful to belong to a Church that is directed and led by inspiration and revelation in this day, and with all my heart I uphold President David O. McKay and these other Brethren in the General Authorities.

God bless you, brethren and sisters. I hope that you will pray for me as I will pray for you.

I bear this witness to you and humbly pray for this, in the name of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve. We shall now hear from Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, who was sustained this day in the same position, and he will be followed by Elder Marion G. Romney, a member of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER GORDON B. HINCKLEY

My dear brethren and sisters, I am reminded of a statement made by my first missionary companion when I received a letter of transfer to the European Mission office. After I had read it, I turned it over to him. He read it, and then said: "Well, you must have helped an old lady across the street in the pre-existence. This recognition has not come because of anything you've done here."

Humbly, I seek the blessings of the Lord. I am overwhelmed with a sense of inadequacy. I feel shaken, and if what I say is largely in the nature of personal testimony, I hope you will forgive me.

Since President McKay spoke with me late last evening I have been thinking about the road that led here. I know that I have not come that road alone, and I feel very grateful for the many men and women—the great and good men who are here today, and the small and obscure, but, wonderful people, many of whose names I do not remember—who have helped me. It is the same with each of us in the Church. No man proceeds alone. We grow according to the help given us by those who teach us and lead us.

I have been marvelously fortunate and greatly blessed. I have had a wonderful opportunity in working closely with the Brethren—all of those who are on this stand, and many who have sat here in years past and who are gone. I have had a sure conviction that President McKay is a prophet of the Lord since the day he was sustained as the President of this Church, and I have had many experiences which have confirmed that conviction.

I had the great opportunity of being with him at the Swiss Temple, and as I saw those people gathered from ten nations to participate in the temple ordinances; as I saw elderly people from behind the Iron Curtain who had lost their families in the wars that had washed over them, and witnessed the expressions of joy and tears of gladness which came from their hearts as a result of the opportunities that had been given them; as I saw young husbands and wives with their families—their bright and beautiful children—and saw those families united in an eternal relationship, I knew with a certainty even beyond what I had known before that this man was inspired and directed of the Lord to bring these priceless blessings into the lives of those men and women of faith gathered from the nations of Europe.

I do not know why under the blessing of Providence I have had the marvelous association which I have had with President Richards. In 1935 when I was released from my mission, Elder Joseph F. Merrill of the Council of the Twelve, who was my mission president, asked that I meet with the First Presidency to tell them of some conditions in the European missions. Following that interview President McKay assigned me to work under the supervision of Brother Richards, and for almost a quarter of a century I have worked under his direction and have been tutored by him. I have partaken of his wisdom—his great wisdom—and his kindness and graciousness. I shall ever be in his debt, and I want him to know of my love and appreciation for him.

President Clark has been my ever-ready friend and adviser. I do not know how to say thanks enough to him. And to all of these Brethren whom I have come to love, and who have been so generous and good to me, I am deeply grateful.

I have been touched by the mission presidents with whom I have worked. As I have known their stories, the great sacrifices which they have made to go into the world, the devotion with which they labor, the manner in which they give of themselves, I have been humbled. I have been inspired by the missionaries with whom I have had association. I have seen them as they have gone out in all kinds of weather, late and soon, doing their work and bearing testimony, often at great sacrifice, and bringing a marvelous harvest of souls into the kingdom of God. I have been touched by their parents, with many of whom I have talked. There are still many widows in this Church who wash and iron, who sweep and empty wastebaskets to keep sons and daughters in the mission field, and who would mortgage all they have to give whatever might be felt necessary to make more effective the work of a son or daughter in the mission field.

I have thought, as has Brother Tuttle, of my teachers of the Primary, the Sunday School, and the MIA, and of the Aaronic Priesthood leaders who helped me along when I was a noisy boy, and who exercised patience and forbearance. I do not remember many of the specific lessons they taught, but somehow there was born in my heart a conviction concerning the truth of this work.

I shall always be grateful to the bishop who recommended me for a mission, for my companions in the field, to the humble men and women of faith among whom I labored; to Brother George D. Pyper of the Sunday School, who invited me to serve on the general board; to my stake president who invited me to become his counselor. To Brother Harold B. Lee I feel particularly indebted for a blessing which he gave me when he set me apart as a stake president. I shall never forget the language and spirit of that blessing.

Now, in conclusion, I should like to express my appreciation to my father. He lies critically ill in the hospital. If I feel any selfish satisfaction in this honor, it is the satisfaction that comes from the realization that one of his sons has been found worthy of the confidence of the Brethren. And if I feel any regret, it is that, unless the Lord rules to the contrary, he will not know of this in mortality because of the condition in which he lies today.

No son ever had a better father. He was busy in the Church—for twenty-five years he was in the stake presidency and filled many other responsibilities—but he never forced his views upon us and never compelled us to participate. He never touched one of his children. But by some inspired psychology he planted in us a faith, a love for the restored gospel, and, I think, a desire to do the right thing.

I would like also to express appreciation to my marvelous and faithful mother. She died three years before I went on a mission. I received my call in the days of depression, and money was scarce, and the mission to which I went was then the most costly in the Church. But we found that she, through the years, had banked some of her small change and set up, as it were, a trust fund so that her boys might go on missions regardless of any economic catastrophe that might hit the family.

I would also like to express appreciation for the wonderful women who have come into our home and for my own beloved companion and our five children.

I say these things for two reasons: first, because I am grateful to all who have helped me along the way, and secondly, because I would like to make the point that all of us, in our various situations, are the result, largely, of the lives that touch ours; and that as teachers and officers in the Church we affect for good or ill all who come under our direction according to our diligence in meeting our responsibilities.

It was Emerson, I think, who was asked what book had had the greatest influence upon his life, and he said he could no more remember the books he had read than he could remember the meals he had eaten, but they had made him. Likewise, all of us are largely the products of the lives which touch upon our lives, and today I feel profoundly grateful for all who have touched mine.

Now, in conclusion, on this sixth day of April, significant under the revelations of the Lord, I, too, would like to bear testimony that I know that God lives, that Jesus is our Redeemer, the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh, the Savior of mankind who gave his life to atone for our sins; that Joseph Smith was indeed a prophet of God, the prophet of this dispensation; that the Lord's work is here and is real and under his direction; and that President David O. McKay stands, as did the prophet of this dispensation, to lead the kingdom of God, as the stone which was cut out of the mountain without hands, which should roll forth and fill the earth.

God help us, you and me, to live up to the testimonies which we carry in our hearts. I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Gordon B. Hinckley has just concluded speaking, one of the Assistants to the Council of the Twelve. We shall now hear from Elder Marion G. Romney, a member of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brethren and sisters: I loved and respected our leaders who have gone to their rewards since last conference. To Sisters Bennion, McKay, and Kirkham I pay my respects and pray the Lord to comfort, sustain, and bless them and their families.

I have been touched by the testimonies of these men who have this day been called into service as General Authorities. I feel certain that the Lord inspired President McKay to name them. From my acquaintance with them and my knowledge of their work, I can testify that all of them are faithful and devoted servants of God.

I want to say just a word about Brother Joseph T. Bentley who has this day been called to preside over the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. I joined wholeheartedly in the vote of appreciation to the brethren who are being released. I know they have rendered long and able service, and I feel sure that Brother Bentley will prove to be a worthy successor to them. I have known him from the time he was born. I knew his father, Joseph C. Bentley. He was my bishop from the time I was born until we left Mexico. I remember how when my mother was in need, my father being away from home, he let me chop wood from some old stumps in the tithing office yard. I can still remember the blisters. He was a very wise man. He did not permit us to suffer for the necessities of life, but he saw to it that we worked for what we got.

Today I desire to do three things; first, make a short report on the Mexican missions I have just visited; second, draw a lesson from the history of the Mexican people and their progenitors; and, third, make an application of that lesson to the people of our day.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

I have taken as my text the words of Nephi:

Wherefore, I write unto my people, unto all those that shall receive hereafter these things which I write, that they may know the judgments of God, that they come upon all nations, according to the word which he hath spoken. (2 Nephi 25:3.)

In the main the missionaries in Mexico are in good health, working hard, and therefore enjoying the spirit of their callings. We visited with and heard the reports and testimonies of 254 of them.

Many of the people among whom they labor are receptive to the gospel. Last year there were 1,288 convert baptisms. As of the first of the year the Church membership in Mexico was 11,249.

The missionaries tell of many faith-promoting experiences. To me, however, the greatest is the transformation taking place in the feelings, thinking, and interests of the missionaries themselves. Their adjustment to the environment and the language, together with the love they develop for the humble people they serve, must be seen to be appreciated. It could not be accomplished but by the power of God. Imagine, if you will, an English-speaking twenty-year-old lad becoming so absorbed in Spanish that after but three months he has difficulty bearing his testimony in English. Like all true missionaries, each regards his own field of labor as choice above all others.

My fellow countrymen, Harvey H. Taylor and Claudious Bowman, the mission presidents, are wise and able men. With their devoted wives they give faithful service.

In Mexico, itself, marked advancement has been made during the past forty years. Reforms forged in the Revolution have measurably advanced the democratic process. A comparatively stable government has arisen. Phenomenal progress has been made in education. Industry has expanded. Hard-surfaced roads and air lanes crisscross the country. The population is rapidly increasing. For many, living standards have improved.

It occurred to me that by these and other means the Lord is beginning to prepare the remnant of Lehi to receive their promised blessings.

Jesus said to their progenitors,

... ye are the children of the prophets; and ye are of the house of Israel; and ye are of the covenant which the Father made with ... Abraham.

And ... this people will I establish in this land, ... and it shall be a New Jerusalem. And the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you. (3 Nephi 20:25, 22.)

Looking into the faces of nearly 10,000 Church members and investigators, I thought of their promised blessings and contrasted their present status with that to which they must rise to attain them. I thought also of our divine commission to carry the gospel to them and was all but overwhelmed by the magnitude of the task. But then I remembered, too, the Lord's assurance that he will hasten his work in its time and was comforted with the knowledge that the acceptance of the gospel will greatly accelerate their advancement. Personally, I am very grateful for the impetus being given by the First Presidency to the work among them.

Many other matters weighed upon my mind as throughout our extensive traveling we observed conditions among them. The effects of the Spanish conquest and of four centuries of domination by secular and ecclesiastical tyrants are everywhere painfully apparent. The ruins, with their mute evidence of so-called fertility cults and human sacrifice, eloquently testify to the degraded status to which they had fallen long before the Spanish conquest.

My heart was saddened as I contrasted their present circumstances with the blessed conditions which prevailed among their progenitors following the post-resurrection ministry of Jesus. At that time, as you will remember, they developed a society superior to any since Eden, save that of Enoch only; a society in which, "there was no contention ... because of the love of God which did dwell in the hearts of the people"; a society in which, "there were no envyings, nor strifes, nor tumults, nor whoredoms, nor lyings, nor murders, nor any manner of lasciviousness;" a society in which every member had conquered the lusts of the flesh. "... and surely," concludes the record, "there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God." (4 Nephi 15-16.)

"... my joy is great, even unto fulness, because of you, . . ." Jesus said to them, "yea, and even the Father rejoiceth, and also all the holy angels, . . ." (3 Nephi 27:30.) As I contemplated this golden era, I remembered also that even as Jesus spoke his joy was turned to sorrow and he said, as he pre-visualized the apostasy into which their posterity would fall:

But behold, it sorroweth me because of the fourth generation from this generation, . . . for they will sell me for silver and for gold, and for that which moth doth corrupt and which thieves can break through and steal. And in that day will I visit them, even in turning their works upon their own heads. (Ibid., 27:32.)

They who spurned the light of his gospel and began the descent into the awful darkness through which the remnant has since passed not only had this warning before them, they also had the warning of Nephi given some six hundred years earlier. He foretold their apostasy, concluding with this doleful note:

. . . And I looked, and beheld three generations pass away in righteousness; and their garments were white even like unto the Lamb of God. . . .

And I . . . saw many of the fourth generation who passed away in righteousness.

And . . . I looked and beheld the people of my seed gathered together in multitudes against the seed of my brethren; and they were gathered together to battle.

And . . . I beheld . . . that the seed of my brethren did overpower the people of my seed.

. . . and I saw wars and rumors of wars among them; and in wars and rumors of wars I saw many generations pass away.

And . . . after they had dwindled in unbelief they became a dark, and loathsome, and a filthy people, full of idleness and all manner of abominations. (1 Nephi 12:11-12, 15, 19, 21, 23.)

Notwithstanding these warnings, they wilfully took the downward course. The judgments of God which have since been visited upon them have been but the inevitable fruits of their rebellion. These judgments came, however, as Nephi said they would, according to the word which the Lord had spoken.

But, the time for them to prepare to receive their blessings is now at hand. Of this we are assured, because Jesus said that when the Book of Mormon should be brought to them, "... it shall be a sign unto them, that they may know that the work of the Father hath already commenced unto the fulfilling of" his promises. (3 Nephi 21:7.)

Great is the message of the Book of Mormon to the remnant of Lehi. From it they may learn of their origin, that they are of the house of Israel, that they are heirs of the covenant. It reveals to them and teaches them of Jesus Christ and his gospel. If they will study, learn, and accept it for what it in truth is, they will come to know and understand their past, they will obtain a vision of and a hope in their future, and they will realize as did their progenitors that only through accepting and obeying the gospel of Jesus Christ can they obtain their promised blessings.

But I would not leave you with the impression that the message of the Book of Mormon is for the remnant only. It has peculiar application to us of the United States. The message expressed by Nephi and confirmed by the epic of the Book of Mormon peoples is universal,

. . . the judgments of God [have always and will continue to] . . . come upon all nations [regardless of time or place], according to the word which he hath spoken. (2 Nephi 25:3.)

This law embraces two divinely revealed constants. Amos put one of them in these words,

Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. (Amos 3:7.)

Jesus thus stated the other:

Although, the days will come, that heaven and earth shall pass away; yet my words shall not pass away, but all shall be fulfilled. (Joseph Smith 1:35.)

Understanding and applying these truths, men and nations may determine for themselves the cycle of their own lives, whether it shall terminate in the shadow or in the light.

History amply testifies to this conclusion. Through Noah the Lord warned the antediluvians of their impending destruction. With the warning, he presented the means of escape—the gospel of Jesus Christ. His hearers spurned the warning; rejected the gospel; the floods came.

Sunday, April 6

Third Day

The Lord sent many prophets to the Jaredites, who ... prophesied of the destruction of that great people except they should repent, ... (Ether 11:1.)

As the end approached, Ether,

... did cry from the morning even until the going down of the sun, exhorting the people to believe in God unto repentance lest they should be destroyed, ... (Ibid., 12:3.)

The prophets were rejected and the Jaredite nation perished.

"... in the ... reign of Zedekiah ... came many prophets, prophesying unto the people that they must repent, or the great city Jerusalem," would be destroyed with many of its inhabitants, while others, "should be carried away captive into Babylon." (1 Nephi 1:4, 13.) The prophets and their message were rejected, and the Babylonian captivity followed.

Jesus told the multitude at Jerusalem that their rejection of him would bring desolation to their homeland; the buildings of the temple would be thrown down, and not one stone would be left upon another; that in the destruction the Jews would suffer great tribulation, and thereafter be scattered upon the earth to be hated of all nations. True, they crucified Jesus for his warning. But Titus besieged Jerusalem. The temple was destroyed, and the Jews were scattered.

We today are at the crossroads of another cycle in the universal pattern, a cycle fraught with everlasting consequences. Whether it shall close in the light or in the shadow is for us to determine. The ominous signs are upon us, and the issues are crystal clear.

Our whole world is in confusion. The wisdom of our wise men has proved inadequate to stay the rising crisis. With the means to unleash universal destruction in the hands of evil men, fear and apprehension ride with every breeze. In the past, situations similar to ours have generally terminated in destruction. It would seem that the judgments of God are about to be once more poured out upon the nations.

The world situation being as it is, I feel impelled to emphasize the fact that, as already pointed out with respect to similar situations in the past, the Lord saw this one coming, and, in harmony with his universal pattern, sounded the warning and prescribed the means of escape. For although the pattern is universal so that the lesson may be clearly drawn from history, the Lord always warns the people of a new dispensation through prophets raised up unto them in their own day. This he has done for this generation through the great prophet of the restoration, Joseph Smith, Jr. Through him the Lord repeatedly declared that the world was ripening in iniquity and that unless men repented destruction would overtake them.

For example, in March 1829, he said:

... a desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth, and shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming.

Behold, I tell you these things, even as I also told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem; and my word shall be verified at this time as it hath hitherto been verified. (D & C 5:19-20.)

You will note that this prediction, as were like predictions in the past, is conditional. "If they repent not," is the condition. For this generation as for all others, the Lord has provided the means of escape. This means is now, and has always been, the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In the preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, the book in which the revelations sounding the warning and declaring anew the saving principles and ordinances of the gospel are published, the Lord said:

Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments;

And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world. (Ibid., 1:17-18.)

"These things" are, of course, the revelations published in the Doctrine and Covenants. In them the issues of our day are as clearly set before us as were the issues of the past set before the antediluvians by Noah; the Jaredites by Ether; the people of Zedekiah by Jeremiah; the Jews by the Master. They are set before us as clearly as they were set before the Nephites by Nephi and the Resurrected Jesus.

By spurning the warning and rejecting the means of escape, we shall most certainly bring upon ourselves the predicted destruction, for the words of Jesus, "Although . . . heaven and earth shall pass away; . . . my words shall not pass away," (Joseph Smith 1:35) are still immutable.

On the other hand, if men will hearken to and accept the means of escape, the gospel of Jesus Christ as restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith, the rewards shall as certainly follow. Fears will give way to confidence; war clouds will fade; righteousness will come; peace will reign. Again there shall return to earth that glorious state of felicity which blessed the Nephites in the days of Jesus. To these truths I bear witness.

When I see the tangible evidence of them in the light shining from the faces and the happiness enjoyed by those in every land who receive and live the gospel, there wells up in my heart the desires expressed by Alma when he said:

O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people!

Yea, I would declare unto every soul, as with the voice of thunder, repentance and the plan of redemption, that they should repent and come unto our God, that there might not be more sorrow upon all the face of the earth. (Alma 29:1-2.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve. At the conclusion of this morning's session you heard an inspirational sermon from Elder Hugh B. Brown, Assistant to the Twelve. We would like to hear a word from Brother Brown in acceptance of the new call that has come to him.

ELDER HUGH B. BROWN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I respond to this call in deep humility, with a keen sense of my own inadequacy, but with confidence in my Brethren who have thought me worthy of it. I shall spend the balance of my life trying to make their judgment good.

I could mention many to whom I am indebted, as others have done. I shall not take that time. I cannot, however, refrain from speaking of my angel mother, who, when I was a little child, had faith in my destiny, and all through my life helped me to believe and try to be worthy of it.

I would be ungrateful if I did not acknowledge that Zina Card Brown, my beloved wife, is more responsible for my being here today than am I. To these two women I am profoundly grateful and thank God for their lives and their influence on my life.

I thank President McKay for his confidence. I love him with all my heart. It has been my privilege to do some little work with and for him to help to take a little of the burden from his heart. I thank God for that association. I love and honor his Counselors and the members of the Quorum of the Twelve, each one of whom I know, in each one of whom I have absolute confidence. I restate my faith. I rededicate my life. I thank you for your confidence. I pray for forgiveness of my weaknesses and sins, and ask for your charity and tolerance and for God's blessings, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

And now another annual conference of the Church has become history. In conclusion, none of us should leave this conference, first, without a resolution in his or her heart to live a better life. True religion cannot be worn only on Sundays, laid aside as you put aside your Sunday clothes, and left to lie in moth-balls during the week. True spirituality should be expressed in daily activity. That has been a theme of this great conference.

No father, no mother, no husband, no wife, and no children who have been here in attendance with them should return home without going into a better home than that which they left when they came. No fathers and mothers who have listened in can be true to their ideals as members, and to the noble thoughts inspired by the remarks of these Brethren of the General Authorities, without living tonight and in the future in a more spiritual home than heretofore. That is our duty.

No man or woman who has listened in can be true to himself or to herself without doing something to make life sweeter and better in their home than it was. That is our responsibility.

Secondly, the great theme has been that salvation and peace, contentment of the human family, not only in the home but also in community life, will come through obedience to the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. It has been the season of Easter, and every speaker has referred to the salvation, glorified life, the eternal gospel of the Resurrected Christ. We cannot be true to ourselves and to our loved ones and our associates, without being determined to live more in accordance with those divine principles. I mean in daily life, in our speech, in our self-control, in home associations, with business associates, in political fields—that is the obligation we have taken upon us by participating in the high ideals of the messages given by these speakers.

We cannot be true to ourselves and to our loved ones, to our associates, without feeling a determination to know more about this great truth to which testimonies have been borne. The spirit within bears testimony that truth exists in this old world, and the spirit feeds upon that truth. I have much to say, but I shall summarize it, because of the lateness of the hour, by applying to the truth of the gospel what Mr. Jordan says about truth in general:

We cannot truly believe that we are the children of God and that God exists without believing in the final inevitable triumph of truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ. And as we leave this conference we shall have less worry about the destruction of the world and the present civilization because God has established his Church, never to be thrown down or given to another people, and as God lives and his people are true to him and to one another we need not worry about the ultimate triumph of truth.

If you have that testimony of truth on your side, you can pass through the dark valley of slander, misrepresentation, and abuse, undaunted as though you wore a magic suit of mail, that no bullet could enter, no arrow could pierce. You can hold your head high, toss it fearlessly and defiantly, look every man calmly and unflinchingly in the eye, as though you rode, a victorious king returning at the head of your legions, with banners waving and lances glistening and bugles filling the air with music. You can feel the great expansive world of more health surging through you as the quickened blood courses through the body of him who is gladly, gloriously proud of physical health. You will know that all will come right in the end, that it must come, that all must flee before the great white light of truth, as the darkness slinks away into nothingness in the presence of the sunburst.

So, brethren and sisters, with truth as our guide, our companion, our ally, our inspiration, we may tingle with the consciousness of our kinship with the Infinite, and all the petty trials, sorrows, and sufferings of this life will fade away as the temporary, harmless visions seen in a dream. That is our privilege through God's blessing and guidance if we apply in daily activity the spiritual blessings and privileges of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

God help us all to do so and to enjoy such blessings I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir will now favor us with, "O Divine Redeemer," conducted by Richard P. Condie. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Philo T. Edwards, president of the Sharon Stake.

The singing, as we have told you, has been furnished today by the Tabernacle Choir under the direction of Richard P. Condie and his assistant, Brother Jay E. Welch. Brother Frank W. Asper has been at the organ this afternoon.

We expressed appreciation for the flowers this morning and for the services of the radio and television stations, and of all who have participated in this great Conference to make it successful. We have not said anything about the ushers, who, if you have noticed, have been at their places right from early Friday morning, and have helped serve the Saints and crowds every hour since that time. We thank you, Bishop Isaacson, and others, who are responsible for their service.

Tonight the Deseret Sunday School Union will convene in this building at 7 o'clock. All Sunday School workers are expected to be in attendance.

Let us drive carefully as we go to our homes. We have here a notice which may be of interest to you who are leaving. "U.S. Highway 50, Donner's Pass," it says, "is closed, but U.S. Highway 40 over Donner's Pass is open for passenger cars. Chains, however, are necessary. U.S. Highway 40 (Alternate) through Feather River Canyon is open. Chains, however, are necessary there." We thank the Highway Patrol for sending this information to us.

The Choir will now sing the closing song, and after the benediction this Conference will be adjourned for six months. The benediction will be offered by President Philo T. Edwards.

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir, "O Divine Redeemer."

President David O. McKay:

You would consider me very remiss, I am sure, if I did not express appreciation to Brother Condie and the members of this great Choir, and for their inspirational singing this day. Brethren and sisters, it has taken a lot of work for you to attain to that high standard, but we do appreciate your having gone to that work and having given to us this day inspiration inexpressible. Thank you and God bless you.

I am just reminded too that now is a good time to thank the two Choruses—one from the Brigham Young University, with combined choruses of young people, last Friday; and the other from the Utah State University of Logan, another group of several hundred young people, both of which groups gave us singing that is unexcelled, I think, anywhere in school groups. We appreciate it especially, and I should say that President Chase of the Utah State University is in the Near East. That is why he is not with them, but we have had as his representative President Mark Newberger, who is acting president of the Utah State University. We thank them and all.

Now the benediction will be offered, and this Conference will be adjourned for six months.

President Philo T. Edwards of the Sharon Stake pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned for six months.

The choral music for the Friday sessions was furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with John R. Halliday conducting at the Friday morning session, and Don L. Earl at the afternoon meeting.

The music for the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions was furnished by the Combined Choruses of the Logan Latter-day Saints Institute and the Utah State University, James L. Bradley conducting the singing at the morning session, and Alma Dittmer at the afternoon session.

At the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening, April 5, the singing was furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, Richard P. Condie conducting.

Sunday, April 6Third Day

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for the Sunday sessions, with Richard P. Condie, Director of the Tabernacle Choir, and Jay E. Welch, Assistant Director, conducting.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir at the Tabernacle Choir and Organ and Church of the Air broadcasts.

Accompaniments and interludes on the organ were played by Alexander Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy M. Darley.

Stenographic notes of the Conference were taken by Frank W. Otterstrom and Joseph Anderson.

Clerk of the Conference

CHURCH OF THE AIR

Columbia Broadcasting System's Church of the Air was presented at 7:30 a.m., Sunday, April 6, 1958. The program was as follows:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, furnished the music for this service, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. Richard L. Evans was the announcer.

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by CBS Radio so that representatives of many faiths may speak to a nation-wide congregation. Today's service, in connection with the Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, comes to you transcribed from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah. Our speaker is Elder Harold B. Lee, member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Music is by the Tabernacle Choir directed by Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

The event this Sabbath Day commemorates, the resurrection of Jesus the Christ, the Prince of Peace, suggests the singing of a hymn setting with the witness of these words from Job: "I know that my Redeemer liveth. What comfort this sweet sentence gives! He lives, who once was dead. He lives, my ever living head. He lives to bless me with his love. He lives to plead for me above. He lives my hungry soul to feed. He lives to bless in time of need."

(The Choir sang: "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."—Edwards.)

Announcer: Next from the Choir we hear a resurrection text taken from the New Testament, and sung to the music of Franz Joseph Haydn: "Hereby perceive we the love of God, that He laid down His life for us . . . He died for us . . . that we should live."

(The Choir sang: "He Died For Us."—Haydn.)

Announcer: We now hear on this Church of the Air service Elder Harold B. Lee, educator, distinguished public servant, and member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the Mormon Church. Elder Lee has titled today's talk: "Courage to Face the Inevitables Through Faith in a Divine Redeemer."

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

"Now upon the first day of the week, early in the morning, the women came unto the sepulchre. . . . They found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And it came to pass that as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold two men stood by them in shining garments! And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, the angel said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? Fear not ye, be not affrighted; for I know that ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified.

He is not here, for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay—where they laid him.

And go quickly and tell his disciples and Peter that He is risen from the dead —that He goeth before you into Galilee; there ye shall see Him. Remember how He spoke unto you while He was yet in Galilee saying: The Son of Man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men and be crucified and the third day rise again. Lo, I have told you." (Matt. 28:5-7; Mark 16:5-7; Luke 24:1-8.)

Thus do the writers of the gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, record the greatest event in the history of the world, the literal resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Savior of mankind. Dramatically had been demonstrated the greatest of all the divine powers of an incarnated Son of God. He had declared to the sorrowing Martha, at the time of the death of her brother Lazarus: "I am the Resurrection and the Life . . . ! He that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live. . . ." John 11:25.)

To the Jews with murderous intent, His pronouncement of His divine power was even more explicit and meaningful. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

"For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself:

"And to execute judgment also, because He is the Son of God." (John 5:25-26.)

Following swiftly His own resurrection, there came an evidence of a second transcendent power to raise from the grave, not only Himself, but others "who though dead, had believed in Him." Matthew makes this simple, forthright record of the miraculous resurrection of the faithful, from mortal death, "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the Saints which slept arose, And came out of the graves, after His resurrection, and walked into the holy city and appeared unto many." (Matt. 27:52-3.)

Nor was this to be the end of the redemptive powers of this illustrious Son of God. Down through the ages, in every dispensation, has come the cheering promise: "For as in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive," (I Cor. 15:22), ". . . they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5:29.) Time is rapidly moving on to a complete consummation of His divine mission.

If the full significance of these thrilling events were understood in this day when, as the prophets foretold: The wicked are preparing to slay the wicked, and "fear shall come upon every man" (D & C 63:33), this understanding would put to flight many of the fears and anxieties which beset men and nations. Indeed if we "fear God and honor the king" (I Peter 2:17) we can then lay claim to the glorious promise of the Master: "If you strip yourselves from jealousies and from fear, you shall see Me" (D & C 67:10).

In the brief time allotted for this Easter message, I should like to cite a few of the "inevitables" which all may one day face, and draw some parallels from sacred writings in the hope of vitalizing the mission of the Redeemer to all who listen and hopefully to those who may read. This evidence will demonstrate, to some extent, how an unshakable faith in the reality of the resurrected Lord and in the certainty of the resurrection of all mankind would provide the essential courage to accept "insecurity with equanimity" in a material world. Thus may all successfully combat the apprehensions and tensions which are so destructive among us today.

Consider as one of life's inevitables, if you will, the condition of one suffering from an incurable malady, or faced with the heart-breaking prospect of impending death to a loved one. Have you ever felt yourself spiritually devastated by an inconsolable grief?

May I take you to a sacred scene portraying one whose all seemed slipping from her grasp and let you feel her strength in a fateful hour! Huddled at the foot of the cross was the silent figure of a beautiful middle-aged mother with shawl drawn tightly about her head and shoulders. Cruelly tormented on the cross above her was her first-born son. One can but feebly understand the intensity of the suffering of Mary's mother-heart. She now faced in reality the import of old Simeon's doleful prediction as he had blessed this son as a tiny infant child, "He shall be as a sign for to be spoken against; Yea, a sword shall pierce thine own heart also." (Luke 2:34-35.)

What was it that sustained her during her tragic ordeal? She knew the reality of an existence beyond this mortal life. Had she not conversed with an angel, a messenger of God? She undoubtedly had heard of her son's last recorded prayer before His betrayal as it has been written by John: "And now, O Father," he had prayed, "Glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." (John 17:5) This sainted mother with bowed head heard His last prayer murmured from the cross through tortured lips: "Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit," (Luke 23:46) thus inspiring her with resignation and a testimony of reassurance of a reunion shortly with Him and with God her Heavenly Father. Heaven is not far removed from him who, in deep sorrow, looks confidently forward to a glorious day of resurrection. It was a wise man who said: "We cannot banish dangers but we can banish fears. We must not demean life by standing in awe of death." (Sarnoff)

Now to mention another of the "inevitables": As the press, the radio and television brings to you daily the frightening prospect of devastating war with atomic or hydrogen bombs and guided missiles, are you filled with forebodings of impending doom? What is there to set your soul free from such terrifying anxieties?

May I take you to the example of Peter whose loyalty to the Master seemed to have exceeded his courage, when in the face of physical hazard, he denied the Master thrice on the night of the betrayal. Compare this fear-torn Peter with the boldness in him manifested shortly thereafter before those same religious bigots who had so recently demanded the death of Jesus. He denounced them as murderers and called them to repentance—suffered imprisonment, and later went fearlessly to his own martyrdom.

What was it that had changed him? He had been a personal witness to the change which came to the broken, pain-racked, body taken from the cross, to a glorified resurrected body which could pass thereafter unhindered through walls of mortar and stone, which could eat broiled fish and honey comb; which could appear and disappear suddenly from the sight of mortals. The plain and simple answer is, that Peter was a changed man because he knew the power of the risen Lord. No more would he be alone on the shores of Galilee, or in prison, or in death. His Lord would be near him.

And now still another of the all-too-often "inevitables" among us:

In the writings of Luke, just an inference is made as to what may have been thought to be the reason for mental and spiritual turmoil and which may have been as much in evidence then as it is among us today in those who have advanced degrees in their higher learning in secular fields but have neglected spiritual nourishment. Such a one, no doubt, was Saul of Tarsus, the Apostle Paul to the Gentiles. During his interview and defense before King Agrippa, Festus who was present "said with a loud voice, Paul thou art beside thyself; much learning hath made thee mad." (Acts 26:24.) Indeed it may have seemed so to those who had known of his zealous persecution of the followers of the Master, in contrast to his now declared allegiance, to that Jesus he had before so loudly denounced.

The insinuation of Festus suggests what higher education could do to a frustrated man, with but a smattering of unrelated bits of information with no unifying philosophy. Psychologists today tell us that one such, without a belief in either God or the Devil, "like a blocked body of water turns back upon itself, collecting scum, refuse, and silt, so the soul turns back upon itself and collects instinctive, dark forebodings," (Peace of Soul) which makes of his days and nights torture-chambers of discontent.

Years later, Paul explained to his beloved Timothy the simple formula which makes for a contented soul: "Godliness with contentment is great gain," (I Tim. 6:6) and then explains the source from which that essential "godliness" comes; "But godliness" he said, "is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." (I Tim. 4:8.)

That promise of eternal life had given meaning and purpose to the life of Paul as it does to all of us who so believe. He had heard the Master's voice at the time of his conversion, declaring the reality of the Resurrected Lord, and whose teachings by his authorized servants, Paul now knew were the "power of God unto salvation."

As the challenge of dictator nations is before us with their advances in destructive military science, it is a challenge, of course, for us to be strong in military science. We must beware, however, lest our much learning in these worldly matters likewise makes us mad. It is also a challenge for us to be holy through faith in that Divine Redeemer by whom all who obediently serve Him might be saved. Atomic power and guided missiles, are dangers only when they are in the hands of evil men.

And now, finally, may I make one further reference to another "inevitable" with which many are confronted:

Have you never stood seemingly defeated after years of gruelling struggle and faced with the prospect of programs, or principles, or policies, dear to your heart, ruthlessly condemned to failure? Why do some men commit suicide when their bank fails or their earthly possessions are swept away? Why do some rise above the heart-break of disaster and calamity while others go down to inglorious and pitiful despondency of bitterness as though the struggle of life had all been wasted? These and others are sobering questions.

I am indebted to one of the leading educators in our own state university to impress this problem. After noting the great interest in industrial, governmental, and university circles in clinical psychology or in what he called behavioral science, he summarizes the thinking of eminent authorities with this significant statement: "This interest derives not only from the trend cited above, but because of the tremendous social conflicts, such as war, which demonstrate behavioral breakdown." (Dr. G. Homer Durham)

This final illustration may suggest a solution to such as these and other similar frustrating problems.

The prophet Joseph Smith in this modern day was facing martyrdom at the hands of enemies for saying that he had seen visions in which God the Father and His Son and others who had lived upon the earth had appeared to him as living, resurrected, glorified beings. Like the Apostle Paul, he dared not deny having had these heavenly manifestations lest by so doing he would offend God and come under condemnation. (P. of G. P. p. 49.)

In the midst of bitter persecution with his coming doom already foreshadowed, the word of the Lord came to him: "if the very jaws of hell shall gape open the mouth wide after thee, know thou, my son, that all these things shall give thee experience and shall be for thy good. The Son of Man hath descended below them all. Art thou greater than He? Therefore hold thy way . . . for the bounds (of your enemies) are set, they cannot pass. . . . Fear not what men can do, for God shall be with you forever and forever." (D & C 122:7-9.)

"Let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God . . . and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion. . . ." (D & C 121:45-46.)

There you have your answer, you strong, noble statesmen in worldly councils of men involving human welfare. Better, as Paul said it, "godliness with contentment," than an empty compromise for the sake of expediency or the plaudits of men. You, too, can know that your Redeemer lives, as did Job in the midst of his temptation to "curse God and die," and know also that you, too, can open the door and invite Him in "to sup with you." See also yourselves one day as resurrected beings claiming kinship to Him who gave His life that the rewards to mortal men for earthly struggle and experience will be the fruits of eternal life even though as measured by human standards ones life's labors seemed to have been defeated. This is what the voice of wisdom has said, "The best thoughts, affections, and aspirations of a great soul are fixed on the infinitude of eternity. Destined as such a soul is for immortality, it finds all that is not eternal too short, all that is not infinite too small." (Stanford Memorial Chapel.)

Today in commemoration of the world's greatest victory I invite the honest in heart everywhere in deep humility to rise above their human fears and frustrations and rejoice as did the apostle to the Gentiles "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." (I Cor. 15:57.)

All of which I pray for us and for all men everywhere who seek to serve Him and keep His commandments.

(The Choir sang: "Alleluia."—Jones.)

Announcer: We have heard an Easter anthem by David Hugh Jones sung by the Tabernacle Choir, with the words of Charles Wesley, "Alleluia." "Christ the Lord is ris'n today! Raise your joys and triumphs high, Sing ye heavens . . . and earth reply. Christ the Lord is ris'n today."

And now the men's chorus of the Choir recalls the words of Eliza R. Snow, with the music of James McGranahan, in a hymn of the eternal journey of man: "O My Father, thou that dwellest in the high and glorious place, When shall I regain thy presence And again behold thy face? In thy holy habitation Did my spirit once reside? In my first primeval childhood, was I nurtured near thy side."

(The Men's Chorus of the Choir sang: "O My Father."—McGranahan.)

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is The Work."

Announcer: You have been attending CBS Radio's Church of the Air. Today's service, in connection with the Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, came to you transcribed from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah. Our speaker was Elder Harold B. Lee, a member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Music was by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by Richard P. Condie. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

SALT LAKE MORMON TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Sunday, April 6, 1958, through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas. The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played, "As the Dew From Heaven Distilling," and on signal the Choir and organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard P. Condie conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir first recalls a "Galilean Easter Carol" by R. Deane Shure: "Joy dawned again on Easter day; the sun shone out with fairer ray, when to their longing eyes restored, the apostles saw their risen Lord."

(The Choir sang: "Galilean Easter Carol."—Shure.)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner takes first from the Byzantine sketches, Mulet's stirring music on a New Testament text, with the witness of Peter's words: "Thou art the Christ; the son of the living God." And the Saviour's reply "... flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 16:16-17.) We hear the "Toccata in F Sharp Minor."

(Organ selection: "Toccata in F Sharp Minor."—Mulet.)

Announcer: With words written on a theme from Jeremiah, William L. Dawson has given us a simple, moving, sacred song: "There Is a Balm in Gilead, to heal the sin sick soul . . . Sometimes I feel discouraged, And think my work's in vain, But then the Holy Spirit revives my soul again . . . If you cannot sing like angels, if you cannot preach like Paul, You can tell the love of Jesus, And say 'He died for all' . . . There is a Balm in Gilead, to make the wounded whole. There is a Balm in Gilead, to heal the sin sick soul."

(The Choir sang: "There Is a Balm In Gilead."—Dawson.)

Announcer: Dr. Schreiner turns now to the calm and quieting phrases of one of Louis Vierne's organ offerings: "Communion In E Flat."

(Organ selection: "Communion In E Flat."—Vierne.)

Announcer:

Every special day calls for some searching as to its significance. And Easter is no exception. We are all aware of the outward evidences of it, but what of the real cause for its commemoration: the resurrection of Jesus the Christ, our Lord and our Savior, who redeemed us from death. "Supernatural" some may say, and in saying so may suggest some unresolved reservations. But what is or isn't supernatural? Here we are alive, on a planet suspended in space—a beautiful and wondrous one, with sunrise and sunset, and seedtime and harvest, and the changing seasons; and all that grows, and all that moves; and man and his searching mind, and the power to learn, and the love of loved ones, and all the evidence of the planning of Providence. Is this natural or supernatural? Perhaps some would suppose that the most natural thing is nothing. How did anything—or anyone—ever come to be in the first place? When was there a beginning of anything at all? "Who wound up the Universe?" is one of the classic questions. Who organized it—and who keeps it in its course? You see, we live in the midst of miracles. We see them at our very side. The first flower of Spring is a miracle, the first bud that breaks Winter's death and dormancy. Birth itself is a miracle—the awesome, sobering miracle of the newborn babe—with hands reaching, with eyes watching, with ears listening, and intelligence that responds to truth. The fact that we live, that we are, that we think and learn and love—all this is a miracle and a mystery. Who gave instinct to animals? Who gave the body wisdom to heal itself? Who gave two cells the intelligence to join and divide, to become an eye, or a tooth, or the hair of the head? Natural? Supernatural? We recall the oft-quoted question of Pascal, "Which is the more difficult, to be born, or to rise again?"<sup>1</sup> Surely immortality is no more a miracle than mortality is. And the Lord God who gave us life here, can give us life everlastingly. To the believer there is the blessing of believing, even of knowing, beyond belief. To the doubter let it be said: He cannot know that the believer does not know. And with Job we would witness this day with a certainty of assurance: "... I know that my redeemer liveth."<sup>2</sup> And to those who search and seek, to those who sorrow, to those who are fearful and frustrated, to those who wonder, and those who weary along the way, this is the certainty and assurance of Easter—this is the assurance of our Savior: that for us and for all men—including loved ones who now seem lost—He did come forth from death to life; He did redeem us all from death.

(The Choir sang: "Christ The Lord Is Ris'n Today."—Carey.)

Announcer: "Abide with me; 'tis eventide! the day is past and gone; The shadows of the evening fall; The night is coming on! Within my heart a welcome guest, Within my home abide; ... O Savior, stay this night with me; Behold, 'tis eventide."

(The Choir sang: "Abide With Me; 'Tis Eventide."—Millard.)

Announcer: In closing now the Tabernacle Choir gives voice to a glorious chorus of conviction—a majestic and immortal message from the Messiah—the "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel. "Hallelujah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. The kingdom of this world is become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever—King of Kings, and Lord of Lords."

(The Choir sang: "Hallelujah Chorus."—Handel.)

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the 1494th presentation, continuing the 29th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Cross-roads of the West.

The One Hundred Twenty-eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 10, 11, and 12, 1958.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle, Saturday evening, October 11, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast and telecast over Station KSL and KSL-TV at Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL the following stations made available to their listening or viewing audiences one or more of the six general sessions:

In Utah: KSVC at Richfield, KSUB at Cedar City, KVEL at Vernal, KVNU at Logan.

In Idaho: KRXX at Rexburg, KPST at Preston, KID and KID-TV at Idaho Falls, KBOI and KBOI-TV at Boise, KLIX-TV at Twin Falls.

In California: KEEN at San Jose, KSRO at Santa Rosa, KRDG and KVIP-TV at Redding, KGO-TV at San Francisco, KTTV at Los Angeles, KERO-TV at Bakersfield, KOVR-TV at Stockton.

In Nevada: KLRJ-TV at Las Vegas.

In Arizona: KOLD and KGUN-TV at Tucson, KPHO-TV at Phoenix.

In Colorado: KREX at Grand Junction, KBTB at Denver.

In Oregon: KWRC at Pendleton, KRMW at The Dalles, KGW-TV at Portland, KBES-TV at Medford, KOTI-TV at Klamath Falls.

In Washington: KINT-TV at Tacoma, KHQ-TV at Spokane.

In Montana: KXLJ-TV at Helena, KXLF-TV at Butte, KOOK-TV at Billings.

In New Mexico: KRSN at Los Alamos.

All general sessions of the Conference were broadcast in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square, in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loudspeaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle Grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over public address systems, and by direct wire over a public address system to members of the Priesthood in other assemblies in Utah, Washington, Wyoming, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Ohio, North Carolina, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Wisconsin, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Idaho, Oregon, California, and Canada.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting System's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record. (See pages 130-131)

Elder Joseph Anderson was Clerk of the Conference.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

Conference convened in the great Tabernacle Friday morning, October 10, 1958 at 10:00 a.m., with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

President McKay opened the Conference with the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

This is the opening session of the One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah. All the General Authorities of the Church are in attendance excepting Elder Harold B. Lee and Elder ElRay L. Christiansen. Elder Lee is visiting the South African Mission. Elder Christiansen is in the European missions.

Elder Joseph Anderson is Clerk of the Conference.

For the convenience of those who are unable to enter the building—the Tabernacle, which is filled so far as we can see, every seat occupied—we announce that these services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall by television. The general sessions of this Conference will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. The names of these stations have already been announced to the television and radio audiences. To the owners and managers of these various stations we wish to express our sincere appreciation for this outstanding public service so generously extended.

To the large audience assembled in the Tabernacle, to the overflow gathering in the Assembly and in Barratt Hall, and to the untold thousands comprising the television and radio audiences, in behalf of the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and other General Authorities, we bid you a hearty welcome.

Any important messages or cables, calls, or telegrams that come to us for persons attending the sessions of this Conference, will be announced at the dismissal of the meetings over the public address system on the grounds.

We are favored this morning by having the Relief Society Singing Mothers from three Southern California regions to furnish the music. You who were fortunate enough to hear the program of the General Board of the Relief Society last Wednesday and Thursday will know what a treat is in store for us with these Singing Mothers.

The beautiful flowers which you see arranged on the rostrum and pulpit have come from two countries far removed from each other,—South Africa and Hawaii. The flowers from South Africa are a variety of the protea, the national flower of South Africa. These flowers are unique inasmuch as South Africa is the only place in the world where they are found. Our gardener, Brother Irvin T. Nelson, this morning informed me that these are taken right out of the desert, according to pictures he has seen, and they seem to be just that.

Elder Glen G. Fisher, president of the South African Mission, informs us that the branch Relief Society sisters throughout the South African Mission have put on cake sales and made individual contributions, and have manifested a keen interest in this project in order that they might send these rare flowers for our enjoyment during this Conference.

The entire South African Mission membership will have more than common interest in our Conference, since at this time they are enjoying a visit from Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve. Sister Lee is accompanying him on this tour.

The other flowers, the beautiful red antheriums, have come to us from the Honolulu Stake. Elder Jay A. Quealy, Jr., president, says that the members of the stake send their love and greetings with these lovely flowers.

With all our hearts we express appreciation and thanks to the members of the Church in these far-off lands for these lovely flowers bearing their messages of loyalty, affection, and greeting. Our thoughts and best wishes will be with them as we enjoy the beauty of their flowers this October Conference. Flowers have an expression of countenance as much as men or animals. Some seem to smile. Some have a sad expression. Some are pensive and diffident. Others again are plain, honest and upright, like the broad-faced sunflower and the holly-hock. We express appreciation of the effort put forth by these far off branches, wards, and stakes joining hands with us here.

I shall read some telegrams just received. It just seems we are shaking hands with our members of the Church across the Atlantic on one side, and across the Pacific on the other. How glorious it would be this morning if nations could extend the same greeting to one another, and have in their hearts the same feeling of brotherhood and fraternity that we have for our friends and fellow members over the seas!

From South America we have the following cable: "Brethren, we are united with the Brazilian Saints and missionaries in sending our sustaining vote, our love and appreciation for your inspired leadership. Asael T. Sorensen, president."

From Brother ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, who is now touring the European missions, we have the following: "October 8, President David O. McKay: As Conference approaches we extend to all our love and best wishes. All well."

From Australia: "The Saints of the Australian Mission send you greetings and thanks as you meet in General Conference."

We have a telegram also from the mayor of Salt Lake City, expressing regret that due to an unexpected meeting he will not be able to attend the opening session. He planned on being in attendance, but found it impossible to do so. He extends to all his prayers and best wishes for a successful Conference, and hopes he will be able to be in attendance at the other sessions.

We have before us men who are not especially appointed, but who, out of good will and their best wishes for the success of the Conference, are here with us this morning. We are glad that Brother Benson, a member of the Council of the Twelve, is with us. Also here are Arthur V. Watkins, United States Senator; Wallace F. Bennett, United States Senator; William A. Dawson, Congressman; Henry Aldous Dixon, Congressman; George Dewey Clyde, our own Governor of the State; Lamont Toronto, Secretary of State; Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of the Brigham Young University; Dr. A. Ray Olpin, president of the University of Utah; E. Allen Bateman, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; M. Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of Salt Lake City Schools; Dr. William Miller, president of the Weber College; and perhaps others whom we have not been able to see from the rostrum. We welcome all—presidents of stakes, bishops of wards—to all we extend welcome and express satisfaction and pleasure in your presence and your cooperative spirit.

The music for this morning's session, as already announced, will be furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this session by the Relief Society Singing Mothers singing, "The Morning Breaks, The Shadows Flee." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Lee Benson Valentine, formerly president of the Argentine Mission.

Singing by the Relief Society Singing Mothers, "The Morning Breaks, The Shadows Flee."

Elder Lee Benson Valentine, former president of the Argentine Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was just offered by Elder Lee Benson Valentine, formerly president of the Argentine Mission. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now sing, "If Ye Love Me, Keep My Commandments." Music by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen, who will now lead the Chorus in singing.

The Singing Mothers Chorus sang the selection, "If Ye Love Me, Keep My Commandments."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this morning will be President Stephen L Richards of the First Presidency of the Church. He will be followed by Elder Antoine R. Ivins.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDSFirst Counselor in the First Presidency*

My dear brethren and sisters and friends: I join in the welcome and greeting extended to you by President McKay. I respond humbly to the assignment to speak to you in the opening of our conference with unusual anxiety in the thought that many may expect the usual inspirational opening address by the President. I counsel those who are disappointed to be patient, because they will be amply rewarded in a later session.

I am taking the liberty of addressing my remarks in large measure to our friends who compliment us by listening to the conference over radio and television. The message I have for them I give with frankness, hoping that they will not misconstrue my frankness for disrespect of them and their beliefs. Only by being outspoken can I hope to make any contribution.

Some time ago a member of my family sent to me a critical article written by Mr. Edmund Fuller in a publication called Saturday Review. The criticism of the writer is directed against the effort made to satisfy what the author designates as "general religious hunger," with books, articles, and public appearances of nationally advertised individuals, carrying on a propaganda for what is characterized as (these are quoted) "the good life," "peace of mind," "positive thinking," and "successful" or "confident living." What the author objects to most strenuously is not so much that propaganda should be issued for the optimism of "peace of mind" and "positive thinking," but that this psychological optimism should be held out in any form as an interpretation of or a substitute for the real Christian religion.

He expresses deep concern in the situation, not so much because such propagandists are taking from an uninformed and unthinking public millions of dollars from the sale of their books and services, but that the uninformed victims of the propaganda are losing something far more important than their money—an intelligent and true concept of religion and Christianity.

Mr. Fuller, the critic, asks, "Where, in all the morass of false witness, whether in quests for successful living or in saccharine sentimentality—where are the great, historic central themes, subjects, words of Christianity through the ages? Where are considerations of the Trinity, incarnation, covenant, atonement, redemption, salvation, sin, offering, judgment, worship, sacrament, sacrifice, communion, and the idea of the Holy?"

In general, I find myself in agreement with this criticism. I think, however, that Mr. Fuller himself is only partially informed with reference to the true Christian religion, and I think, too, that the trends which he analyzes and criticizes have come about and are in part tolerated by people of the world because of inadequate understanding of the vital concepts of true religion.

Not infrequently do we see and hear the statement published that what the world needs is to come to Christ, and that only Christ can save the world. We subscribe, of course, to these statements, but we question with ample justification the interpretation of the

First Day

Christ and his teachings which has been brought to the world these many years. I believe we are justified in ascribing many of these attempts to find substitute for the real Christian faith, and the failure of that faith to find true lodgment in the hearts of innumerable people, to this inadequate interpretation.

We criticize no honest soul in choosing his religion and living by it, but when the truth is available, we take the position that every individual, adequately to exercise his free agency and power of choice, should have and must have, wherever and whenever circumstances will permit, the truth about the Christian religion presented to him. We feel that he cannot be ultimately bound in the sight of God by the choice he makes unless he does have such opportunity. We agree with the critic, Mr. Fuller, that it is an intolerable imposition upon the unsuspecting and uninformed to offer to them what he calls "ersatz foods" to satisfy their religious hunger, but we go further. We believe it is likewise an imposition to foist upon the uninformed an incorrect and unwarranted interpretation of Christ and his gospel, and we believe that generation after generation over centuries of time have been held in darkness and denied the saving truths of the gospel because of such misinterpretations. Indeed, we ascribe the present condition of the world and the limited acceptance of the true Christian faith largely to ignorance of the true gospel.

How much of tolerance should be allowed for the mistakes in interpretation and practices of the past, as pertaining to the followers of Christ, we are not prepared to say. The Lord will judge, and his judgment will be righteous and merciful. We are constrained to deplore the results of these misinterpretations. The revelations predict the outcome which has literally come to pass. Isaiah foresaw both the conditions and results. You will recall this impressive and portentous statement:

"... Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men:

"Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: ..." (Isaiah 29:13-14.)

This great statement is corroborated by the Savior in Matthew 15:8-9, and by revelations and prophecies of modern times. In March of 1831, less than a year after the organization of the Church, the Prophet Joseph Smith received from the Lord a comforting and encouraging assurance confirmatory of the predictions which had been made centuries before, which reads as follows:

"And when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel." (D & C 45:28.)

That light, my brethren and sisters and friends, has come to the world. It is the light of revelation, and through revelation has come the true interpretation of the Christ, his mission, and his gospel. All men of all nations embraced within the family of the Eternal Father are entitled by his decree to receive the light and to receive an understanding of the true, revealed order of the kingdom of God. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, established under the direction of the Father and the Son, is the custodian of the revealed principles of the restored gospel and the authority to administer its ordinances under divine commission. I am aware that by many this will be regarded as an extreme and presumptuous statement. We make it only because we are constrained by the revelations so to do. I assure you it would be much easier to attempt to win a reputation for tolerance by modifying and ameliorating our position. If we did so, we and our message would be of little value to our brothers and sisters in the world, and we should be untrue to our commission.

Revelation is the foundation of our faith. We are not ashamed to declare that the Lord has spoken through his servants in modern times as he did in days of old. Why should men find so much difficulty in accepting revelation? I assume that it is because it seems to them unnatural that messages should come from the unseen world, but certainly it is no more unnatural in the present day than in the past, and few would deny the need of God's guidance in the world of today.

I think that the Apostle Paul was inspired to foresee the conditions of the world when he gave his famous definition of the gospel: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; . . ." (Romans 1:16.) He must have foreseen that men, lacking in faith, would be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, and particularly revelation, the seemingly unnatural process by which the Lord communicates with man.

Now, we assert that there is no true religion without revelation. Men may contrive all sorts of societies, associations, and establishments, but men of themselves cannot create the gospel of Christ and the kingdom of God. That is a divine function limited to divine power only.

I submit this conclusion in humility to my friends, hoping and praying that they may recognize the logic and truth of it, and muster sufficient faith to accept revelation as the basis for all true religion and the interpretation of the gospel. I assure all my friends who listen that this custody of the truth and divine commission is not a light assignment. It is heavy, weighted with a responsibility both institutional and personal, not exceeded, and I think not equaled, by responsibilities borne by any other people or cause. All of us within the restored Church of our Lord take this responsibility most seriously. The assumption of responsibility of membership in the Church often brings a radical change in living, behavior, and philosophy. The obligation felt by the membership to consecrate and dedicate themselves to the dissemination of what the revelations call "pure knowledge" among the inhabitants of the world becomes an obsession, not fanatical, but practical. In the concept of each member is the recognition of a debt—a debt to be paid not so much to the donor of the gift he has received, but a repayment in terms of conscious effort to give to others the light and truth which someone has brought to him.

Many people have asked: "What is the sustaining philosophy behind your marvelous missionary system?" Well, I have just stated it. It is the recognition of a noble obligation and purpose to extend the knowledge of truth, born out of gratitude for blessings received.

This condition creates zest and enthusiasm for missionary work, and what to many is a very strange feature of it, is that the enthusiasm is not evanescent. It does not die periodically and then have to be revived. It persists. And why? First, I think, because of the absolute unquestioning conviction in the cause. And secondly, because of the love of humanity engendered by the gospel, that all are in reality of the family of God, and that such parentage makes all men brothers.

I wish I had some way of making all friends who listen appreciate the depth of conviction that actuates the members of the Church in carrying forth its great work in the world. Perhaps it is a little indelicate to cite a personal experience in the effort to give my friends understanding on this point. I hope, however, you will tolerate the recital of my experience.

More than fifty years ago I began the practice of law with a deep love for the profession, and a long-cherished ambition to succeed. I went through what is commonly called the starvation period, and after thirteen years achieved some modest success, at least sufficient to encourage me and build up my hopes for the future.

One day while sitting in my office I received a telephone call. I was advised that the President of the Church wished to see me immediately. I went as requested to a meeting in the temple, where the President of the Church, his Counselors, and the Council of the Twelve Apostles were in attendance. I was told by the President of the Church that I had been selected to become a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, and then asked if I would accept this position. Obeying my concepts and convictions regarding the government of the Church, I accepted and was ordained to the position.

Friday, October 10

First Day

Within the space of twenty minutes the whole course of my life had been changed. My professional career and ambitions were abandoned, and for more than forty years I have devoted myself to the ministry under my call, although I had had no previous preparation, as the churches of the world give, for this undertaking.

I cite this circumstance merely as an example of everyday occurrence in the restored Church of Jesus Christ. Of course apostles are not called every day, but so-called laymen are being called every day to serve in positions of trust and honor. These calls in numerous cases involve substantial change in occupations and professions, and in some instances, as in the callings of mission presidents and missionaries, complete abandonment for a period of years of all gainful occupation, and a personal assumption of considerable responsibility to fulfil the assignment.

Now, my point is, and I think it ought to be clear to our friends, that men do not do these things without complete conversion and complete conviction as to the rightness of their course. I am aware that many may say that sincerity of belief is not proof of the truth, and I am not contending, as the old cliché has it, "that fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong." There are, however, at least two legitimate and justifiable deductions that our friends may make from the circumstances I have mentioned. First, that the unmistakable evidence of conviction in the rightness of their cause and conduct are exceptional in a day of materialistic living and purpose, not readily duplicated in other causes; and the second point of appeal held out to our brothers and sisters in the world is that the circumstances warrant investigation. That is all our missionaries the world over are advised to request of the people they visit—investigate, discover for yourself. Use your own Bibles. Diminish none of your love for God and Christ and your fellow men, but study and investigate the Christian religion with the light which the restored gospel has brought to it. Why should any true searcher for truth have objection to these two elements—a demonstrated sincerity and conviction on the part of the missionary, and an invitation to hear and investigate the message?

Now, I wish to extend my remarks to cover an additional aspect of this subject. I am of the definite opinion that the religious hunger of the people, as Mr. Fuller puts it, cannot be satisfied with the current interpretation of the Christ put forth by many professing Christianity. All proclaim him a great teacher. Most assert that he is Savior of mankind, and all invest him with the highest and noblest attributes. Altogether too many, however, worship at the shrine of his attributes, but deny the sovereignty of the King. In my humble opinion, what the world so urgently needs is a present realistic concept and recognition of the Christ as Lord of this earth, as Lawgiver and Judge. If he were recognized as the author and projector of all moral codes and righteousness, and if it were recognized that infraction of his law is sin, I am sure there would be less violation than we see today, and there would be far less tolerance for violation, which is today undermining the morality of nations. Christ will save the world when and only when men and women of the world put themselves in position to be saved. It is unthinkable that he can deviate from the inexorable laws of righteousness, which from the beginning to the end he has set for mankind. When men sin, there is no substitute for repentance to bring to them a restoration of blessings they have forfeited. So any interpretation of the Christ as Lord of the earth which would invest him with capricious and variable judgment founded on so-called grace and pity is harmful and not true. The true gospel is not a spiritual sedative. It is a challenge to the strength and will of mankind to enter into an everlasting covenant with injunctions and promises, the observance of which yields the reward of exaltation in the eternal presence. Christ is the author of mercy, but he himself said that he came to fulfil the law and not do away with it, and he declared that mercy shall not rob justice.

I am deeply concerned, too, with the tendency to invest the Lord our Savior with a mystical character. I am not sure that I know just what is contemplated by "mystical." He is not mystical to me, nor to the great body of his followers with which I have the honor to be associated. It is true that he does not move about among us in the form in which he once presented himself to humanity, but he is real. He was resurrected in the form in which he was crucified, and he lives in the heavens he has described. He will return as he has promised, and in the meantime he has left an organization which he established through his commissioned servants, in fulfillment of prophecy, to build his kingdom and prepare the way for his coming. I hope that they who profess to love and adore him will not make him less than he himself said that he was—the Son of the Father, on the right hand of God, Lord, Lawgiver, and Judge of all men in the earth, invested with powers and authorities everlasting.

So, it is the worship of our Lord so interpreted, it is the acceptance of his revealed and restored gospel, and that alone, which will adequately and perpetually satisfy the "hunger for religion," which I sincerely hope pervades the world today. Christ has been seen in modern times. There are creditable witnesses whose testimony has never been successfully refuted to two such appearances—first, when he appeared to the young prophet, Joseph Smith, in answer to prayer, accompanying his Father, the Eternal God. This heavenly vision, without argument, brought to the world an irrefutable and true concept of the Father and the Son. Then he appeared to this same prophet with an associate when he was more mature in a temple which had been erected to his name. This is the testimony of that appearance:

"And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

"For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God." (D & C 76:22-24.)

Every fiber of my being responds to that testimony. I am completely convinced that the men who bore the testimony told the truth. Every interpretative sense which I possess tells me without doubt or equivocation that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, lives as a resurrected eternal being, and that he is my Lord and my Savior, and the Lord of all men. I could wish for no greater happiness, peace, and satisfaction to come to all our friends than that they should enjoy the blessing, the incomparable blessing, of this knowledge and assurance.

May the world come to peace and happiness through the recognition of the true Christ, I ask humbly in his name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency of the Church has just spoken to us. Elder Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Gordon B. Hinckley.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren and sisters, I hope that the few words I attempt may be directed by the Spirit of God, and that perchance they may be helpful to us and give us courage in the efforts that we are making to carry forward the work of God.

I am happy to be here today and listen to these fine sisters sing as they did Wednesday when I attended the meetings of the Relief Society, where I always gain a wonderful respect for the women of the Church, and the effort they are putting forth to further the work of God.

I want to bear my testimony to the truth of all that we have listened to this morning from President Richards. As I look forward and see this great number of men, many of whose faces are not familiar to me but many of them are, and when I try to figure in my mind the responsibility that rests upon them individually and collectively as the bearers of the priesthood, I wonder how I could make that plain, what words it would take to impress upon us all the dignity and responsibility of the Melchizedek Priesthood.

Friday, October 10

I presume that all of us who are here today believe the things that President Richards has told us, that we believe that Jesus Christ is actually the Son of God. He told Peter that upon that testimony that he is, he would build his Church. I hope we have, as I have said more than once from this pulpit, the testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, for as long as we do, and live true to it, no danger will ever befall the Church.

I believe in the verity of the story of the Prophet Joseph Smith, that Christ appeared to him and gave him a commission, and that true to that commission he was finally authorized and empowered to reorganize the Church of Jesus Christ; that through the revelations which have come to us through him we have a true conception of the purpose of life and of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I believe, moreover, that the priesthood was restored through the Prophet Joseph Smith and that it has come down to us in an unbroken line, authoritative, and that only through the operation of that priesthood can the ordinances which are designed for the exaltation of men and women be performed in their behalf.

Now, this being true, this being the testimony of all who are here today, as I presume it is, then we have a real responsibility, and I stand before you today representing a group of men in the priesthood whose major purpose it is to bear that testimony to the world—the seventies of the Church. It happens, however, that in carrying that message to the world, we avail ourselves of men who have not yet been ordained seventies and of sisters in the Church, and also we use men who have perhaps been through the order of the seventy and become high priests, or at any rate who are high priests. So we have a large force of men whom we use to spread this knowledge of the gospel to the peoples of the world. The largest part of these male missionaries is made up of the elders of the Church and many of them of rather limited experience.

It is the duty of the older members, the fathers, uncles, grandfathers, cousins, and so forth, who have this testimony in their hearts, to establish it in the hearts of these growing young men, so that at such time as they may come to us and offer their services that they may have a living testimony that Christ is the Son of God, that the Church was authoritatively organized, that the priesthood is in the earth, all of which is essential to the exaltation of men.

If every elder who goes into the mission field could go with that testimony, he would be a power of strength and vigor, and his example would be above reproach as he labors among the people of the world.

Now, who is going to impress these young people with this and how are we going to do it? We all have that responsibility whether we be fathers of these young men, or relatives, or just friends and acquaintances, or even strangers; when occasion may permit, we have the responsibility of striving to instill in their hearts a firm and living testimony of the truth of these things.

It happens, occasionally, that young men go out who cannot say they know it. Sister Ivins and I were on a train one time with a group going into the Central Atlantic States Mission. A very outstanding young man was in that party. In the testimony meeting that we held in Roanoke the night of our arrival, he said, "I cannot tell you definitely that I know the gospel is true." But he believed it, and he sought that testimony. I think it was about ten days or two weeks later, that we met him again in a testimony meeting. Then with all the fervor that one could ask for, he bore testimony to the truth of the gospel.

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine. . . ." (John 7:17) the Savior said; and this elder had found it out. Perhaps it would have been a bit better had he had that testimony in his heart as he accepted his call for missionary service.

It has been a long time since I first sat on the missionary committee with President McKay, who was a Counselor then to President Grant, and after him with President Richards. We have seen many, many men come to us for interview and go into the mission field. It is my testimony that most of them, brethren and sisters, are worthy of the call that is given them. Occasionally, however, we have problems with some of them, and the problems frequently arise because, either they have not been properly taught or, having been taught, they have been a bit adverse and felt that they were being circumscribed in their liberties.

We must not let them feel that way, brethren and sisters. We must build in them a love for the Church and the gospel of Jesus Christ, and we must present to them an attitude not of criticism of the operation of the Church, but of approval, the testimony that there is actually today among the leaders of the Church inspiration.

I have lived in this Church a long time, and since I was eight years old I have been a baptized member of the Church, and I have seen some of its practices change. I cannot remember ever hearing of a change of the doctrine of the Church, but it has been possible to change some things. I remember when the Mutual Improvement Association came to St. George in its, shall I say, primeval condition, and I have watched it change its policies and practices, always for the better.

There are some people who feel that there never ought to be a change of that kind in the Church, but it happens.

I bear testimony, too, that those changes in my opinion have been inspired. But there are some of us who feel that we cannot accept those things. We have no right, brethren and sisters, to teach our young, growing people that it should not have been done.

I remember meeting a boy years ago

out in Shreveport, who came from a family that was divided in that respect, a mother that was firm in her faith, a father that had an idea that certain things should not have been changed, and I found that boy following the line of thinking which his father had instilled in his heart. Repeated promises on his part to refrain from worrying his companions with those teachings failed.

Now, brethren and sisters, these are serious conditions, and who is responsible for them when they exist in the hearts of boys and girls? Somebody, and usually somebody who holds the Melchizedek Priesthood, is responsible for it, brethren and sisters. We have that great obligation to build faith in the leadership of the Church, faith in the revelations of God to guide this Church, and when we fail to do it, perhaps there will come a time when we may answer for our failure.

I think that is one of our greatest responsibilities, today, brethren and sisters—to live the gospel of Jesus Christ in our homes, in our families, in our ministry among the people, in our business relationships, so that growing men and women can see the results that may come from an inspired testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, that the gospel has been restored, that as has been said this morning, the Church is the custodian of the priesthood and that we have the responsibility of carrying this message to the world.

We are happy, brethren and sisters, in the contributions you are making of the services of your sons and daughters. They are coming to us in great numbers and most of them are eminently worthy. When they come to me, I hope you will have taught them that they must not be afraid to tell the truth as some of them say they are. We have nothing but good will toward those young people. Our sole and only purpose is to help them to see as they should see, to live as they should live, and to serve as they should serve; and may God bless us all with the power to so impress these young people with the truth of these grand and glorious teachings, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

First Day

President David O. McKay:

Elder Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. We shall now hear from Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER GORDON B. HINCKLEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

President McKay, President Richards, President Clark, my dear brethren and sisters:

I seek inspiration of the Lord at this time.

During the past six months Sister Hinckley and I have had the opportunity of participating in the dedication of the New Zealand and London temples. If I may, I should like to make some observations out of the experiences of those occasions and comment with appreciation on five great qualities or aspects that I have noted in this, our Father's work: (1) its breadth; (2) its depth; (3) the devotion of its advocates; (4) the effect of their teaching; (5) the strength of its leadership.

I am grateful, my brethren and sisters, for the breadth of this kingdom. My testimony of the Prophet Joseph Smith has been strengthened by the manner in which this work has spread over the earth. I think of the statement made by Moroni in 1823 to an unknown farm boy in western New York that his "name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues." (Joseph Smith 2:33.) I think of the word of the Lord to the Prophet in the loneliness of Liberty Jail: "The ends of the earth shall inquire after thy name, and fools shall have thee in derision, and hell shall rage against thee;

"While the pure in heart, and the wise, and the noble, and the virtuous, shall seek counsel, and authority, and blessings constantly from under thy hand." (D & C 122:1-2.)

My brethren and sisters, I have witnessed the fulfillment of these marvelous promises. In the temples in Europe I have seen the people of Finland, Sweden, and Norway, of Denmark, Belgium, and Holland, of Germany, Austria, France, and England and even from South Africa—pure in heart, noble, virtuous men and women of those lands seeking blessings under the authority which came through the Prophet Joseph Smith. In New Zealand I have seen the people of that land, of Australia, Tasmania, Samoa, Tonga, Raratonga, Fiji, and Tahiti, with the smile of truth upon their faces as they sought blessings in the house of the Lord, each in his own tongue testifying of this great latter-day work.

I marvel at, and am grateful, for the breadth of the kingdom, its spread over the world, and I know that the end is not yet—that this stone which was cut out of the mountain without hands, as the prophet foretold, shall roll forth and fill the earth, touching the hearts and lives of the virtuous and the wise and the pure in heart, wherever it is taught—for it is the kingdom of our God.

Secondly, as I am grateful for the breadth of the kingdom, I am likewise grateful for the depth of its teaching. To spread laterally is one thing. To grow in "the third dimension of religion," as one writer put it, is another.

I think we witnessed in these temples that third dimension. I shall never forget the testimony of a young man who had come from Perth on the west coast of Australia. He and his wife and children had traveled across Australia, a distance approximately as great as from San Francisco to New York, and then across the Tasman Sea to New Zealand. He said they had had to sell their furniture, their car, their dishes, and many other of their prized possessions, but, he said, as he looked at his wife and their lovely children, he knew these were more precious than car, furniture, or china. By hard work and careful saving he could replace his worldly goods, but he could never afford to lose those he loved.

And so they had come, with a sustaining conviction in their hearts that life, love, and family may all be eternal under the plan of the Lord. And as they kneeled about the altar of the temple and were bound together under the authority of the Holy Priesthood in an imperishable relationship, one glimpsed the great, eternal purposes of God—the everlasting verities that transcend in beauty and satisfaction the thin values by which most men gauge their lives.

Inherent in the events of that day in the temple—in the instruction given in the endowment, in the covenants made, in the ordinances performed—were answers to the great eternal questions of where we come from, why we are here, and where we are going—of the purpose of life under the plan of our Creator. These are the things which give depth and meaning, a third dimension to our faith, for which I feel deeply grateful this day.

Thirdly, our experiences of the past six months have given me a new appreciation for the devotion of the advocates of this cause, our missionaries. I have come to a renewed sense of gratitude for the sacrifices of those who laid the foundations of this great work.

While in England I spent a few hours in Preston, my first field of labor as a missionary twenty-five years ago. It was in this city that missionaries first preached the gospel in Europe in 1837. As we moved along those old cobbled streets and flagstone walks, I thought of those seven men of 121 years ago—strangers in a strange land, walking in poverty, but with a great conviction and a great enthusiasm.

We stood beside Vauxhall Chapel where they first spoke, beside the River Ribble where they first baptized, on the site of the old Cockpit where they bore testimony. In spite of bitter opposition, in spite of mobbings, arrests, and every manner of persecution, they went forward, garnering souls in a harvest that will go on forever as the posterity of their converts increase in number.

And as they sacrificed and labored, so labor their successors. We met more than five hundred missionaries of Europe. One cannot witness these young men and women at work without marveling at their devotion. One cannot see the maturity that has come into their lives without recognizing the inspiration of this great program. One cannot hear their testimonies without sensing the tremendous power of truth. The Lord bless them for their wonderful devotion and for their wonderful faith. You can be proud of them.

Fourthly, I am grateful for the effect of their teachings. The Lord has declared: “. . . this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.” (Moses 1:39.) You need not wait for the life beyond to see the accomplishment of that purpose. You may witness that process every day in the mission field. The revelation declares that “That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day.” (D & C 50:24.)

That sublime principle of growth was evident in the lives of those who came to these temples. Whether they were brown-skinned Maoris, Samoans, or Tongans, or fair-skinned Europeans, they seemed to have a quality indefinable and wonderful. Perhaps it was a certain kind of cleanliness—no more cigarets, no more liquor, no more tea. Perhaps it was the company they kept—the kind of company one ought to find in the Church. Perhaps it was their knowledge of the gospel, their assurance concerning the purpose of life. In any event, it was there, and it was inspiring.

I am grateful for the power of the gospel in the hearts and lives of men and women, and I never saw that power more evident than when the Saints came to the house of the Lord.

Finally, there came out of these experiences an increased gratitude for our leader and for a conviction of his divine appointment.

A short time ago while doing some research in the missionary records of the Church, I came across the appraisal made by Elder David O. McKay's mission president when he completed his first mission in the British Isles. That appraisal reads as follows:

“As a speaker: Good.

“As a writer: Good.

“As a presiding officer: Very good.

“Has he a good knowledge of the gospel? Yes.

“Has he been energetic? Very.

Friday, October 10

First Day

"Is he discreet and does he carry a good influence? Yes sir!

"Remarks: None better in the mission."

That was written in 1899.

As I read that I thought of another David, the son of Jesse, who was ordained to become the leader of Israel. And I thought of the solid consistency of President McKay's life, from the time he first labored in the British Isles as a young man, through the sixty years that passed prior to his return to dedicate the House of the Lord in this same land.

The affection in which he is held, his unfailing kindness and consideration, his ease in meeting every situation, the fruits of his ministry, all attest to his prophetic calling.

On his arrival at the New Zealand Temple he was given a great welcoming festival. As he walked through the crowd, elderly men and women, who first had met him in the islands in 1921, wept at the return of their apostle-prophet.

In London we watched him face with ease a battery of newspaper and television men and bear testimony to them. In both temples we heard him give counsel that was inspiring and offer prayers of dedication that were solemn and beautiful and moving.

In eleven languages today the worthy of the Church are enjoying the blessings of the temple because of the inspiration that has come through him. No one witnessing the joy of those who have received these blessings, could doubt the inspiration of his leadership.

I recall a little widow in New Zealand, the mother of seventeen children. Her husband was gone. A number of her children were gone. As she knelt about the altar with the beautiful children who were left to her and received the assurance that all that she had lost would also be hers, she wept. And all who were with her on that sacred occasion in that dedicated room, wept also.

As I have witnessed these and many more inspiring situations during the past six months in these widely scattered lands, I have felt to sing with that convert from the steel mills of Sheffield: "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet, to guide us in these latter days."

The other day I talked with a misguided young man who has become bitter. After he told his story, I said to him: "If you had seen what I have seen, if you had experienced what I have experienced, you would not feel as you now do."

I bear you witness that God's kingdom is here, that it is growing in breadth and depth, and in power in the lives of the people, and that those whom he has placed to lead it are his chosen and ordained servants. I so testify in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Last June while we were touring one of the missions of the Church in the eastern part of the United States, we stopped one morning about 8 o'clock to get breakfast at a café. This café was located just a half block from a junior high school. As we were sitting there eating our breakfast, about a dozen of these junior high school students came into the café and played some records and lounged about for a few minutes waiting for school to start. They were on their way to school. I noticed that every one of these boys and girls, who seemed to be about fourteen years of age, smoked cigarets. I was struck even more by the manner in which they smoked than by the fact that they were smoking; such a bravado type of spirit—a show-off—giving everybody the impression, apparently, that now they were grown up; now that they could smoke cigarets they had “arrived.”

That night before going to bed I picked up a magazine in the hotel, and on the back page of the magazine was a full page advertisement. It showed a husky looking man, apparently in the bloom of health, smoking a cigaret. The caption across the ad said: “Where there’s a man there’s a ..... cigaret.” I do not give the name.

As I read that ad my mind flashed back immediately to those boys and girls in the café. I wondered if they had read that ad. I wondered if they thought that “Where there’s a man there’s a cigaret.” I wondered if they got the idea that cigarets make the man, that cigarets make the woman. Then I began to ask myself whether these boys and girls would suppose that they would be lacking in manhood or womanhood if they did not smoke?

Young people, do you believe that you would lack in manhood or womanhood if you did not smoke? Would you believe, for instance, that President Eisenhower is any less a man because on doctor’s orders he quit smoking? Would any of you believe that President Harry S Truman was any less a man because he refused to smoke? Would any of you believe that Franklin Delano Roosevelt was any less a man because he responded to the advice of his doctors with respect to smoking, and then even later tried to persuade his biographer, Harry Hopkins, to do likewise?

Would any of you believe that Carl Sandburg, the Lincoln biographer, is any less a man because he will not smoke? Would you believe it of Governor Harriman of New York, or Bernard Gimbel, the head of the great Gimbel Department Store in New York City?

Would you believe that Lyndon B. Johnson, majority leader of the United States Senate, is any less a man because he will not smoke? Do you believe that J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the FBI, is any less a man because he neither smokes nor drinks? Or a man like Charles Boyer of the movies, or TV personalities such as Victor Borgé and Pat Boone? Do you believe the kind of advertising that is put out by the tobacco people?

The United States Congress made an investigation of cigaret advertising, and after their investigation they published a report known as “False and Misleading Advertising,” having to do with filter-tip cigarets. It was published by a committee on Government Operations of the House of Representatives of the United States Congress on February 20, 1958. It was published by the United States government in the Government Printing House and paid for by government money. I would like to read just an excerpt or two from it. The Hon. Robert T. Secrest, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, was one of the men who gave testimony in connection with this investigation, and among other things he said that the Surgeon General’s recent statement that “excessive cigaret smoking is one of the causative factors in lung cancer” calls for a “new approach” by the commission in its regulation of cigaret advertising. Then the report goes on to say this:

“The cigaret industry has done a grave disservice to the smoking public, initially, blatantly, and more recently, very subtly, publicizing the filter-tip smoke as a health protection. . . .

“Despite repeated private and even public invitations to appear before the subcommittee, the tobacco industry refused all such invitations. In one instance the invitation was accepted only to be declined later because of a ‘previous engagement,’ when it was learned no other tobacco-company official would appear.

“During a period fraught with public concern over grave health implications of cigaret smoking, business responsibility and even decency would apparently dictate that the American public is entitled to an accounting from the cigaret manufacturers. It is indeed most reprehensible that the tobacco industry should so shirk its vast responsibilities to the consumer and apparently conspire to boycott the hearings of a congressional committee."

I am sure your congressman would send you a copy of this if you were interested in it. It is Union Calendar No. 539, House Report No. 1372.

Young people, in the face of things like that, do you believe cigaret advertising? Do you believe that cigarets make the man, or that cigarets make the woman? What makes a man? What makes a woman? Is it the cigaret or the cocktail, or is it the clean life, the development of good character, faith in God, and keeping his commandments?

Young people, be honest with yourselves. Answer these questions. Believe in God. Serve him. Uphold the program of the Church, and you will live wonderful, happy lives. That you may do this is my earnest prayer, in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Delbert L. Stapley of this Council will be our last speaker this morning.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brothers and sisters, I am indeed grateful for the splendid spirit of this conference session this morning. I hope what I have to say will not detract from the spirit of the messages given. I would like to touch upon a few things connected with the New Zealand Temple dedication mentioned by Brother Hinckley.

Since the last general conference of the Church Sister Stapley and I have enjoyed the great privilege and blessing of accompanying our beloved President David O. McKay, Sister McKay, Elder and Sister Marion G. Romney and others to New Zealand for the dedication of the new temple in that faraway land. Brother Gordon Hinckley and his wife had preceded us there to finalize the preparation for the dedication and opening of the temple for ordinance work. He mentioned the welcome and reception accorded the official Church party by the Polynesian Saints. It was a tremendous tribute and demonstration of love and affection for all of us, but more particularly for their beloved President and Prophet, "Tumuaki" David O. McKay.

It was a glorious spectacle, so different, colorful and unique that the sweet memory of the occasion will remain forever. Each Polynesian group, in native costume, entertained with pageantry, song, and dance for the space of three and a half hours. I believe it is the only time in the history of the world that four such widely scattered Polynesian peoples have been brought together where each featured its individual native entertainment to welcome an official party. Such an assembly of mixed talent may never happen again, for it isn't likely that another similar event of such importance will occur to bring them together.

The majority of the Saints of the South Pacific attending the temple dedication activities did so, as Brother Hinckley has indicated, at great personal sacrifice. Ever since the building of a temple was announced they have been saving in earnest for that important and historic dedication day. To them it was the spiritual opportunity of their lives, the fulfillment of their prayers and dreams. It would be difficult for the people of the world, not knowing the sacred value and eternal nature of temple ordinances, to understand why people possess such strong religious beliefs and faith that would cause them not only to save money, but also to sell their cars, mortgage furniture and other chattels to raise sufficient funds to visit a temple. To those who do understand, no sacrifice is too great to achieve the greatest blessings of their lives—the holy temple endowment with the ordinances and sealings that bind husband and wife and families together in an eternal family relationship and companionship.

In visiting with this mixed group of Saints the evidences of a living and motivating faith were found on every hand. Tears of happiness flowed freely down the cheeks of these faithful and worthy people as the significance of these eventful days unfolded more clearly to their understanding. Each session of the dedication was a glorious spiritual experience. To watch the faces of the Saints was a reflection of the joy and happiness they felt.

The simple and trusting faith of the Polynesian Saints was reflected in the answer of Brother Lafi Toilupi to President McKay's query, "Can you do it?" when he asked Brother Toilupi if he could translate the dedicatory prayer from English into the Samoan tongue. Brother Toilupi replied sincerely and humbly, "I can do it if you will bless me." President McKay answered, "I do bless you," and the translation was accomplished perfectly regardless of the fact the limited Samoan language does not have equivalent words corresponding in meaning to the English.

The New Zealand Temple, situated on a prominence overlooking the valley, with its remarkable floodlighting effects, stands out majestically at night with a brilliance of lighting intensity which can be seen for miles around, and truly represents "a candle of the Lord" to reveal light and truth in the midst of error and spiritual darkness. The favorable publicity of all happenings there, revealing the purpose of temples, Church beliefs, principles, and practices, gave to the people of New Zealand and Australia new knowledge and gospel light which has stimulated a tremendous spiritual upsurge to the work of the Church.

My soul is full of gratitude for the restored gospel of Christ and the blessed power it has to enrich the lives of people. I bear humble testimony, my brothers and sisters, that the gospel taught by the Latter-day Saints is the true gospel of God's kingdom which the Savior testified "shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:14.)

The missionary system of the Church was established by revelation of the Lord to fulfil this latter-day obligation. He declared to the Prophet Joseph Smith:

"And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

"And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

"Behold, this is mine authority and the authority of my servants, . . . O inhabitants of the earth." (D & C 1:4-6.)

During the spring and summer Sister Stapley and I visited three Church missions: the two in Australia, and the Northwestern States Mission. I personally interviewed over 350 young missionaries. I pay sincere and humble tribute to them for their faithful devotion to a great cause. I know many families make tremendous financial sacrifices to support their missionary sons and daughters while away from home in the service of the ministry. The compensations, however, for faithful and devoted service are rich and rewarding. Faith is increased; testimonies are strengthened; principles of righteousness and truth are acquired which build into the missionary fundamental moral and spiritual values which upgrade his character attainments for successful and happy living. With few exceptions, the more than 5000 missionaries now serving represent the Church honorably and effectively, and are a great credit to it. Thousands of converts each year result from their devoted service.

Recently a mission president reporting his mission made this significant statement: "If the Church were not true, the 5000 missionaries representing it would have proved it long ago." I have often thought how true that statement is. Actuated as they are by the same spirit, the Holy Ghost, and officiating by the authority of the true priesthood of God, it is not too difficult to understand the truth of the mission president's statement.

The tempo of the proselyting program has stepped up in Australia, and with

Friday, October 10

First Day

nineteen new lovely buildings to meet and worship in and to carry forward the full Church program, prospects for increased conversions are constantly improving. The chapel-building program alone has set forward the work of the Church many years. From the beginning of construction of a beautiful and serviceable chapel in one small branch to the time of dedication, thirty-three converts were baptized and twenty-five passive members reactivated who are now in full fellowship.

In two widely separated towns of the Australian Mission where lovely buildings are completed and in service, the mayors attended the appointed meetings to bid us welcome. One, acquainted with the Word of Wisdom, told how he had been prevailed upon to give up the habit of tobacco and of the personal satisfaction he experienced in doing so. He complimented the Church and its people for building such a lovely edifice in which to worship and to foster cultural activities for the wholesome and broad enrichment of their lives. He also pledged to them the full support of his office and the town council he represented. It was a beautiful tribute and a marvelous pledge of co-operation. The second mayor also gave like praise and commendation and declared that the Church building was most attractive and inviting, which added spiritual strength and prestige to their progressive city. He expressed the hope that the work of the Church would prosper there, and wished the people every success in their religious program. He promised, in conclusion, to return again. He made a profound observation by saying that to many people churches were like elevators—they could just get on at any time and be taken to heaven without the good life and good works to their credit. He firmly believed faith and works go together.

At the dedication of the New Zealand Church College, the Prime Minister of New Zealand gave an interesting and challenging talk most favorable to the Church and its program to serve and bless people. He took exception to the organized unfriendly group opposing the Church efforts there, who questioned our right to Christian status, and who also were guilty of maligning the integrity of the Church leaders in Zion. He called attention to a few of our brethren who were or are now in high United States government positions, whom he was privileged to know personally. Some had befriended and supported him, which permitted the Prime Minister to become acquainted with their qualities of goodness and sound political integrity and leadership. He made particular reference to Elder Ezra Taft Benson, with praise for his integrity and excellent government service. He indicated favorableness to religious education in the schools of New Zealand, and praised the character and teachings of Jesus which he encouraged all to accept and follow.

Such recognition and unsolicited favorable contributions from outstanding leaders not of our faith are helpful to the work. Their comments call attention to a letter I received from a non-member friend of mine while we were yet in New Zealand, who closed by saying, "May the propagation of the Latter-day Saint faith ever spread over the world." Such is the encouragement of those who know us best.

The faraway converts of New Zealand and Australia—and I listened to many—teach and preach the same truths, principles, and gospel ordinances as orthodox as we do here. Their testimonies are fervent, spiritual, and convincing. To associate with and listen to them, one would think and feel as if he were in the congregations of the Saints at home. Truly, all who belong to this Church and yield obedience to its teachings are actuated by the same spirit, the Holy Ghost, whose function it is to guide into all truth, to bear witness of the Father and the Son, and to keep the Saints of God united wherever they are. What a blessing it is to be guided by a power which prevents misunderstandings and divisions among the true followers of Christ.

I would like to share with you briefly three choice experiences resulting from these mission tours. A good woman, called upon by the missionaries while tracting in her neighborhood, advised them that her niece had joined the Church eight months previously. "Your Church has done so much for her," she said, and then asked, "Can you do the same for me?"

A woman investigator, after a few home visits from the missionaries, said to her husband, "The elders take something with them when they leave our home; when they return that something is here." They both recognized that "something" present when attending Church services held by the elders. "What is it?" this good woman asked. The answer came to her and she exclaimed, "The priesthood of God," to which her husband agreed.

A faithful sister, eighty-nine years of age but young in spirit, related to me this testimony and experience. As a young woman, her father informed her a new scripture was to come, and the Church presenting it would be true. She was greatly impressed by this statement and remembered it. Her father passed away, and time moved on, but still the new scripture had not come to her attention. Some years later two missionaries knocked at her door. When she received them they introduced to her the Book of Mormon which they advised was a new scripture revealed by God. She immediately recalled the words of her father. She had her witness. She said to me, "I didn't need the elders to teach me the gospel. I knew they represented the true Church." She was quickly converted and baptized by them. For over fifty years this good sister has remained a faithful and devoted member. Her home has been, and is now, a rallying point for missionary work. The evening we spent with her was enriched by her testimony and charm of character.

How wonderful it is, my brothers and sisters, that the true gospel of our Lord can be understood by the simple, yet is so profound it can challenge the most learned thinker with its depths of knowledge and wisdom. The gospel has the power to bring people together in love and understanding and give purpose and wise direction to life. Our message to the world is one of faith in God and his beloved Son, Jesus Christ, our Savior and Redeemer. It is a message of brotherhood, hope, peace, and salvation, and is therefore of great importance and value to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. We possess the truth, the fulness of the gospel of Christ with all its glorious principles, high moral standards of conduct, ideals of noble character, and all saving ordinances for the joy and eternal happiness of mankind.

We cordially invite all people to investigate the restored Church of Christ, and accept its teachings and way of life as revealed for their salvation and glory. President Richards made an excellent appeal in his opening address here this morning. I testify, my brothers and sisters, that God has established his work for the last time among the children of men, and preparations are now going forward for the second coming of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

God help us, my brothers and sisters, to be true to our obligations as members of his kingdom. I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Friday, October 10. President David O. McKay presided and conducted the meeting.

The musical numbers for this session were furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers of the three Southern California regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting. Roy M. Darley, Assistant Tabernacle Organist, was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

The following wire has been received from President Casper W. Merrill of the West Central States Mission at Billings, Montana: "Conference coming in good over KOOK-TV. Missionaries are in homes of investigators receiving the message. President Richards' opening address a great asset to our work. We all join in sending our love."

We are favored this afternoon by the presence of the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, and Roy M. Darley at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Relief Society Singing Mothers rendering, "How Gentle God's Commands."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder LeRoy H. Duncan, formerly president of the South African Mission.

President LeRoy H. Duncan, formerly president of the South African Mission, has just offered the invocation. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "The Voice In The Wilderness," conducted by Sister Madsen, following which President Joseph Fielding Smith will speak to us.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

This morning we listened to a wonderful discourse addressed to friends and businessmen, prominent individuals outside of the Church, which I think was most timely, but I wish to address my remarks to the members of the Church, and more especially to those who are wayward and indifferent, and who do not seem to realize the value of their membership. I would like to read to you a covenant which is taken by each individual who enters the waters of baptism.

"And again, by way of commandment to the church concerning the manner of baptism—All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church." (D & C 20:37.)

Now, baptism into the Church is not enough to save us. It is for the remission of sins, that is true, but there is another baptism which is just as essential, and that is the baptism of the spirit, or the bestowal of the gift of the Holy Ghost. After we are baptized, we are confirmed. What is that confirmation for? To make us companions with the Holy Ghost; to have the privilege of the guidance of the third member of the Godhead—companionship, that our minds might be enlightened, that we might be quickened by the Holy Spirit to seek for knowledge and understanding concerning all that pertains to our exaltation in the kingdom of God.

Now in this same revelation from which I read, the Lord has also said: "And we know that justification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true;

"And we know also, that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their mights, minds, and strength.

"But there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living God;

"Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptation;

"Yea, and even let those who are sanctified take heed also." (Ibid., 20:30-34.)

Baptism and confirmation into the Church do not necessarily insure our exaltation in the kingdom of God. They do, provided we are true and faithful to every covenant and obligation required of us in the commandments of our Eternal Father. It is he who endures to the end that will be saved, and there is a danger that confronts us through the temptations of the adversary if we yield to those temptations that we may lose it all. The greatest punishment that can come to any individual in this world is punishment that will come to those who have received the light and truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ, who have passed through the waters of baptism, who have hands laid upon their heads for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then turn away from the truth, for the Lord will not hold them guiltless.

I think I am safe in saying that no man can become a Son of Perdition until he has known the light. Those who have never received the light are not to become Sons of Perdition. They will be punished if they rebel against God. They will have to pay the price of their sinning, but it is only those who have the light through the priesthood and through the power of God and through their membership in the Church who will be banished forever from his influence into outer darkness to dwell with the devil and his angels. That is a punishment that will not come to those who have never known the truth. Bad as they may suffer, and awful as their punishment may be, they are not among that group which is to suffer the eternal death and banishment from all influence concerning the power of God.

Now, I say I want to talk to those who are indifferent and a little wayward sometimes, those who do not appreciate the privileges and the opportunities that are given unto them to serve God and keep his commandments. If they are not here, I hope they are listening to what is going on in this building today. They do not come to the conferences—at least, not very many of them. But after receiving the light and the knowledge and the information which the Spirit of the Lord can give, it is an awful thing to turn away.

However, it is my judgment that there are many members of this Church who have been baptized for the remission of their sins, who have had hands laid upon their heads for the gift of the Holy Ghost, who have never received that gift, that is, the manifestations of it. Why? Because they have never put themselves in order to receive these manifestations. They have never humbled themselves. They have never taken the steps that would prepare them for the companionship of the Holy Ghost. Therefore they go through life without that knowledge, and they have not the understanding. Therefore when those cunning and crafty in their deceit come to them, they disturb them in their faith, if they have faith left. They criticize the Authorities of the Church.

Friday, October 10

First Day

They criticize the doctrines of the Church, and these weak members do not have understanding enough, information enough, and enough of the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord to resist the false doctrines and teachings of those who come to them, the wolves in sheep's clothing, and they listen to them, and think that perhaps after all they have made a mistake, and first thing you know they find their way out of the Church, because they do not have understanding.

I get letters frequently from people, members of this Church, who have been disturbed principally by two organizations which seem to have dedicated their lives to the destruction of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. These people go into the homes of our weak members, disturb them in their faith, get them all riled up, and they do not know whether they did the right thing when they were baptized or whether they did not; but if they had lived as they should and had received the guidance of the Holy Spirit, they would not be moved. They would not be influenced by the false teachings and false statements regarding our doctrines that these people present to them.

The gospel is simple. There is nothing difficult about it. There are mysteries, no doubt. We do not need to bother about the mysteries, but the simple things pertaining to our salvation and exaltation we can understand.

Now let me refer to another passage of scripture.

"But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils." (Ibid., 46:7.)

So the Lord has given us a warning. "Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given;

"For verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do; that all may be benefited that seek or that ask of me, that ask and not for a sign that they may consume it upon their lusts.

"And again, verily I say unto you, I would that ye should always remember, and always retain in your minds what those gifts are, that are given unto the church." (Ibid., 46:8-10.)

Now the Lord would give us gifts. He will quicken our minds. He will give us knowledge that will clear up all difficulties, and put us in harmony with the commandments that he has given us, and with a knowledge that will be so deeply rooted in our souls that the knowledge can never be rooted out, if we will just seek for the light and the truth and the understanding which is promised to us, and which we can receive if we will only be true and faithful to every covenant and obligation pertaining to the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Lord bless you in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve. We will now hear from Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church. He will be followed by Elder Alma Sonne.

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITH

Patriarch to the Church

I pray that the spirit of the Lord will be with me, and that I may have his inspiration as has been given to others in this conference.

I noticed in an article on the editorial page of the News last evening, calling our attention to the troubled world we are in. Have you had any problems? Have you had any difficulties? Have you had any trials? Have you ever been discouraged? Have you had any heartaches? Have you ever felt that missionary system could not operate as it does today. Without his blessings temples could not be erected at home and abroad as at present. And without his blessings we could not sustain upwards of five thousand missionaries in the field to proclaim the gospel truths. Neither could we build the churches and support the schools and places of education which have been developed in our midst.

I feel sure, as I stand here, that God's work will not diminish in the earth. Eventually every knee will bow and every tongue will confess that Jesus is the Christ. The adversary, powerful as he is in the world today, will be defeated in his plans and in his purposes. The end of evil, so rampant in the world, will come when the gospel of the kingdom has been preached as a witness in all the world and when the power of Satan is broken.

The Church stands for the principles of eternal truth proclaimed by Jesus Christ and the holy prophets. The appointed mission of the Church is to preach the gospel and to administer the ordinances thereof. The work is going forward today, at home and abroad, and we have reason, you and I, to rejoice at its success; and so I say, again, God's work will not diminish in the world or in the Church, it will continue its onward course. It has survived attacks from without and crises and threats from within, but it has never weakened. It is full of vitality and power.

The large gathering of Latter-day Saints here and in other places, the recent expansion and the enlarged projects now under way, are evidences of virility and strength. The work being done is destined to conquer and to touch the human heart and even where Christian sentiments are still slumbering.

I was interested this morning when Elder Hinckley read from Section 122 of the Doctrine and Covenants. They were words of reassurance to the Prophet Joseph Smith. They came at a moment when he needed to be reassured, when he was being maligned, betrayed, and imprisoned. They were given to him in Liberty Jail where he received words of comfort and strength from his Heavenly Father. Few men have discharged their responsibility with greater confidence and a firmer trust in God than did Joseph Smith. I marvel as I contemplate the soundness of his program and the durability of his teachings.

I recall the words of the Savior about John the Baptist. He said:

"What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?"

"... A man clothed in soft raiment?" (Matt. 11:7-8.) They went out to see a man who had been true to his calling, a spiritual giant, a great prophet.

You may rest assured that no worldly allurements could swerve him from his sacred calling. When you find a man who discharges his obligations to God, first and foremost, you will find a strong man, an unconquerable spirit, not a reed shaken by the wind. He is not swayed by popular motives nor by passing currents. He stands on a foundation that will never give way.

When you find a group of men and women similarly endowed, devoted to a God-given trust, counseling together and working for a divine cause in the service of God, you will find an invincible community struggling and striving for the betterment of all.

In the year 1831, the Latter-day Saints gathered in Kirtland, Ohio. They were poor from the standpoint of worldly possessions, but they had been taught correct principles of government. They lived in peace. They were united in their common cause. Within the short period of five years they had built homes for themselves, they had made civic improvements, and they had built a temple which cost them $75,000. It was a stupendous sum in those days, yet economically, they were on a par with their neighbors and friends.

The year following the settlement in Kirtland a part of the Church settled in Jackson County, Missouri. What they accomplished there within a year or two incited the hatred and envy of their neighbors. A series of persecutions commenced which resulted in the expulsion of the Latter-day Saints. They were driven from their homes and despoiled of their property.

Friday, October 10

First Day

They moved into the counties northward.

In 1838, according to Church history, four years after being driven from Jackson County, there were in Far West, Caldwell County, Missouri, one hundred fifty dwellings, seven stores, six blacksmith shops, two hotels, and a printing house prepared to issue a Church periodical. Schoolhouses were erected, and homes had been built in the country round about. The exodus from Missouri to Illinois with its suffering, exposure, hardship, and trial, has few parallels in history.

The destination of the people was a bog which had to be reclaimed to make it fit for human habitation. This was in 1839. And in 1844, five years later, the population of their city had reached 20,000. Did the Lord bless the Latter-day Saints in those early days? These refugees built comfortable homes, public buildings, schools, and a temple which cost the enormous sum of one million dollars. How could they accomplish this thing? All of this, as you know, they abandoned and left to their enemies so the Latter-day Saints could worship God according to the dictates of their consciences. They wanted to be free from persecution and malice.

The next movement was to the Rocky Mountains, beyond the confines of civilization in the great unexplored West. The Salt Lake Basin was at that time regarded as an irredeemable waste. What has happened in this intermountain region, you already know. The desert has blossomed as a rose. The climate has been tempered. Miracles have been wrought and the precious things of the earth are coming to light.

I mention these things, brethren and sisters, not to bring up the past but to point out the constructive spirit of the Mormon faith. I conclude that any worthy project which will enhance God's work can be accomplished by the Latter-day Saints—for God's work will not fail. It will triumph in the world beyond the wildest dreams of those who laid so firmly the foundation of all we have and are. The same authority which actuated and inspired Joseph Smith and Brigham Young is directing the present leaders of the Church today. I know this to be a fact.

I know God is with his people. I know his inspiration is resting upon those who are directing its affairs, and I know God's work will triumph in the earth and the Latter-day Saints will carry forward the great program successfully until it is fully realized, for God is still blessing his people.

May we always remember it and may we live worthily before him so that these blessings can come to all of us, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

In this morning's session of the conference, President Stephen L. Richards stated that Isaiah prophesied that in the last days the Lord would establish "a marvelous work and a wonder" among the children of men. In connection with that marvelous work and a wonder, Isaiah said:

"And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit. . . ." (Isaiah 29:4.)

"And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed:

"And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned. (Ibid., vs. 9-12.)

"Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people, even a marvellous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. (Ibid., vs. 14.)

"And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

"The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel." (Ibid., vs. 18, 19.)

The Prophet Nephi, who lived about a hundred years after Isaiah died, was commanded by the Lord that he and his posterity should write a religious record which should contain especially testimonies and evidences that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world. It would contain the gospel of Jesus Christ as revealed to his people. As part of that revelation from the Lord, Nephi wrote:

"For, behold, saith the Lamb: I will manifest myself unto thy seed, that they shall write many things which I shall minister unto them, which shall be plain and precious; and after thy seed shall be destroyed, and dwindle in unbelief, and also the seed of thy brethren, behold, these things shall be hid up, to come forth unto the Gentiles, by the gift and power of the Lamb.

"And in them shall be written my gospel, saith the Lamb, and my rock and my salvation." (1 Nephi 13:35-36.)

Nephi was picked up by the Spirit of the Lord and taken on top of a high mountain. There he was shown a glorious vision of the history of the world. As part of that vision, Nephi saw that in the latter days the Spirit of God would come down upon a man. He would get in a ship and cross a large body of water and come to the "promised land," or the land which was inhabited by the seed of his brethren. History indicates that Columbus was this man.

Nephi also saw that following the discovery of this land—America—by the man who was brought here by the Spirit of the Lord, that the Spirit of God would come down upon many people who lived in the countries across the large body of water. Seeking religious freedom, they would leave their native homes and, crossing "the many waters," come to "the promised land." He saw that there they would develop a young nation; and this young nation would be prospered and blessed by the Lord. It would rise up in revolt against its mother nation. And then he saw that the Spirit and power of God would rest down upon the inhabitants of this young nation, "and also that the wrath of God was upon all those who were gathered together against them to battle." He saw that the inhabitants of the young nation would win their independence from the mother nation and that they ". . . were delivered by the power of God out of the hands of all other nations." (Ibid., 13:12-19.)

It is evident that Nephi saw in vision the coming of the Pilgrims and others, the rise of the thirteen colonies, the Revolutionary War, and the establishment of the United States of America.

As his vision continued, he observed that through the power of God this young nation would become a free nation, a nation which would be "lifted up by the power of God above all other nations." (Ibid., 13:30.) It would be established in a "choice land above all lands," the land which the Lord had covenanted with Lehi to give to his seed for an inheritance.

Now, why should the Lord, as is evidenced from what I have said, make the United States a free nation, a greater and more powerful nation than any other nation under heaven?

Nephi gives us the exact reason. He said that in the latter days that Christ was going to establish such a nation and people upon this the promised land so that he would have a place and a people where he would perform his "marvelous work and a wonder." Let us quote the words of Jesus Christ which were given through his Prophet, Nephi:

Friday, October 10

First Day

"Therefore, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, yea, a marvelous work and a wonder, . . ." (2 Nephi 27:26.)

"For the time cometh, saith the Lamb of God, that I will work a great and a marvelous work among the children of men; a work which shall be everlasting, either on the one hand or on the other—either to the convincing of them unto peace and life eternal, or unto the deliverance of them to the hardness of their hearts and the blindness of their minds unto their being brought down into captivity, and also into destruction, both temporally and spiritually, according to the captivity of the devil, . . ." (1 Nephi 14:7.)

Now, what is this marvelous work and a wonder prophesied about by both Isaiah and Nephi?

The Prophet Nephi tells us in detail what this marvelous work is. First, he declared that in the latter days and on this land of promise the Savior would restore his gospel and establish his Church and kingdom. The true gospel of Jesus Christ would be revealed from heaven to a prophet; and that prophet's name, according to Father Lehi, would be Joseph and his father's name would be Joseph. Certainly Joseph Smith fits all of the requirements.

Another phase of "a marvelous work and a wonder" would be the fulfilling of the covenants made by the Lord with the children of Israel. Nephi predicted that at the time that Jehovah would establish his gospel among the Gentiles in the land of promise he would remember the covenants he had made with the house of Israel—the covenant to return the Jews to Palestine, the covenant to establish Ephraim with the birthright in the promised land, the covenants with the Lamanites—and he would fulfil all of these covenants.

Third, the record of the Nephites, the Book of Mormon, would be given to this American prophet. He would translate and publish a book which would contain the gospel of Jesus Christ. Nephi predicted that the words of this book will judge the inhabitants of the earth at the last day. (2 Nephi 25:18.)

And, fourth, the Book of Mormon, as a portion of this "marvelous work and a wonder," would be given through the seed of Ephraim—who would have the birthright—or as Nephi stated, through the Gentiles, to the Jews, to the Lamanites, and to all of the dispersed of the house of Israel, wherever they are throughout the world. This book would come forth to bear witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, to be a new witness to the Bible, and to help proclaim the gospel to the honest throughout the earth.

Now, let us see how these prophecies have been fulfilled. In the spring of 1820, in the state of New York, a boy named Joseph Smith retired to a grove of trees, and there he knelt down and prayed to his eternal Father, asking which of all the churches he should join. In answer to this prayer, one of the most glorious and marvelous heavenly manifestations that has ever been seen by man occurred. The eternal Father and his Only Begotten Son appeared to this boy-prophet. The latter told him to join none of the Christian churches, that Christ's true Church wasn't upon the earth, and that Joseph had been selected to be an instrument in the hands of God through which the true Church would be established.

Thus the Eternal Father and his Only Begotten Son inaugurated this "marvelous work and a wonder" with this greatest and most wonderful heavenly manifestation that mortal man has seen in the latter days.

John the Revelator looked down through the stream of time and he saw the day about which Nephi had prophesied. He wrote:

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

"Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:6-7.)

Certainly reason tells us that if the gospel of Jesus Christ were upon the earth at that time there would have been no need for an angel to "fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel" to bring to earth again.

On September 21, 1823, that angel did fly in the midst of heaven. He appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith, and declared himself to be the Angel Moroni, the last of a great race of ancient Americans. He told Joseph Smith about that sacred record which God had preserved to be brought forth in the latter days. Four years later the record was given to the Prophet. Through the gift and power of God and the Urim and Thummim, he translated the Book of Mormon and published it on March 26, 1830, thus fulfilling this portion of the marvelous work and a wonder.

Eleven days later the Prophet Joseph Smith established, as the result of a direct revelation from the Savior, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which was accepted by the Master as his, declaring it to be "... the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I, the Lord, am well pleased, ..." (D & C 1:30.)

Previous to this time Joseph Smith had received the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood, also, as part of this marvelous work and a wonder; and as time passed he received through revelation and heavenly visitations all of the ordinances and doctrines necessary to the salvation and the exaltation of the human family.

As another important phase of "a marvelous work and a wonder," the Prophet was commanded that he and the Church members should take the gospel and the Book of Mormon to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, searching out the honest in heart, in order that all of the covenants that had been made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and others of the house of Israel might be fulfilled. Thus through this missionary work, Christ would fulfill his covenants which he had made with the children of men by sending his messengers throughout the earth, declaring the restoration of the gospel and proclaiming Jesus to be the Christ, the only name given under heaven whereby man can be saved. (2 Nephi 25:20.) The honest in heart—those who would receive the Book of Mormon and the restored gospel and take upon themselves the name of Christ by joining his Church—were sought out of the world preparatory for the second coming of Christ, that his kingdom might be fully established here upon the earth.

Thereupon the Prophet Joseph Smith inaugurated the greatest and most extensive missionary program that has ever been known in the world. During more than one hundred years' time since the Church was founded, thousands and thousands of missionaries have proclaimed the everlasting gospel throughout most of the world; and missionary activities are going forward today even at a greater momentum than ever before. The honest in heart are being searched out, and the kingdom of God is being developed.

According to the word of the Lord through his ancient prophets, Ephraim was to receive the birthright through his father Joseph. Jacob gave his son Joseph a blessing in which he said:

"Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall. . . .

"The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph. . . ." (Gen. 49:22, 26.)

If we select a spot away from Palestine, where could the utmost bound of the everlasting hills be better located than here in the Rocky Mountains, centered here in Salt Lake City. This certainly is the place.

Micah looked down through the stream of time and also made a confirmatory prophecy. He said:

"But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

"And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth out of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." (Micah 4:1-2.)

Friday, October 10

The Salt Lake Temple stands on this Temple Square not far distant from this tabernacle where we are assembled. It is the house of the Lord; and so the Lord's house has been established in the top of the mountains and exalted above the hills. Through the missionary program during the past hundred years converts have been gathered from all nations of the earth. Many of the Saints have made their homes in the valleys of the Rocky Mountains. As they have migrated here to build their homes and also as they have come to Salt Lake City to attend general conference twice each year, they say: "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways," that they might walk in his path.

The "Law of the Lord" has gone forth from Zion in the Doctrine and Covenants, in the Book of Mormon, in the Pearl of Great Price, and through the inspired teachings of the holy prophets of this dispensation to confirm the "Word of the Lord" which has gone forth from Jerusalem in the Holy Bible.

Thus the prophecies made by these ancient prophets have been and are being fulfilled.

In humility and from the depths of my heart, I want to bear testimony that I know that "a marvelous work and a wonder" has been established—the true Church of Jesus Christ is here upon the earth founded through the Prophet Joseph Smith. I know as I know that I am alive that he is a prophet of God, one of the greatest that the world has known. I also solemnly bear witness that all the presidents who have presided over the Church in this dispensation, including our beloved President David O. McKay, are prophets of the true and living God. President McKay holds the keys of the kingdom, which keys and position of prophet, seer, and revelator, he shall continue to hold through divine appointment until death and then another will be appointed by the Lord to replace him.

The holy prophets have declared that the kingdom of God has been established, never to be taken from the earth again, nor given to another people—thus Nebuchadnezzar's dream, interpreted by Daniel, is being fulfilled. The God of heaven has set up his kingdom upon the earth in these the last days, "which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people." Like "the stone cut out of the mountain without hands," it shall roll forth until it fills the whole earth. (Dan. 2:44-45, 34-35.) And "the saints of the Most High shall . . . possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever." (Ibid., 7:18.)

The climax of this whole marvelous work and a wonder will be the coming of Jesus Christ through the clouds of heaven to his kingdom to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. (Rev. 19:16.) To him shall be given ". . . dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him." (Dan. 7:14.)

These things I know through the power of the Holy Ghost which has borne testimony to my heart; and I bear this testimony to you humbly in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin of the Presiding Bishopric will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder Henry D. Moyle.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

President McKay, my brethren and sisters, I sincerely trust that the Lord will give me the inspiration and the desire I have in my heart to bear testimony to you that I know Joseph Smith was indeed a prophet, that he actually saw the Father and the Son. There appeared to him an angel called Moroni, and through Moroni, he received the golden plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated and made available to the people of the world.

The Book of Mormon in and of itself is important because we have the history that has to do with the people who lived upon this, the American continent. In it we find the prophets of old indicating that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, would be upon this, the American continent, which event took place when he appeared to the Nephites after his resurrection. He organized the Church, and gave them the same privileges and opportunities that existed among the people in Jerusalem.

Through Joseph Smith, we received the priesthood, both the Aaronic and the Melchizedek. John the Baptist appeared to the Prophet and Oliver Cowdery and bestowed upon them the Aaronic Priesthood, the priesthood that he held at the time he baptized the Christ nearly two thousand years ago. Later Peter, James, and John appeared and bestowed upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery the Melchizedek Priesthood.

The Prophet Joseph was visited by Elijah, the prophet of old, who gave him the authority and direction whereby he was to go forward with the work for the dead, that families would have the opportunity of being sealed for time and eternity in our marvelous temples. He was given many other revelations, those that had to do with the organization of the Church itself, the Church of Jesus Christ as it existed over two thousand years ago. It was called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, by revelation.

He received many other revelations. And I sincerely hope and trust, my brethren and sisters, that all of us will read these revelations and understand what they mean to us as individuals and what they can do for us in our families and particularly in contact with those not of our faith.

One revelation in particular I am interested in. It is called the Word of Wisdom. It was given to the Prophet Joseph on February 27, 1833. This marvelous revelation had to do with the use of tobacco and alcohol, and also indicated what we should take into our bodies to keep them sweet, clean, and strong.

Now, it has been a hundred and twenty-five years since the Prophet Joseph gave this marvelous revelation to the world. It has taken medical science a long time to discover that tobacco and alcohol are not good for the body.

In section 89, the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 4 it reads:

"Behold, verily, thus saith the Lord unto you: In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation—"

There are some individuals in the Church who feel that the Word of Wisdom did not come by revelation, but here we have it, in the words of the Lord. We have received it as revelation.

When he said, "... In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days . . ." surely these are the last days when great companies are endeavoring to sell to men and women over the country, regardless of age, alcohol and tobacco.

In 1956, the American people spent $10,500,000,000 for alcohol. They spent for tobacco in 1956, $5,373,000,000, proving the truth of this statement made by the Prophet that in the last days conspiring men would endeavor to encourage and suggest to the people that they should use tobacco and alcohol. On the use of these two poisons, the American people spent approximately $16,000,000,000. I mention that to you because we have only spent $14,350,000,000 for education. We have been spending less for education than we have for the use of tobacco and alcohol.

On a religious basis and for welfare purposes in the United States, we have spent $3,356,000,000—approximately one-fifth of the amount we have spent for the use of tobacco and alcohol.

Now please keep in mind this wonderful revelation was given to us 125 years ago. At that time, medical science had not given any consideration to the use of tobacco and alcohol. So, we can come to but one conclusion: Joseph

Friday, October 1st

First Day

Smith received a revelation of the Lord whereby we are to protect ourselves against these individuals who are anxious that young men and young women over the country shall use alcohol and tobacco.

There is another marvelous revelation given to the Prophet Joseph that has to do with the welfare program. This wonderful revelation is found in The Doctrine and Covenants, Section 78, Verse 3:

"For verily I say unto you, the time has come, and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion—"

This was given to the Prophet in Hiram, Ohio, in March 1832. The Lord realized then as the Church was organized, there must be an organization of some kind whereby those who were in need could be helped. He said there should be an organization, "... regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse . . . both in this place and in the land of Zion—"

The great welfare program was given first to the Prophet Joseph in the form of a revelation from our Heavenly Father. Now we find these storehouses all over Zion, and wherever you find stakes, you also find these wonderful storehouses for the benefit and the assistance of those who are in need.

This brings us to the conclusion, in the final analysis, that Jesus Christ and the Father appeared to the Prophet Joseph and gave him the direction, inspiration, and the revelations that were necessary to organize the Church, not only to organize it, but to protect the people and guide and direct them against all that is evil and contrary to the mind and will of our Heavenly Father.

In the Saturday Evening Post of October 11, 1958, there appeared a wonderful statement on the establishment of the welfare program. The world is beginning to recognize that the welfare program is necessary and essential in assisting those who are in need of help, be it food or clothing or whatnot.

Joseph Smith actually received the revelation whereby the great welfare program came into existence. The Lord realized that the time would come when we would need it all over the land of Zion, wherever our people are to be found that we might be able to assist them and provide them with the necessities of life.

Another marvelous revelation is one that is not encouraging, but nevertheless is true, and we must give it consideration. It is section 87 of the Doctrine and Covenants and it reads:

"Verily, thus saith the Lord concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls;

"And the time will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at this place." He could only have known this through the revelations that were given to him by the Lord. Then also He said, "For behold, the Southern States shall be divided against the Northern States, and the Southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and then war shall be poured out upon all nations.

"And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their masters, who shall be marshaled and disciplined for war." (D & C 87:1-4.)

In many cases I am quite sure we all think this has to do particularly with the slaves in the Southern States, but I believe, brethren and sisters, that it was intended that this referred to slaves all over the world, and I think of those, particularly in the land of Russia and other countries wherein they have been taken over by that great nation and where the people are actually the slaves of those individuals who guide and direct the affairs of Russia and China, and where the rights and the privilege to worship God and to come to a knowledge that Jesus Christ is his Son is denied them.

He also said, "And it shall come to pass also that the remnants who are left of the land will marshal themselves, and shall become exceedingly angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation.

"And thus, with the sword and by bloodshed the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquake, and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations;" (Idem, 5-6.)

In the matter of famine and plague and earthquakes, we can go back to World War I, where 40,000,000 individuals lost their lives either through the war or through famine or plague. And in the world war just passed wherein our own nation was involved, we lost 408,789 of our men. In Korea, we lost 33,629.

The Prophet Joseph gave us this marvelous revelation in 1832. The Civil War came in 1861; the war between Denmark and Prussia in 1864; Italy and Austria in 1865 and 1866; Austria and Prussia in 1866; Russia and Turkey in 1877; China and Japan in 1894 and 1895; Spanish-American in 1898; Japan and Russia in 1904 and 1905; World War I in 1914-1918; then the next war was a comparatively small one, Ethiopia and Italy, when the people in that land of Ethiopia were taken over and controlled by Italy. I am grateful to the Lord that they now have their freedom. Then, the World War just passed and, of course, the Korean War.

These nations of Russia, China, Korea, Syria, Israel, Egypt, Arabia, Lebanon—all of these nations are now in an attitude of war of some kind. Just what the results are going to be, I do not know. Of course, from the revelations we can and do know that some day there will be one great war in a certain area, that area possibly may be in and around some of these countries I have mentioned, probably around Israel.

In thinking of these nations, there is another marvelous revelation given by one of the prophets over three thousand years ago, from Proverbs, Chapter 6,

Verses 16, 17, 18, and 19, wherein Solomon said:

"These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him:

"A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

"An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief.

"A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren."

This statement by Solomon, thousands of years ago, was given for the information that in the last days some of these individuals who lead and guide and direct nations would have in their hearts, "A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood."

As we think of the events that have taken place in the last years, we wonder whether or not these are the individuals who are going to cause the great world war which sometime will come before the Christ appears.

What is going to be our position? What is yours and what is mine? What is that of the membership of the world? What is that of the membership of all of those who believe in Jesus as the Son of God? In the marvelous revelation given to the Prophet Joseph in the Doctrine & Covenants, section 88, verse 126, he said this:

"Pray always, that ye may not faint, until I come, behold, and lo, I will come quickly, and receive you unto myself. Amen."

So, if we are loyal and devoted to Jesus Christ, if we live the gospel as we should, if we are sweet and clean, and if war and difficulties come, as he said, "Pray always," for if we will pray to God and to his Son Jesus Christ, there is no question but that the Lord will help us solve our problems and give us the guidance and the direction that we need.

Then, finally, he said this, "Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold, it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen." (Ibid., 87:8.)

As I think of this statement, "stand ye in holy places," I wonder what these holy places are. I am sure these holy places, one of which, brethren and sisters, could be our own homes if we are prayerful, if we are teaching our sons and daughters to know that God lives, to know that Jesus Christ is his Son, to know that Joseph Smith actually saw the Father and the Son, if we have our prayers day and night, if the whole family has the knowledge and the testimony that God actually lives, and the Lord will help us solve our problems and overcome them. Our homes should be a holy place. There is the holy place where we may go once a week and partake of the Sacrament and be taught the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ by those who are assigned to teach us and give us more knowledge about the gospel.

Friday, October 10

First Day

Another holy place, of course, is the temple—these wonderful buildings of the Lord Jesus Christ wherein we can go and be sealed together, father and mother, sons and daughters, for time and eternity. In this holy place, we can do the work for the dead who did not have the same privileges and opportunities that you and I have had.

I do testify to you that Joseph Smith was a prophet who saw the Father and the Son and other heavenly beings in establishing the priesthood and organizing the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. May all the world accept this testimony, I pray humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church has just addressed us. Elder Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us.

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, I am grateful for this opportunity to bear my testimony to you today and to bring to you a message from those who claim membership in the Church, who are part of this great society of friends in the world living under circumstances much less favorable than those under which we live.

I believe one of the most inspiring instances in my life was the opportunity I had this summer, at the direction of President McKay, to visit our Saints in East Germany. We held a great conference in the city of Leipzig. Into that city came busloads of members of the Church from all of Saxony, from Dresden, Freiburg, Chemnitz, Stuttgart, Plauen, as far away as Mecklenberg.

I have never seen an exhibition of greater unity, of greater devotion one to another, nor have I ever seen a greater appreciation in the hearts of my brethren and sisters for the restored gospel of Jesus Christ. I think you would have to live the experience in order to appreciate what I am trying to say to you.

These people have had trials and tribulations, losses to undergo. I know of one family in which all of the male members of that family for four generations just disappeared in the war. But those who were left behind, the mothers and the children, remained true to the faith. There are people there today who have had membership in the Church for more than fifty years, men and women whom I knew when I was on my mission in 1909 and 1910 in that very country, men and women who have withstood the persecutions heaped upon them not only from outside but from within and have stayed true to the Church.

As I understand it, there are many people, almost every day, leaving East Germany for West Germany, and so one of the questions that I propounded to many of the Saints with whom I had the opportunity of talking, was the question as to whether or not they did not desire to come out of East Germany and to migrate West. Without a single exception in that group in Leipzig, they all said that they felt that their place was to be in their own native country. They wanted to stay there. They wanted to help build up the Church. They wanted to do missionary work among their neighbors and their friends.

We have a great leader behind the Iron Curtain, a young man by the name of Henry Burkardt. I met him five years ago. I marvelled then at his faith, his loyalty, and his devotion to the Church. Then he was unmarried. Now he is married and has a family, and the Lord has magnified him in his calling as first counselor to the mission president of the North German Mission, President Burtis Robbins. He has served in this capacity under several mission presidents. I had a meeting there that lasted all one Saturday, with the missionaries, the local missionaries, with the branch presidents, with the district presidents, of those branches and districts, and every one of them bore witness to the devotion of Brother Burkardt and of their love and affection for him. He has all of the attributes of a great leader. And there he stands, practically alone so far as help from the outside is concerned.

Those people would like to know what we are doing here today. They look forward to our general conferences, never to know what happens here, never to have any conference reports, except in rare instances, and all they know is what they hear occasionally, when our mission president finds it possible to go behind the Iron Curtain and to meet with them for a day or two, not oftener than twice a year. And then in those meetings, there is so much business to transact, that he has little opportunity to tell of the progress of the Church.

I was very much impressed with the thought that there had not been a General Authority enter into the lives of those people in twenty-nine years. Well, they just could not come up and shake hands with you without expressing their gratitude, with tears coming into their eyes. They wanted all of them to share what little they had there to eat, with us. I tell you, it would have done all your hearts good if you had been there to see them.

I realized as never before, the extent to which our Saints in Europe sustain President McKay as a true prophet of God. Those who attended the London Temple dedication and heard his inspired dedicatory prayer need no one to tell them that he is a prophet of God. They knew it as they met and associated with him. They received the witness that he is guided by inspiration and revelation in leading the Church.

Everywhere in Europe the Church seems to be progressing, growing and developing, and multiplying. And so my thoughts turned to the words which are to be found in the Acts of the Apostles, when the brethren visited Caesarea. This was after Paul's conversion:

"Then had the churches rest throughout all Judaea and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied." (Acts 9:31.)

I do not know how the situation in Europe could be described better, because that is exactly what is happening.

Then I turned to the words of Paul in his statement to the Corinthians, which applies so definitely to the conditions of these wonderful Saints back of the Iron Curtain:

"We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;

"Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed." (II Cor. 4:8-9.)

These brethren and sisters are part and parcel of this great organization, this society of friends, of Saints, to which we all belong. I have no hesitancy in stating that we constitute the greatest society of brethren and sisters the world has ever known, and if that were not true, I am sure it will shortly be brought to pass, because that is what the Lord wills of us, his people. I am further satisfied that there was never a time in the history of the world when the Lord had bestowed upon his servants a greater power than is manifest in the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints today. It is not only found in our great Prophet leader, but it is found in the mission field, in the lives and in the works of the missionaries. I am sure that missionaries in the world have never been blessed to a greater degree than are the missionaries today throughout the world, and I am also conscious of the fact that the Adversary is mindful of this, and is not inactive in seeking to thwart the purposes of our Heavenly Father.

The power of the priesthood made manifest through our elders in the mission fields, our sons and our daughters, will overcome all the obstacles that the Adversary can put in their way and the work of the Lord will go forth and we will be multiplied, we will be edified, and we will have the comfort of the Holy Ghost in our work.

Friday, October 10

I tell you, the message that we bear to the world that God lives and that Jesus is the Christ, is bearing fruit in every land and in every city. Cities and countries which heretofore have turned a deaf ear to us are now opening their doors, and it is difficult for us to find meeting places large enough to accommodate the crowds of investigators.

I must tell you one instance. Just a few months ago we went into the city of Innsbruck, up in the mountains of Austria, a city in which I understand we have never previously done missionary work. I had the privilege of speaking to a branch there of some twenty Saints and over thirty investigators, the work, as I remember it, of less than six months. And that is the report that we get all over Europe.

I tell you it is a privilege, my brethren and sisters, to be able to bear witness to the world of that testimony which has come into our hearts. Joy and satisfaction beyond measure is reaped by those of us who are able thus to do.

I know that God lives, that he has given to us, his children, that light and knowledge by which we can understand and appreciate God and his ways, and through obedience thereto be brought back, eternally, into his kingdom, saved and exalted with his people. I pray the Lord that we may all so live that we may emulate the example of our leaders and teach his everlasting gospel to our friends and our neighbors and thus become saviors upon Mount Zion as we save the souls of our fellow men, which I pray humbly, in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers, at the conclusion of this session, will favor us with, "Peace I Leave With You," under the leadership of Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen.

The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Howard B. Stone, formerly president of the Samoan Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

I just wish to say one word in appreciation of our Singing Mothers. You have been thrilled with this artistic, impressive singing, under the leadership of this wonderful director. But not many know what they have done in preparation of this service. They were with the Relief Society two days, they have been here all day today, they will be with us tomorrow. I have learned since this morning's session that some of these Sisters traveled two hundred miles to practice these songs, that they had to stay over night. One day they practiced eight hours—four hours in the morning and four hours in the afternoon, and Sister Madsen taught them, led them, instructed them, these lovely mothers.

We do not know—I wish the world knew—what these women of ours in the Church do freely, what they sacrifice. Motherhood is a great responsibility, a sacred responsibility. And in addition to that service they spend hours, two hundred miles to practice, two hundred miles back. Oh, yes, Sisters, the Church appreciates it, and for all of these things you have our blessing and prayers that you will be guided, your children protected while you are away, while you are rendering this service. They will be with us again tomorrow morning.

There are a few notices that we shall have to give. As announced this morning, these lovely flowers on the rostrum, the protea, are from members of the Relief Society sisters of the South African Mission. The red antheriums are from the Saints of the Honolulu Stake.

Tonight at seven o'clock, in this building, will be held the Aaronic Priesthood Monument dedication. The Aaronic Priesthood Memorial Monument will be dedicated, with a special program beginning at seven o'clock. All Aaronic Priesthood members and leaders are invited to attend.

Secretaries of the ward and stake Welfare Committees will meet in Barratt Hall tonight, with members of the General Church Welfare Committee.

The Agricultural meeting of the Welfare Organization will be held tomorrow morning at 7:30 o'clock. There will be an Agricultural meeting under the direction of the General Church Welfare Committee for all stake presidents, bishops, and their associates in charge of the operation of welfare production projects, tomorrow morning at 7:30 o'clock in the Assembly Hall.

There will be a meeting for all patriarchs of the Church tomorrow morning at eight o'clock.

There will be a meeting for all in the Church at ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Our Singing Mothers will now sing, "Peace I Leave With You," and this Conference will be adjourned by benediction until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

The Singing Mothers Chorus sang the selection, "Peace I Leave With You."

Elder Howard B. Stone, formerly president of the Samoan Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Saturday morning, October 11, at 10:00 a.m.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third general session of the Conference convened promptly at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, October 11, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the meeting.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers of the three Southern California regions were present and furnished the choral music for this session. Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen directed the singing, with Frank W. Asper at the organ.

President McKay made the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle is filled to overflowing this morning, at this, the third session of the One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We welcome this large audience and all who are listening in by radio or television.

We are pleased to note occupying front seats prominent officials in government, state, educational affairs—we appreciate their attendance. You will be pleased to note Senator Watkins, Senator Bennett, Congressman William A. Dawson, Congressman Henry Aldous Dixon, Governor George Dewey Clyde, Secretary of State Lamont Toronto, Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of the Brigham Young University, Dr. G. Homer Durham, vice-president of the University of Utah, John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College, E. Allen Bateman, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, M. Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of Salt Lake Public Schools, Mayor Adiel F. Stewart, A. Sherman Christensen, Judge of the Federal Court, and others I am sure whom we have probably overlooked. We appreciate the interest shown by these government, state, and educational officials.

There are some cables here you would be interested in, too. Here is one from New Zealand South Mission: "To the First Presidency and Saints assembled, Greeting and Aloha Nui from missionaries and saints of the newest mission in the Church. New Zealand South Mission. President Alexander P. Anderson."

And we have here about fifty Samoans, members of the Samoan Choir. We welcome you here. They are sitting here in a body. 'Tal o-fa lava' (Samoan greeting)

This is an interesting note. We met some of our Marine boys yesterday. We are always pleased to hear that our soldier boys are maintaining their standards. Here is one from the Commander of the Chaplain Corps of the United States Navy, the Rev. L. W. Meacham. He says:

"This note is written for the purpose of expressing my appreciation for the fine work which the lay leaders of your Church have done on this station in caring for the spiritual needs of the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We have been happy to provide a place for them to use as a place of worship. We hope that this group will be highly benefited by attendance upon the 128th Semi-annual Conference of the Church. The Chaplains on this station send Christian greetings to your Conference and pray God's richest blessings upon it."

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

I have a note here also that 150 Lesser Priesthood boys, each of whom was qualified for the Award by 100% attendance at their meetings, and their leaders, have driven nearly a thousand miles from Calgary, Canada, to be present on this occasion, and undoubtedly to be present on the great occasion last evening at the Lesser Priesthood service dedicating the Monument.

This session of the Conference will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. We again express appreciation for the service that is being rendered by the owners and managers of these various stations. Their names, as I have told you, have already been announced.

The Singing Mothers are here with us and I am going to take just a minute so that you will appreciate what these mothers have done and are doing. I have told you that they are from three regions in California, and includes the following stakes: Bakersfield, Burbank, Covina, East Long Beach, East Los Angeles, Glendale, Inglewood, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Mount Rubidoux, Orange County, Pasadena, Redondo, Reseda, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Diego East, San Fernando, Santa Ana, Santa Monica, and South Los Angeles. And they have travelled from all those stakes to practice before they came over here. It is wonderful and we are happy, gratefully happy, for your presence this morning.

They will now sing, "Glory to God," under the direction of Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Lorin L. Richards, formerly president of the Great Lakes Mission.

Singing by the Relief Society Singing Mothers Chorus, "Glory to God."

Elder Lorin L. Richards, formerly president of the Great Lakes Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "Teach Me, O Lord, The Way Of Thy Statutes," under the direction of Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen. After the singing Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will read the changes in Stake, Ward, and Branch organizations since April Conference, 1958.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang: "Teach Me, O Lord, The Way Of Thy Statutes."

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, then read statistical data:

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY

Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles.

James L. Barker, a member of the Sunday School General Board and former president of the Argentine Mission and the French Mission.

Claudious Bowman, president of the Mexican Mission.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, has just read the changes in the ward and stake organizations since our last Conference. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will now present for your consideration and action the General Authorities, General Officers, General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of this General Conference.

The General Authorities in our meeting last Thursday recommended that we add another Assistant to the Twelve, so there will be two new Assistants presented to you this morning for your sustaining vote.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

My brethren and sisters: We have again come to one of the most important functions of a General Conference, to sustain the officers of the Church, General Authorities, and the officers of the Church organizations. As I have said before, this is not a pro-forma function. As you raise your hands to sustain these officers, you solemnly pledge yourselves to support them. Everyone should cast his vote with that thought in mind.

President David O. McKay:

We thank you, brethren and sisters, for your unanimous vote in the affirmative. President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will be our first speaker this morning. He will be followed by Elder Albert Theodore Tuttle.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My brothers and sisters: In deep humility and I believe a realizing sense, at least in a measure, of my own responsibility, holding the position through your sustaining vote, I stand before you asking an interest in your faith and prayers, that the few remarks I may make will be directed by the Spirit of the Lord.

I, along with you, am a believer in prayer. Prayer is the royal road between each of us and our Heavenly Father. Whether it remains open or is closed is for our determination. We are a Church, with all that we have received in that capacity and all that we, individually, have received, as the result of prayer. A boy, troubled, uncertain, faithful, desiring to know the will of the Lord had in mind those great verses from James:

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

"But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

"For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord." (James 1:5-7.)

The Prophet Joseph went into the woods in his innocent faith and reliance, prayed for light and received in answer the greatest theophany of which we have any record, for the Father and the Son came to him in person and told him of the work there was for him to do. And from there on, the line of communication, the royal line, between him and our Heavenly Father was never broken.

We believe in the doctrine of continuous revelation. We advocate it boldly and with rightful pride, boast of it. It is seriously challenged by many, by many great Church organizations. But I would like to challenge those organizations on their position. If, as they contend, God no longer informs his children, advises them and counsels them, that being their position, then I ask them why they pray. The fact that they pray seems to me to give the falsehood to their opposition.

I would like to say just a word or two about prayer. I assume that all of us pray because we want what we pray for. I think there is no common denominator for all the peoples of the world that can equal the desire to pray and the resulting prayers. We do not all pray alike. We do not all pray to the same God. We do not all understand to whom we address our prayers in the same way. But the commonest instinct of all humanity is to pray to a superior Being, some Being somewhere, of some kind, who knows more than we know and who has the power to change events to suit our prayers if he so desires.

I take it that none of us under those circumstances would pray for something that was unwholesome or would pray for something that the Lord would not approve that we should have. We do not pray, should not pray for the bad, the unwholesome things of this earth.

I recall that when the Savior began his mission he cleansed the temple. He likewise cleansed it at the close of his mission, driving out the money-changers, driving out those who bought and sold animals for a sacrifice. He declared, ". . . ye have made it [his house] a den of thieves." (Luke 19:46.)

I take it that none of us would wish to pray for anything that would bring us within that classification. We normally think of it, these incidents, as being indications of the violation of the sanctity of the temple. But I think the rebuke goes below and beyond that.

Where should we pray? Amulek is quoted in Alma as telling us about this. I have a feeling that it should be our business never to go anywhere where we cannot ask our Heavenly Father for his protection and approval. It is a sad thing to consider that sometime we might be where we could not ask the Lord for his help.

We might pray, I think usually, perhaps always, with the admonition which the Lord gave when he taught the multitude how to pray, the admonition being that the Lord knows more of what you need than you know yourselves, and then he taught us a very short prayer, all embracing, and as I recall it, he there uttered a warning not to use too many words and pray as the pagans pray.

Saturday, October 11

Another thing—the Lord knows, as I have just indicated, what we need. I have a feeling that we should make praying a habit. I am not speaking of morning and evening prayers only. I feel that we should pray whenever we need prayer, and whenever we need the help of our Heavenly Father, and that is most of our lives. And if we shall be where we must pray or may pray, always our lives must be in accordance therewith.

I have always been somewhat impressed with the story of Elijah and the prophets of Baal. They built their altars. They implored their god, the priests of Baal did. Elijah said, as the day wore on, "Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awakened." (1 Kings 18:27.) I do not think we ought to give the Lord any opportunity to feel that we have forgotten him or that he is asleep. Let us pray always, not just in emergencies.

Another thing—let us not try to tell the Lord what to do. I will not take time to narrate that beautiful story of Naaman, the Syrian general, who came to have his leprosy cured by Elisha, who was insulted because Elisha sent word to go and bathe seven times in the Jordan River. Naaman declared that the rivers out in Syria were as good as Elisha's rivers. He had thought Elisha would come out, strike an attitude, place his hand over the afflicted part and then speak to his God to heal Naaman. You will remember when he hesitated and was insulted by Elisha's direction, his servants came and said that if Elisha had told him to do something great he would have gone and done it, and then, not exactly in these words, but, "Why don't you try it?" He did try and he was healed.

There are one or two incidents in the Savior's life to which I would like to refer. I am thinking of the closing hours of his freedom, a day or two before the day of the Passover. He had been in the temple, and he prayed to the Lord, saying, or indicating that he wished that this hour about to come could pass, and yet said he, "... but for this cause came I unto this hour." (John 12:27.)

Then he went to Gethsemane. I will not take time to relate the details of that great occasion. But I urge you to read them and ponder them. Three times he left Peter, James, and John, and went on a little farther and prayed. The first time, the second time, and the third time, he came back and found them sleeping. "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" But I call your attention to each prayer: "Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done."

Three times he went to the Father, having earlier indicated that he knew his hour was come. I have never been able to understand that. But I can understand the central thought of that prayer—"Nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done."

And I urge on you, brothers and sisters, that when you pray, let that central thought always be with you, and do not always expect that the answer to your prayer will come in the way in which you desire it.

I think in that connection, though not strictly in point, of the time when Elijah fled from the angry Jezebel. He went to a cave. He was lonesome. He was fleeing for his life, obedient to the Lord's command. He lamented his lot greatly to the Lord; he stood forth upon the mount, waiting for the Lord. There came a great wind that rent the rocks, but the Lord was not in the wind. After the wind, an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake. After the earthquake, a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire. Then the Lord came in a still, small voice, and Elijah, wrapping his face in his mantle, came to the mouth of the cave and received the words of the Lord.

The Lord speaks in gentle terms as well as in terms of great catastrophe and grief.

Brethren and sisters, let us continue to be a praying people. Let us pray, keeping in mind some of the great principles involved therein. Let us go to our Heavenly Father for his advice, his counsel, his help. He will always answer if we are righteous in our asking, and if we are asking for righteous things that would be for our good and benefit.

The great foundation in one way of this Church is the doctrine of continuous revelation, continuous revelation to the individual, to the leaders of the Church, all for our good and benefit and for the advancement of his work.

ELDER ALBERT THEODORE TUTTLE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

President McKay, my beloved brothers and sisters: This has been a glorious six months—glorious not in the fact that I have been able to meet the challenges which almost daily pertain to this call, but glorious in the opportunity of teaching the gospel and of meeting with the Saints. May I take this occasion to express my gratitude to those who have been so kind and hospitable to me.

I would like to extend my personal welcome to President Critchlow and Elder Dyer. I know the reception they are going to receive from these Brethren. This has been a glorious six months in association with these men. They have been kind, considerate, and helpful. When you consider the varied talents they bring and the many walks of life that this group of men represent, when you know the individual strength and power that they bring, it is a marvelous thing to me to see the harmonious, intelligent unity that exists among these brethren.

And as I understand it, it is the mission of the Church to develop and extend this unity and brotherhood throughout the world.

How can peace come without brotherhood? What is peace? Is peace the cessation of hostilities? Is peace a cold, rather than a hot war? Is peace co-existence? Is peace to live and let live? Is peace a relationship based on force?

May God give us this spirit of prayer, may God give us the power to pray and may we pray always with that great central thought in mind, "nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." I ask this in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency has just concluded speaking. We shall now hear from Elder Albert Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy. Will Brother Critchlow and Brother Dyer please take their places here on the rostrum.

Is peace servitude and slavery based on power? What is it that brings peace: arms, bombs, pacts, arbitration, and compromise? What perpetuates peace: armies and navies, planes and missiles, and anti-missile missiles? What is the basis of peace? Is it based on a balance of power? I think that each one of us would have to answer that it is none of these, and that at best they are but temporary measures.

What is peace based on? May I try to illustrate it with a story with which I think many of you are acquainted. It is entitled "Abram and Zimri" by Clarence Cook. Two brothers farmed together. Abram had a wife and seven sons. Zimri lived alone. At harvest time the crop was divided equally. Zimri lay in bed and thought: "Here am I, just one mouth to feed, while my brother Abram has a wife and many sons. I must go to the field and share my half with my brother, Abram." So he girded himself and went down and gave a generous third of his portion to his brother.

Abram, on the other hand, thought that same night: "Here am I with a wife and seven sons—someone to share my load and to work with me. Here is my brother, Zimri, he works alone and has no one to help. I shall gird myself and go down to the field and share my portion with him." And he took a generous third and put it with Zimri's sheaves. The next morning the sheaves were the same.

The next night, determined to change it, Zimri went again to the field and carried another third from his pile to his brother, Abram's, and then lay in the field to watch. Soon Abram came and took his sheaves and put them with his brother's share. Then Clarence Cook closes with these words: "And Zimri arose and caught him in his arms, and wept upon his neck, and kissed his cheek; and Abram saw the whole, and could not speak; neither could Zimri, for their hearts were full."

Now, as I read the record of history, there is but one force strong enough to motivate a universal acceptance of brotherhood. That is, the acceptance of the Fatherhood of God and the divine Sonship of his Son, Jesus Christ, and thence all men as brothers. This has been the power that has united men in the past. This has been the plan of our Heavenly Father from the beginning, and it is no illusion. It has worked. We all know the story of Enoch who taught this gospel plan to his brethren, and when it was accepted they lived happily—so much so that the Lord walked and talked with them, and took them.

A similar unity of brotherhood occurred on this continent after the Lord had been here and taught his gospel to the Nephites. I quote the account of the condition that existed for two hundred years afterward:

"And it came to pass that there was no contention in the land, because of the love of God which did dwell in the hearts of the people.

"And there were no envyings, nor strifes, nor tumults, nor whoredoms, nor lyings, nor murders, nor any manner of lasciviousness; and surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God.

"There were no robbers, nor murderers, neither were there Lamanites, nor any manner of -ites; but they were in one, the children of Christ, and heirs to the kingdom of God." (4 Nephi 15-17.)

Now, this blessed condition is attainable today, but it is attainable only upon the basis of accepting God as Father and all men as brothers and living the plan of salvation. My testimony is that this plan, which the Lord introduced in the beginning with Adam, and that has successfully brought about true brotherhood in the past, has been restored; that the priesthood that activates it and operates it is in our midst, and that the leaders thereof in this Church are servants of our Heavenly Father. This plan is bringing about a true brotherhood in this day and it is up to you and me to make it function even more perfectly. To show our appreciation for the privilege we have of belonging to this great brotherhood, may we be ever willing to share it with all of our brothers and sisters, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Albert Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy has just concluded speaking.

The Congregation and Choir will now sing, "O Say, What Is Truth?" Sister Madsen will lead us.

The congregation and Singing Mothers Chorus sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

President David O. McKay:

We will take a few moments at this time to introduce to you the two Assistants to the Twelve. Elder Critchlow, will you please come forward. Elder William J. Critchlow, now president of the South Ogden Stake, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER WILLIAM J. CRITCHLOW, JR.

President McKay, my brothers and sisters, please do not hold anything I may say against me this morning. I am still in a partial state of shock. Truthfully, my senses are dulled by a sense of fear—fear that I shall not be able to measure up to the stature of these men whom you have sustained as General Authorities of the Church.

I feel a good deal like that elder whom I called to be the president of a quorum last week. He said, "Oh, President Critchlow, I am not worthy of that honor. I do not measure up to such responsibility." I took him by the hand and said, "You can do it. I want you to do it." He accepted.

Yesterday, noon, when President McKay interviewed me for this position, I found myself not only feeling like that elder but also talking like him and telling him that I was not worthy and that I did not measure up to the responsibilities of the calling. President McKay took my hand in just about the same way as I took that elder's hand and said, "You can do it. I want you to take it. Now, go tell your wife."

I have a good wife, a lovely wife, who has sustained me and supported me through the years—nearly a quarter of a century. She has kept the home fires burning. She has trained our children, and has done a marvelous job. Our family has come first. The Lord entrusted us with precious spirits, and he expects their parents to care for them, and that is what we—my wife and I—have tried to do. We have tried not to neglect our Church work.

My children, all three of them, will support me. I had anticipated a release as a stake president soon, and my wife and I had planned to circulate around—among some of our friends and our kin with whom we have not mingled for a long time. Well, Mama—our plans will have to be changed, but I know you will not complain, nor will my children.

My youngest son, not too long out of his teens, is a counselor to a bishop in one of the Ogden stakes. My other son graduated this spring from a law school in Washington, D. C.; while there he served in the stake mission as an assistant to Elder Benson's son, who was the president of the Washington Stake mission. My daughter, despite her youth, is the president of a ward Relief Society in one of the wards here in Salt Lake City. They have all been married in the temple. I am proud of them.

When Dr. Widtsoe set me apart as stake president, he promised me that I should be successful. If I have attained any measure of success, it is reflected in my family. I am one of those who like to believe that the real measure of success is a man's family.

My brothers and sisters, I have a strong testimony of the gospel. I have that conviction which President Richards spoke of yesterday, that President David O. McKay is a prophet of God, and I so sustain him. I love that man. We love him in Ogden. All Weber County loves him. He is our own. He is from Weber County and maintains a part time residence there. And we loved his brother, whose place I seem to be taking among the Assistants to the Twelve. I hope that in time the people of Weber County may come to respect and love me as they loved Thomas E. McKay.

There is another one of the General Authorities whom the people of Weber County love and respect, and he is President S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of the Seventy. There are many young men in Weber County, and many parents who will be eternally grateful to President Young for the help he gave youth when he was the executive of our Boy Scout Council in the Ogden area.

Now, my brothers and sisters, I have learned through experience that much of the real joy that comes into one's life, comes as a by-product of service. I think I shall have to explain that term by-product. Let me illustrate it. One winter evening—a blizzard raged outside—I had just settled in a cozy chair with a newspaper and a book, to spend a comfortable evening at home. My wife interrupted my pleasure, saying, "Daddy, if you finish your ward teaching (I was ward teaching at the time) you will have to do it tonight, for tomorrow night you have this, the next night you have that. Get it done, Daddy, tonight!" And then to strengthen her request she brought me my coat and hat and sent me forth.

Well, that's the kind of a wife I have. Now, it was not pleasant, and I was not happy about going out in the storm to do that ward teaching. It was such a stormy night, snowing and blowing, but I went. I walked down the street, a mother across the way, holding a critically ill baby saw me enter a home. She recognized me when the door was opened and the light silhouetted me. She phoned and asked if I would come and administer to her baby. I sought help and complied. She was a young mother whose husband had been drafted into the army. She was living alone in a neighborhood where she was practically unknown. She needed help, and the baby needed a blessing.

Back in my home, later that night, I sat again in my comfortable chair and resumed my newspaper reading. Presently a feeling came into my soul that you brethren know all about, a feeling of joy. I did not go out that night seeking that joy—it came to me as a by-product of my service. Happiness, much of it, is a by-product of service.

Let me illustrate again. One morning, soon after the war, the co-ordinator in our welfare region, came to one of my wards and made an announcement. He reported that our government had made it possible for us to send to our kin and friends in Europe small packages of clothing and food which these overseas folks sorely needed. He said, "Clean up some old clothes, bring them to the storehouse where they will be packaged in sixteen-inch cartons and sent to your kin and friends overseas." How the members of our Church responded to that general request you folks well know. He further related an incident of the previous day—when the news was initially released, which involved a man who hearing the good news promptly—even on the spot—shed his overcoat and said, "Send that." Then he went out and bought a pair of shoes and said, "Send these." After the co-ordinator's announcement a little girl arose and told a story about happy shoes. This is not the way she told it, but this is the way I seem to have heard it.

Once upon a time, there was a king in a land overseas where the people were unhappy. I suppose they had been at war and were hungry and cold, and the king was therefore unhappy. There was a tradition in the land that somewhere in this little kingdom was a pair of happy shoes, and whosoever should wear them would be happy. So the king sent out his soldiers and servants in search of the happy shoes. Day after day they sought them, and then one evening as two of the servants were returning to the king's palace, they passed a hut from which came the strains of a song. Now, the people in this kingdom were in no mood for singing. These servants had not encountered it before. When they heard this song, they stopped to listen. You know the song. These are the words:

"We thank you O God, for a prophet,
To guide us in these latter days."

Before the song was ended, they rushed into the hut and found there an elderly man sitting alone by candlelight. They said, "You sing. Are you happy?" He answered, "Yes, I am happy." "Then let us have your shoes," they said. "You must have the happy shoes." They immediately discovered that he had no shoes. Fragments of leather were tied on his feet with rags. The servants went their way.

What they never knew, however, was this: The next day someone brought him a sixteen-inch long carton. He opened it carefully. There on top was an overcoat. Under the coat was some underwear, and on the bottom of the package was a pair of shoes. He picked the shoes up and hugging them to his bosom said, "I have the happy shoes." He then tore the rags from his feet and, thrusting his feet into the shoes, he felt something. He took it out. It was a note, which read: "From your friend, John Doe, blank address, Ogden, Utah." He sat down and wrote a tear-stained letter to John Doe which he concluded by saying, "I am the happiest man in the world. I have the happy shoes." But he was not the happiest man in the world. You know who was. When John Doe, blank address, Ogden Utah, received that tear-stained letter, he also shed tears of joy and deep down in his heart he sincerely believed that he—John Doe—was the happier man, for the moment at least.

Brothers and sisters, I testify to you that happiness is a by-product of service. May the Lord bless us all and may he bless me in particular that I may have the strength and the courage to carry on successfully in this new calling, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You have just heard William J. Critchlow, Jr. whom you sustained this morning as an Assistant to the Twelve. We will now hear from Elder Alvin R. Dyer, whom you sustained also.

ELDER ALVIN R. DYER

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Early yesterday morning I received two very important telephone calls. One was from President McKay, and the other was from a young man who was a priest in my class when I was a bishop. The time that passed from President McKay's call until I reached his office seemed almost like an eternity, but in actuality it was only about thirty minutes. I can assure you, my brethren and sisters, that it is a moment of great pressure as well as inspiration to sit closely facing the President of our Church, a prophet of God in this dispensation, and be called to serve in such a capacity as this.

As you look into the face of this wonderful man, your life suddenly becomes bare, and then there is a surge of gratitude that comes over you, a gratitude not because you have personally been called to serve but because you have inherent in your heart a desire to serve, and I am so grateful for that feeling. It is not because of any abilities that I may have that I have accepted the call, but because it is in my heart to serve the Lord.

I think it was Nathaniel Baldwin, the great philanthropist, a very generous giver, who made the statement that he was grateful not so much for the ability to give as for the desire he had to give. I recall so vividly the Lord, in speaking to the tired, worn, and weary Saints in the early days in Missouri, when he said unto them, in substance: "Be not weary in well doing, for you are laying the foundation of a great work, and the Lord requires the willing heart," (see D & C 64:33-34) and then he proceeded to say that if you do not have a willing heart to serve you are not of the blood of Ephraim. So, I am grateful in my heart for the desire to serve the Lord in whatever capacity I may be called to serve.

This young man who called me almost five minutes after President McKay called yesterday said, "Bishop, I am one of the rascals who used to be in your priests class. I have been made a bishop, and I need some help. Will you spend some time with me today?" And I had the great joy of spending some time with him yesterday. But I feel the same way that he felt. I need some help, and I know, my brethren and sisters, from the many opportunities that have come to me to serve the Lord, that if I will do my part, the Lord will bless me, will lift me up, and give me the strength and the understanding to accomplish the work that is before me.

I think one of the great sermons that has been delivered in this Church was delivered at Far West, Missouri, when Heber C. Kimball delivered what is known in our writings as the "clay sermon," and in it he said that we should be as clay to be molded as the Lord would mold us, and to do the will of the Lord. His sermon was acclaimed by the Prophet Joseph Smith as one of the great contributions to the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times in the reflection of the attitude that we should have in serving the Lord.

It seems natural, my brethren and sisters, at a time like this, to reflect with gratitude on the many influences that come into your life. I think of my grandparents and have since yesterday morning, of their great devotion in accepting the gospel and coming across the waters many years ago. The other day I had a letter from my brother who is now serving a mission in England, and he said that he had visited an old church in Coventry, England, and there on a stone plaque are engraved the words: "The Church of the Dyer Guild." I am grateful, as I re-read this letter, in the knowledge that we have had the great privilege of doing the temple work for more than three thousand of this guild.

Saturday, October 11

I am grateful to my grandparents who eventually made this possible, and to my mother and father, who are not here upon the earth, but whose influence I feel today, for their faith and their great love of the gospel. I am so eternally grateful for my missionary companion wife, who stood by my side, not only in the mission field, but also when I served as bishop, and in other positions in the Church, always encouraging me to perform my responsibilities, and always seemingly making it easy for me to do so. I am grateful to her for her great faith and devotion. I got so used to having her by my side that recently as I have traveled to a number of MIA conventions I have found myself nudging Sister Bennett or Sister Longden, thinking that my wife was still by my side.

I am grateful to my fine stalwart son, whom I have never heard utter a word of profanity; for his clean life, and for his great zeal to seek for an education; now at Brigham Young University, and who has a desire to go on a mission. I am grateful for my wonderful daughter. These are our two children, but they are wonderful, and I am grateful for them and for their love of the gospel and for their support of our work.

I am grateful to Nephi L. Morris, who was once my stake president, and Bishop Edwin F. Parry, and George Lund, my scoutmaster; grateful for my brother Gus who has always lived by a high spiritual concept. These are men that I think of now as I gird for the responsibility that will be mine in this calling.

President McKay has always been a great ideal of mine. I have always looked up to him, tried to assimilate some of the great characteristics which he has. You cannot be in his presence and hold his hand, and have him pierce your countenance with his wonderful eyes without feeling truly that here is a prophet of God. I am grateful for President McKay; for President Richards, with whom I became so closely associated in missionary work, and for his great devotion and faith and determination to serve the Lord even against adversity; and for President Clark who has expressed so many kindnesses to me and my family.

I am grateful to these men, my brethren and sisters, and to the others of the General Authorities, all of whom I know, and many of them intimately. I am grateful for them. I sustain them with all my heart, and will endeavor to do their bidding and to follow their wishes and desires as I go forward in this work.

I am grateful for my associates in the MIA. I do not, as yet, have my bags unpacked from the mission field, but I am grateful for the time that I have had with these wonderful men and women who are so devoted to the cause of youth, for I feel very strongly the great obligation we have to preserve the integrity of our young people, and know of the great responsibilities that devolve upon this organization to carry that work forward.

I have a testimony of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I know that it is true. I know with every fiber of my being that Jesus Christ is a reality; that he is the Son of God; that he is divine; that he is not an ethereal substance; that he is a glorified resurrected Being, as he is proclaimed to be by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

I bear record that Joseph Smith is a Prophet of God; that in reality he did see God the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, and that he has given to us through divine bestowals all of the needed things to bring exaltation, joy, and happiness to mankind.

And I know that this is his Church, and that if we will be faithful and true in it, and serve him as we ought to, adjusting our lives to the things that are needful, we will find the joy that he has promised; and I leave this testimony with you in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Spencer W. Kimball will be our concluding speaker. We have just listened to Elder Alvin R. Dyer, whom we sustained today as an Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brothers and sisters: Attendance at this conference is a great privilege. This historic tabernacle filled to capacity, mostly with Church leaders is an evidence of the spectacular growth of the Church. Every week there are many changes in leadership in stakes, wards, branches, and missions. Good people are released and others are sustained in their places, sometimes because of death or moving, often to relieve those who are ill or weary; frequently to give others opportunity to serve. This has gone forward since the beginning of time and the Lord's program has not varied much through the centuries.

Two General Authorities visit a stake conference and return having installed one good man to replace another who has served well and made a noteworthy contribution.

The process follows a rather definite pattern:

1st: The need for the new leader;

2nd: The leader is chosen through the process of elimination by prophecy and revelation;

3rd: The newly chosen one is officially called by one with unquestionable authority;

4th: He is presented to a constituent assembly of the people, and 5th: He is ordained or set apart by the laying on of hands by those who are fully authorized.

And this is in keeping with our fifth Article of Faith:

"We believe that a man must be called of God, by prophecy, and by the laying on of hands, by those who are in authority to preach the Gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof."

Today you have participated in that established pattern of the call to high service. You have taken part in a meaningful procedure. You have seen the filling of a vacancy in high places. Some weeks ago Elder Clifford E. Young, Assistant to the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, passed away after a glorious and eventful period of service. We all miss him. We all loved him. His contribution was monumental. Now comes the filling of the vacancy and you are seeing the revelations of the Lord made manifest.

The same steps are followed as indicated above:

1st: The death of Elder Young vacated a position which needed filling;

2nd: Through a process followed by the President of the Church, whose authority is unquestioned, Elder Critchlow has been chosen through prophecy and the revelations of the Lord;

3rd: The prophet has officially called this good man to service;

4th: You, the constituent assembly of the Church, with full authority to act for the Church, have approved the choice, and 5th: Soon after the conference Elder Critchlow will be officially set apart to his new responsibility by the prophet himself, or under his direction.

It is interesting to note that even in olden times much the same procedure was followed. Unfortunately, all the steps are not always recorded but there is considerable evidence that they were taken. The "anointing" of ancient days seems to have been much the same and closely associated with the setting apart of today, with the accompanying blessing.

The first apostles were called by the Lord: "Come follow me," he said, "and I will make you fishers of men." This was more than a casual statement. It was a definite call.

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

"And they straightway left their nets, and followed him." (See Matt. 4:19-20.) "For he taught them as one having authority." (Ibid., 7:29.) "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power. . . ." (Ibid., 10:1.) This included their commission to preach and perform ordinances. It included the setting apart, the charge, the blessing. The promise given these leaders was most spectacular. Full authority was given them as the Redeemer said: "He that receiveth you receiveth me." (Ibid., 10:40.) "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth: Go . . . teach all nations . . . to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Ibid., 28:18-20.)

This same procedure must have been followed in the filling of the vacancy made by Judas' death. The need for replacement explained by Peter:

"Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection." (Acts 1:22.)

Matthias was chosen through a process of elimination. Our record is brief but it seems that the Apostles had eliminated all other brethren of the Church down to the two, then asked for the final revelation from God:

"And they appointed two, Joseph, called Barsabas . . . and Matthias.

"And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen,

". . . and the lot fell upon Matthias. . . ." (Ibid., 1:23-26.)

". . . and he was numbered with the eleven apostles." (Idem, 26.)

Next, the voice of the people was undoubtedly given for they were in conference assembled.

And Matthias was associated with the apostles and went forward in his ministry.

The Apostle Paul was called to the apostleship. The original revelation from the Lord sent him to a high Church leader for his call and charge and authority. Ananias feared the new leader because of the havoc he had played among the Saints, but the revelation was specific:

". . . Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel."

And that authorized leader baptized Paul and laid his hands on his head, through which came the Holy Ghost, the call and the blessing. His setting apart made a noticeable change in him. As he preached in the synagogues ". . . all that heard him were amazed . . ." ". . . Saul increased the more in strength. . . ." (Ibid., 9:15, 21, 22.)

Every Bible reader is aware of the great power which came to Paul with his call, charge, and ordination to his apostolic post.

The call to Barnabas and Saul to do specific work was noteworthy. The revelation to the Church leaders came: "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." (Ibid., 13:2.) The presiding authorities now fasted and prayed in the selection and having made the call, they laid their hands on the two brethren, setting them apart to go to Cyprus and elsewhere.

Even among the kings the Lord seems to have followed the pattern. It appears that the Old Testament Saul became king of Israel after this manner. The people came to Samuel rejecting the former program of judges. They demanded a king like their idolatrous neighbor nations, and the Lord yielded to their persistence:

"Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me. . . ." (1 Sam 8:7.)

"Now the Lord had told Samuel in his ear a day before Saul came, saying,

"To morrow . . . I will send thee a man out of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him. . . ." (Ibid., 9:15-16.)

Next, the person was specified by revelation:

"And when Samuel saw Saul, the Lord said unto him, Behold the man whom I spake to thee of! . . ." (Idem, 17.)

Then came the official call from the prophet:

"And on whom is the desire of Israel? Is it not on thee? . . ." (Idem, 20.)

"... Samuel communed with Saul upon the top of the house." (Idem, 25.)

"Samuel also said unto Saul, The Lord sent me to anoint thee to be king over Israel." (Ibid., 15:1.)

He set Saul at the head of the group in the parlor in the chiefest place and gave him the special meat saved for him. As they went on their way Samuel said:

"... stand thou still a while, that I may shew thee the word of God." (Ibid., 9:27.)

Saul was most humble in accepting and said:

"... Am not I a Benjamite, of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? wherefore then speakest thou so to me?" (Idem, 9:21.)

Years later when Saul had turned arrogant through years of power and might, Samuel denounced him:

"When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the Lord anointed thee king over Israel?" (Ibid., 15:17.)

Now came the setting apart and blessing:

"Then Samuel took a vial of oil, and poured it upon his [Saul's] head, and kissed him, and said, Is it not because the Lord hath anointed thee to be captain over his inheritance?" (Ibid., 10:1.)

With this came a great blessing which, like all blessings, are conditional upon worthiness, a blessing which remained with Saul only so long as he remained righteous.

"And the Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shall be turned into another man.

"And let it be . . . that thou do as occasion serve thee; for God is with thee." (Idem 6-7; italics author's.)

"And it was so, that when he had turned his back to go from Samuel, God gave him another heart; and all those signs came to pass that day.

"And when they came thither to the hill, behold, a company of prophets met him; and the spirit of God came upon him and he prophesied among them." (Idem 9-11; italics author's.)

A positive change came over Saul.

The setting apart turned him into another man and gave him another heart. New powers came to him at once. Those who knew him were astounded at his increased spirituality, his newly acquired wisdom and judgment and his newly attained maturity and powers, and exclaimed in amazement:

What has happened to Saul? He is not the same! "What is this that has come unto the son of Kish. Is Saul also among the prophets?" (Idem 11.)

Who has not watched the transformation of a newly set apart person to high responsibility? Who has not seen men already great rise to new plateaus of superior attainment braced with the authority, the keys, the mantle? And conversely, who has not seen the loss in stature, influence and power after a great leader has relinquished the reigns of direction, and the mantle of authority diverted to other shoulders? It is not imaginary but very real.

Now the people were given opportunity to sustain their king:

"And Samuel called the people together . . . and said . . . See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people shouted, and said, God save the king." (Idem 17-24.)

This presentation to the people was an important element and like that specified in modern revelation:

"The elders are to receive their licenses from other elders, by vote of the church to which they belong, or from the conferences.

"No person is to be ordained to any office in this church, where there is a regularly organized branch of the same, without the vote of that church." (D & C 20:63, 65.)

Apparently Saul chose other strong men for his court who likely were set apart as well, for the record states:

"And Saul also went home to Gibeah; and there went with him a band of men, whose hearts God had touched." (1 Sam. 10:26; italics author's.)

Now that the new leader was chosen, called, set apart, and sustained by his people with their votes expressed in their cry: "God save the king," the superior young man was ready to serve, and was promised the blessings of the Lord so long as he was worthy; but not too many years had elapsed until, through unrighteousness, he had forfeited his blessings and kingdom. The same prophet now chastized him:

Second Day

"... Thou hast done foolishly: thou hast not kept the commandment of the Lord thy God. . . ." (Ibid., 13:13.)

When Saul had disobeyed again and again, the prophet said:

"... I will not return with thee: for thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee. . . ."

"... The Lord hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to a neighbour of thine, that is better than thou."

"... Samuel mourned for Saul: and the Lord repented that he had made Saul king over Israel." (Ibid., 15:26, 28, 35.)

Similarly came the call to David. The Lord revealed to Samuel:

"And call Jesse to the sacrifice, and I will shew thee what thou shalt do: and thou shalt anoint unto me, him whom I name unto thee." (Ibid., 16:3.)

Jesse and his sons came to Bethlehem. Each stalwart stood before him in turn and Samuel's heart was stirred, "Surely the Lord's anointed is before me." (Idem) But the revelation of the Lord manifested otherwise.

"... Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." (Idem 7.)

And as each came before him the spirit whispered, "Neither hath the Lord chosen this." (Idem 8.)

"Send and fetch him [David]," said the prophet, "for we will not sit down till he come hither." (Ibid., 16:11.) And through the process of elimination David was chosen through revelation:

"... Now he was ruddy, and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he." (Idem 12.)

Now the setting apart:

"Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward. . . ." (Idem 13.)

It was some time before the people could sustain him since vicious Saul still reigned.

"[But] Saul eyed David from that day and forward." (Ibid., 18:9.)

"And Saul saw and knew that the Lord was with David." (See Idem 12.)

"David behaved himself more wisely than all the servants of Saul, so that his name was much set by." (See Idem 14.)

And eventually when Saul was dead: ". . . the men of Judah came and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah." (II Sam. 2:4.)

And later:

"... all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; . . . and they anointed David king over Israel." (Ibid., 5:3.)

"And David went on, and grew great, and the Lord God of hosts was with him." (Idem 10.)

And again in the case of Solomon, the anointing was emphasized:

"And Zadok the priest, took an horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon. And they blew the trumpet; and all the people said, God save king Solomon." (I Kings 1:39.)

And Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the statutes of David his father, and received this blessing with his setting apart:

"And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart. . . ."

"And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all. . . ." (Ibid., 4:29, 30.)

Again in the call to Joshua, these steps were stressed: The need, the call, the laying on of hands with the blessing. There was the revelation as to the need since Moses could not go over Jordan and realizing it, pleaded that a shepherd be given Israel. The specific man was named:

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him;

"And set him . . . before all the congregation and give him a charge in their sight.

"And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him. . . ." (Num. 27:18-20; italics author's.)

"But charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see." (Deut. 3:28.)

"And he laid his hands upon him [Joshua] and gave him a charge. . . ." (Num. 27:23.)

And the blessing gave him power and authority.

"And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him. . . ." (Deut. 34:9.)

The setting apart is an established practice in the Church and men and women are "set apart" to special responsibility, in ecclesiastical, quorum, and auxiliary positions. All missionaries are set apart and it is remarkable how many of them speak often of the authority who officiate and of the blessings promised and their fulfilment.

To some folk the setting apart seems a perfunctory act while others anticipate it eagerly, absorb every word of it, and let their lives be lifted thereby.

The setting apart may be taken literally; it is a setting apart from sin, apart from the carnal; apart from everything which is crude, low, vicious, cheap, or vulgar; set apart from the world to a higher plane of thought and activity. The blessing is conditional upon faithful performance.

In a hotel in the Pocono mountains of Pennsylvania long years ago, I learned an important lesson when the president of the Rotary International said to the district governors in the assembly:

"Gentlemen: This has been a great year for you. The people have honored you, praised you, banqueted you, applauded you, and given you lavish gifts. If you ever get the mistaken idea that they were doing this for you personally, just try going back to the clubs next year when the mantle is on other shoulders."

This has kept me on my knees in my holy calling. Whenever I have been inclined to think the honors were coming to me as I go about the Church, then I remember that it is not to me, but to the position I hold that honors come. I am but a symbol.

Someone has given us this:

"There is a spirit which, if it can get into men, will make them tall of soul, gentle of spirit, courageous of heart, just and honest toward their fellow men, faithful in life, and fearless in death."

This is the spirit of the "setting apart" when the recipient magnifies the calling.

This special endowment can make of one a "new creature," "an understanding judge," "a wise and behaving servant," "a discerning leader."

It is my testimony to you that the leaders in this the Church of Jesus Christ are divinely called and set apart to lead through the spirit of prophecy as in other dispensations.

In my experience there have been numerous people who like Saul and David and Matthias, like Paul and Peter and Joshua have, through the setting apart, received "largeness of heart," extended influence, increased wisdom, enlarged vision, and new powers. I have seen many who have been given "a new heart" and who have been turned "into another man" and made into a "new creature."

I bear witness, too, that revelation is with the Church constantly and in marked degree, not only in the call of leaders, but in the interpretation of the gospel truths and in the practices of the Church. This I know.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve Apostles. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "My Soul Is Athirst For God." The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Samuel A. Hendricks, formerly president of the West Central States Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

---

The Relief Society Singing Mothers Chorus sang, "My Soul Is Athirst For God."

President David O. McKay:

You will be interested to know that the music to the anthem to which you have just listened was written by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen, who led the Chorus.

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

Brother Samuel A. Hendricks will now offer the benediction.

Elder Samuel A. Hendricks, formerly president of the West Central States Mission, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened in the Tabernacle at 2 o'clock p.m., Saturday, October 11, 1958. President David O. McKay presided and conducted the proceedings.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions furnished the choral music for this session.

President David O. McKay:

To those who are unable to gain admittance to the Tabernacle, we are pleased to announce that over-flow meetings are held in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall where these services are being broadcast by television.

The singing for this afternoon's session will be furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, conducted by Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen, with Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ. We shall begin by the Relief Society Singing Mothers rendering, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Herold L. Gregory, formerly president of the East German Mission, now called North German Mission.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers Chorus sang the hymn, "Come, O Thou King of Kings."

Elder Herold L. Gregory, formerly president of the East German Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Herold L. Gregory has just offered the invocation. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now favor us with, "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears." After the singing, Elder Richard L. Evans will speak to us.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers Chorus sang the anthem, "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker. He will be followed by Elder Hugh B. Brown.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brethren and sisters, in that spirit of prayer of which President Clark spoke so beautifully this morning, I pray that I may be given utterance to say that which would best be said in this place and at this time.

I think to those of you who have heard what has preceded at this conference, it must be somewhat apparent that there has been a considerable and, I think, significant emphasis and reaffirmation of the principle of revelation, of continuous revelation—or at least it has seemed so to me, as I have sat and listened with you.

There were some events associated with the dedication of the London Temple which I should like to relate, also. Our President went there, and we had arranged a press conference for him on the late afternoon following what was to have been the morning of his arrival, thinking that he would have time for rest and still time to face that arduous task.

But his plane was three hours late, or more. He had been up all the night before with those who accompanied him, President and Sister Smith and Brother Reiser, and there was no time for rest; and he faced that battery of some thirty or forty newsmen representing the great London dailies and others of the British Empire and the wire services, and the BBC television camera.

They pressed many questions, difficult and sometimes tenacious and penetrating questions, as is the function of alert and seasoned newsmen. He met them forthrightly, with some declarations of affirmation as to things we would know and how we could be assured of knowing them. They were respectful, but one always wonders what will happen the morning after when what was said appears in print, with the reporter's personal color or understanding or misunderstanding on it. Some of us worried about it considerably. I saw the President in the lobby of the hotel that evening and expressed some of my concern, and he made a very significant statement. I do not know whether he remembers it or not, but I think I shall not forget it. He said, "When I have said what I know to be true, I do not worry about the consequences."

This put me in mind of that great statement of the Prophet Micaiah as he declared to Ahab, the king, those things which the Lord God had given him to speak. The king had previously said that he hated the prophet because he never prophesied him good, and the prophet replied: "As the Lord liveth, what the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak." (I Kings 22:14.)

It is the burden of the prophets always to speak what the Lord God saith, no matter who likes it or who does not, or what one would wish to be the truth. It takes a kind of courage beyond what most men have reason to reach down for.

We might just as well have slept, those of us who didn't sleep so well that night, because the newspapers the next morning were factual and respectful, and none of them that I knew of had reached for the sensational, or the old false representations, that some of us had been accustomed to in times gone by.

President McKay's calm and assurance, which is so characteristic of him, was in evidence again (with which calm assurance some of us may have felt he has sent us at times into the fiery furnace, but we have never found ourselves scorched, and he has never sent us where he was not willing to walk with us).

To hear him six times deliver significant addresses at six of the dedicatory sessions, to hear the repeated notable dedicatory prayer, a meaningful document, inviting attention to the fact that the Magna Charta, 1215 A.D., had been signed in that same County of Surrey where the temple was now being dedicated, was a great privilege and a moving experience. And to celebrate with him his eighty-fifth birthday in that far land was a sweet occasion that some of us will never forget. And long before he arrived, he was with us, many times a day, because we had made a motion picture explaining the purpose of temples, with President McKay's voice and picture in colored film, and as those 76,000 and more visitors came and went into tents where this film was being shown, we heard his voice from fifty to one hundred times a day as the tents filled and emptied about as fast as the film could be shown. It was a choice and glorious occasion.

Now, one thing these newsmen wanted to know, some of them, is, "How do you know? How can you know some of these things?"

Does it seem a thing strange that the Lord who admittedly had prophets in former days should have them in this day? Does it seem a thing strange that there should be living prophets as well as dead ones? Does it seem that this people in this time should need less, for these changing times and changing conditions, the interpretation of the everlasting principles and standards, and less need a living voice to help to find the way? Is there less of wilderness in our generation and in our world than ever there was? Or less need for living prophets? Does it seem that the Lord would give prophets to one small people in one small place at one limited time, and leave all the rest of his children for all of the rest of time without the living witness of his words, and the interpretation of them according to their own time and day? Just consistency and reason would seem to suggest living prophets and continuous revelation without any deep-seated affirmation of it within our souls.

Saturday, October 11

As to answering the question of the newsmen, "How can you know?" Of course, you can go back and read the record. We invited the attention of some of them to the fact that a prophet a century and a quarter ago had said that tobacco was not good for man, and that medical science was now affirming it. And they said, "Then in this respect your prophet was a century or so ahead of the findings of medical science." And we let them say it. We did not have to say it for them.

But beyond tangible and specific historical evidences, there are things a man can know inside his soul that are beyond the things he can touch and see and rest his feet upon, which are undeniable.

And as to those friends to whom President Richards spoke so earnestly yesterday morning, I would witness to them, also, with him, that this in which we are engaged is not merely a vocation or a profession, but the dedication of a life to a conviction that cannot be denied.

And as to how one can know: He who does not know cannot know that another man does know, and some things are so certain within the souls of men that they cannot be denied.

A few days ago President Clark spoke a sentence that I have not been able to forget. He said, "We are no better than we are." It is profound in its simplicity and it leads into many applications. Our positions do not make us better, or do not assure our being better than we are. I know of no generalizations that would save the souls of men. It is the specific performance of specific things that make men better—not theory, not merely the fact that there is a set of principles or that there are commandments, or that there is counsel, but the living of it.

I am thinking of the Danish sculptor of great fame, Thorvaldsen, who chose to be buried in the midst of his works—not in a cathedral or a cemetery, but in a museum among the monuments of his own making—in the midst of his statuary; and there what he made and what he did with his life surrounds him. He did not theorize upon sculpturing, only, but with his hands and with his creative gift he fashioned those things and he lies there in the midst of his works, as we all shall do someday—and it will not be the theories or the discussions or the speculations or the set of principles or the set of commandments that shall save us. We shall be no better than we are. We are no better than the tithing we pay, no better than the teaching we do, no better than the service we give, no better than the commandments we keep, no better than the lives we live, and we shall have a bright remembrance of these things and we shall, in a sense, lie down in the midst of what we have done when that time comes, and never in my life have I felt more fully to say with all the earnestness of my soul, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet, to guide us in these latter days."

My beloved brethren and sisters, may we take counsel with each other. There is safety in counsel: counsel with our children, with the family, with our friends, with our Father in heaven, and not attempt to live life alone and to make the decisions alone, but to strengthen each other, and encourage each other, and go forward and do what there is to be done and follow the living leadership as the prophet interprets for us the great principles and commandments of all time.

I thank God for a prophet this day, for an assurance that I am not alone in life, and that you are not, that we none of us are, nor are left without inspired leadership. Thank God for it. And I leave this witness with you, in the name of him in whose name we do all things, and in whose name we are met, our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Hugh B. Brown of the same Council will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Levi Edgar Young.

ELDER HUGH B. BROWN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

As we grow older and have more experience in the ministry, we become increasingly aware of our utter dependence upon divine guidance and inspiration, and therefore it is not just habit that causes us so frequently to ask for that guidance and to solicit your help, sympathy, and prayers.

Like Elder Richard L. Evans, it was my pleasure to attend the dedication of the temple in London, England, and I appreciated the privilege.

Two of the most frequent questions asked of us as we travel are, "What is your creed?" and "What distinguishes your Church from others?"

We do not have a written creed in the usual sense of the word. However, we do have a concise and authoritative statement of the beliefs of the Latter-day Saints given by the Prophet Joseph Smith, in the early days of the Church, known as the Articles of Faith. In that statement we declare our faith in God the Father, in Jesus Christ his Son, and in the Holy Ghost; known generally as the Holy Trinity. We declare our conviction that men will be held accountable for their own sins and will not be answerable for the sins of others, that there are certain principles and ordinances that must be believed and observed by those who would gain salvation, and that those principles and ordinances must be taught and administered by men who have authority in the apostolic Church as organized in the Meridian of Time, of which Jesus Christ was, and is, the chief cornerstone.

In this declaration we affirm our faith in the atonement of Christ and its universal applicability. We believe that he will come again, that there will be a thousand years of universal peace. We make the statement that we believe in sacred scriptures, ancient and modern; that we believe that men are entitled to freedom of religious belief. We honor and sustain the laws of the land. We commit ourselves to Christ's standard of moral conduct, and service based on love of God and of fellow men.

As many sermons have been preached and much has been written on each of these articles, I shall not elucidate, but I should like to refer for a moment to the ninth Article of Faith.

"We believe all that God has revealed, all that He does now reveal, and we believe that He will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the Kingdom of God."

This simple and forthright statement of faith in revelation has elicited the criticism of some of our friends, because it includes past, current, and future revelation. Many other churches profess belief in the revelations recorded in the Bible, but they do not believe that God still reveals his will through chosen prophets on the earth.

We declare that the line of communication between heaven and earth is open, and operating, as anciently. We believe that revelation is continuous and expedient, and is suited to the times in which it is given. When we make that statement, it follows that we believe in scriptures other than the Holy Bible, because divine revelation is the word of God, and his word is scripture. We unequivocally declare our faith in the Bible as the word of God, and we specify the King James version thereof.

Our acceptance of other revelation does not diminish our faith in the Old and New Testaments. On the contrary, our belief in the Bible is strengthened and our understanding of it clarified by these new corroborative revelations.

Among the volumes of scripture in which we believe, the one most frequently referred to by friends and critics is the Book of Mormon. It has had the largest circulation and has elicited more comment during the past century, favorable and otherwise, than any other modern book.

This book is an inspired text, having been written by various prophets who lived in America at the times of which they write. It is a sacred record of the ancient inhabitants of America, covering in the main that portion of their history from about 600 B.C. to 400 A.D.

Its message was inscribed on metallic plates by various authors. These writings were abridged by the Prophet Mormon, one of the last survivors of a dwindling race. It is therefore known as the Book of Mormon. He entrusted the plates to his son, Moroni, who was the last of the Nephite historians. Moroni deposited the plates in a stone box on a hillside and some fourteen hundred years later he, at that time a resurrected being, revealed their hiding place to Joseph Smith, the prophet, who translated what is said to be reformed Egyptian characters into English by the gift and power of God.

It is doubtless this element of the miraculous which disturbs many who hear of this record and causes some to shrug it off without further interest. It seems strange to us that believers in the Judeo-Christian Bible should be skeptical of the miraculous.

Miracles form an important part of the Old and the New Testaments. The story of the earth life of Jesus of Nazareth continues to grip the hearts and intrigue the minds of men, largely because of the miracle of his birth, the almost daily miracles he performed during his ministry, and the transcendent miracle of his resurrection and ascension. Moreover, he left his apostles and disciples with a promise of a miraculous reappearance in the last days. Paraphrasing the Apostle Paul we ask, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should reveal his will to his servants, the prophets, as he promised to do."

One remarkable fact about this book is its continued popularity and appeal. One hundred thirty years after the first edition was published, it is still a best seller, over thirty-five thousand copies being printed in English each year, and other thousands distributed in the twenty-seven different languages into which it has been translated. Nearly three million copies of this book have been distributed in almost all countries of the world in the last century.

Yes, we do believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God, and we believe in the miraculous that was involved in its preservation and production. There have been many who have sought to discredit it, many things have been written against it, but in more recent times some of our friends who have made a careful study of the book have made statements which are significant. I shall refer to one or two taken from a little book called, The Book of Mormon Message and Evidences by Dr. Franklin S. Harris, Jr. Charles H. Hull, professor of American history in Cornell University wrote:

"I am perfectly willing to say to anyone that I suppose the Book of Mormon to be one of the most famous and widely discussed books ever published in America."

Says a Rochester newspaper, "The book itself remains on which was founded the greatest religion of the continent and the century. It was not the book itself, but the wonderful influence it had on America that counted."

And a former Secretary of Agriculture, who had read the book carefully said, "Of all the American books of the nineteenth century, it seems probable that the Book of Mormon was the most powerful. It reached perhaps only one percent of the United States, but it affected this one percent so powerfully and lastingly that all the people of the United States have been affected, especially by its contribution in opening one of our great frontiers."

Now, our declaration regarding the Book of Mormon is a solemn one. If it is false, it is almost blasphemous. If it is true, then all who believe it are under a solemn obligation to its author to proclaim its truth.

One of the prophets of that book emphasized this fact in the following words, and I read from Second Nephi:

"Wherefore, how great the importance to make these things known unto the inhabitants of the earth, that they may know that there is no flesh that can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the Holy Messiah, who layeth down his life according to the flesh, and taketh it again by the power of the Spirit, that he may bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, being the first that should rise." (2 Nephi 2:8.)

And further in his same book, after reciting the miraculous events in the history of the Israelites, he said,

". . . I say unto you, that as these things are true, and as the Lord God liveth, there is none other name given under heaven save it be this Jesus Christ, of which I have spoken, whereby man can be saved." (Ibid., 25:20.)

It is the message of the Book of Mormon that has caused people from almost all nations of the earth to accept it as the word of God. Its inspiring theme and divine message, from the title page to the last chapter, constitutes the testimony or witness of a whole nation of people that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the Creator of the world, the Redeemer of mankind. It bears witness to the efficacy of the atonement, of its universal application and its value to all individuals who will accept his word and keep his commandments.

We urge our friends to examine the book itself, to check its claims, listen to its message and to feel of its spirit. Yes, we believe in continued revelation, ancient, continuous, current, and future.

And personally, I wish to bear my testimony with those that have already been borne that the Church today, the kingdom of God, is being led by revelation. God is not the author of confusion. He does not work in dark places. He makes it known to the world when he appoints a prophet, and I testify that I know as I know I live, that this Church today is guided by prophecy and by revelation, and that these men whom we honor are prophets of God.

I pray that he may help us to live as though we believed it, to be true to ourselves, to them and to God, by carrying out the instructions they give, and living the gospel of Jesus Christ, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

In the Doctrine and Covenants we read these words of the Prophet Joseph Smith, "Seek ye knowledge out of the best books, words of wisdom." (See D & C 88:118.) Today I should like to read to you some of the words of wisdom which I have found in good books. Some of these words are from the Bible, some are from the writings of Abbott Lawrence Lowell, late president of Harvard University, and from other sources. All these sources and many more good books are easily available to all of us. I am very much interested in them and wish to pay attention to the Prophet's words.

Our pioneer fathers read the best books. Sometime I shall tell you what books they brought to this valley with them. The founding fathers read most of the best books of their time and in many languages. They were educated and wise men.

What is "wisdom"? President Lowell says, "We think of wisdom as a part of religion. In its highest strains it involves wisdom as an attribute and emanation of God, such that, if a man take her as a companion and guide, he shall find righteousness and happiness. Such wisdom demands serenity of temper, a judicial attitude of mind, a habit of seeking what good reasons and motives, rather than what bad ones, others may have for differing from us. It demands not only a negative, but a positive intellectual integrity, a desire to understand that which contradicts, as well as that which supports, one's own views of what is just and wise. This means an open, earnest mind, a mind based upon wide and deep insight into ultimate realities."

Men are not born with wisdom, they acquire it by habitual self-control, by looking not at the popular impulse of the day, not by conforming, not by mass participation, but at those principles that endure and are eternal.

The following words, which I now quote, will be particularly helpful to our missionaries: "There are thousands of men in the world who live on a high moral plane and are not thought self-righteous. If we have any insight into the deeper springs of human nature, we will meet them constantly in the journey of life. If we have not the insight, we will not see them, for they do not make a show of virtue. But they have upheld it in others by their example, and make the world better by their presence."

What does Paul mean when he says (Corinthians), ". . . they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." (II Cor. 10:12.) He further says, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." (I Cor. 3:11.) Let us integrate this wisdom into our lives.

Let us be wise in training our children, and remind ourselves often that all young people need heroes to emulate. There is no life of the mind or aspiration of the spirit without emulation of great heroes. Let us remind them too, that opportunity is often made or seized upon by men, rather than thrust upon them. The lives of two of the most eminent American historians—Prescott and Parkman beautifully teach this great lesson. Our children must feel at times that they are in the company of a great human spirit.

May I pause here to say some words on juvenile delinquency. William Ellery Channing, the great historian, writer, and teacher said, "No state of mind, not even positive suffering, is more painful than the want of interesting objects." In other words, boredom causes crime. If we had wisdom enough in the community one cannot doubt that crimes, which all good men reprobate, would be less prominent . . . we should be so wise as to discover the causes and remove them.

To leaders and workers I say—ponder on these words in Genesis, "And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him until the breaking of the day.

"And he said, Let me go for the day breaketh. And he said, I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." (Gen. 32:24, 26.)

We read—wisdom is better than strength. Wisdom is better than weapons of war.

Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight.

We read in our newspaper the other morning these words of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell. They are, I believe, wise words. "Civil rights is not solely a legal problem. Basically it is a moral problem." It will always be a problem in America, as long as children hear parents and neighbors utter derogatory remarks about other races, creeds, and religions. Our hiring practices in labor in the future, he says, will have to be based on ability and qualifications for the job, without regard to age or sex or race or creed or national origin.

Let us not be satisfied with a mediocre standard of our life's work. Destiny does not bless a man unless he has endurance to wrestle until the breaking of the day.

Our Father in heaven, help us to get wisdom and use it in our lives, we humbly pray. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. We shall now hear Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

President McKay, President Richards, President Clark, my dear brothers and sisters: One cannot help feeling humble whenever he is occupying this position. I think it is the best lesson we have in bringing one to true humility, and I humbly pray the Lord will sustain me today as I occupy this position.

We come to these conferences happy, cheerful, full of love, with tolerance and kindness to mankind, and with gratitude in our hearts to God, our Heavenly Father. Truly, it is always good to meet in the conferences of the Church. There is always a beautiful spirit here, one of thanksgiving, one of friendliness, one of brotherhood, and one of appreciation for each other, and particularly to our Heavenly Father for the blessings that he has bestowed upon us individually and as a people, as a Church, and as a nation. It is always good to feel the wonderful spirit that is here, to shake hands with friends and old acquaintances, leaders of wards and stakes, and to feel truly the inspiration of the Lord that is always here in these sessions. I think everyone who attends a general conference of the Church always feels that there is an unusually rich spirit here not enjoyed any other place.

A man called me yesterday who had not attended a session of the conference. I think he had never before in his life attended. Sometime ago I urged him to come to one of these conferences, and then he could express himself and pass judgment. He called me later and said, "I attended a session of the conference, and I have never felt like that before. I did not realize how wonderful it was. Truly, the Spirit of the Lord is here in these conference sessions."

If I may, I would like to say a word or two about the dedication of the London Temple and our trip to London and return. My wife and I had the pleasure of taking a plane from Salt Lake to New York, and then to London, in company with Elder and Sister Richard L. Evans. It was wonderful to be with them. Truly, they are very choice and wonderful people.

As one flies the big blue Atlantic Ocean, no matter how many times he may have flown it before and even though the plane seems safe and smooth, nevertheless, there is a little tension. When you look down and you see the blue water below, you realize that you are just above the ocean, and then you look up and see the stars in the heaven, and you really feel and know that God is at the helm, and it is a comforting feeling. Then to have people with you like Brother and Sister Evans is always very comforting indeed, and it was to us. We shall always be grateful for their association, for the companionship and friendship that we enjoyed with Brother and Sister Evans on that great trip.

There were so many beautiful experiences and incidents that happened in connection with the dedication of the London Temple that perhaps one does not truly sense an experience like this unless he is actually in attendance, and it was a beautiful occasion. A rich outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord was present, and the spirituality of every session was outstanding. There was a spirit of love, a spirit of thanksgiving, a spirit of friendship, a spirit of brotherhood, and a true spirit of worship present. Many of the Saints had made great sacrifices and effort to be in attendance for the dedication of this temple. I wonder if we can realize that many of them had never before seen the prophet of the Lord, the President of the Church. They were deeply touched as were we all.

In my visits to the islands of the Pacific, I had always thought that our Hawaiian friends in the islands were the only ones who could sing, smile, and cry at the same time, but at the dedication sessions of the London Temple, I saw others who would smile, sing, and cry at the same time, and in nearly every session, we experienced that same observation. It was because they were deeply touched, humble, and grateful.

We heard many stories there regarding the sacrifices that were made by many individuals in order to attend the dedication. One man had saved all he could for over two years in very small amounts, and in our figures equivalent to 5c, 10c, 15c, etc. in order to have enough money to attend the dedication when that time came. He was so anxious to save up enough money so he could attend the dedication, but when the time came for him to go to the temple, he discovered that he lacked about $30.00 in having enough money for him to attend. To some of us, that would not seem very much, but to him, it was the difference between his being able to go and not going. Someone learned that he needed an additional $30.00 and saw to it that $30.00 was furnished to him so that he could go and not be denied this great ambition and dream. Then this good man said, "I appreciate this $30.00, but I want to pay it back. However, it may take me a year to do it." You see, some of these choice people have difficulty financially, and they do not have the means. I wonder if we realize the difficulty that many of our Saints have in different parts of the world and the problems they encounter in these far-off lands so far from the headquarters of the Church.

Another good man who had waited and dreamed for this occasion was a faithful member of the Church, and he, too, had tried to save all he could, hoping that he would have enough money saved up so that when the time came for the temple dedication, he could attend. Just shortly before the time of the dedication, he became ill, and his doctors told him that it would not be wise for him to go because of a very serious illness that had come to him and perhaps an illness from which he could not recover. This good man said, "Then the money I have saved for this occasion must be used by someone else so that he can go and receive the blessings that I had hoped to receive." He had never been in the temple in his life. He had hoped and planned to go, and now he was denied that blessing, but he was willing and anxious that someone else should have that blessing. It made nearly all of us ashamed to live so close to the temples and rarely attend and then to realize the great effort that our brothers and sisters have been putting forth in far-off countries in order to go to the temple.

We were grateful to hear the prayers of the prophet, President David O. McKay. As one of the brethren said this morning, when the young people there (the missionaries) watched President McKay speak and heard his prayer, they did not need to be told that he was the prophet. Everyone could feel it. It was a great, personal, spiritual strength to all who attended. Because of the power that was given to them by the President in his talk and in his prayer, we felt that every person left there with a firm resolve to rededicate his life to the Lord. The occasion there was heavenly. It was uplifting. It was spiritual.

May I be permitted to quote one or two thoughts from that beautiful appropriate, spiritual dedicatory prayer, and since it has now been published, may I plead with you to please read it. When you read it, try if you can to imagine that you are sitting in the temple in London hearing the prophet of the Lord pronounce that prayer. Then you, too, will be greatly strengthened. May I quote one or two thoughts:

"May we first express overwhelming gratitude just to be alive in this great age of the world. We pause this morning to open our hearts to thee for this special privilege. No other time in world history has been so wonderful—no other age wherein thy secret powers have been more within human control; in no other era hath thy purposes been nearer human comprehension. Help us, O Lord, truly to live!"

One more thought: "But thy mercy, thy wisdom, thy love are infinite; and in dispensations past thou hast pleaded, as thou dost now plead, through chosen and authoritatively appointed servants, for thy erring children to heed the gospel message and come to thee."

If the world would read that prayer and accept it, it would not be where it is today.

I truthfully believe that there are one million members of this Church—at least those who are old enough and who realize the value of prayer—who are praying each day for the President of the Church, the prophet of the Lord, and for the General Authorities of the Church. We are so profoundly grateful to you for your prayers and your faith.

Yes, this is a great age in which to be alive, but we also have some fears. Peace or war? What price for peace? We hear so much about war and different weapons of war that sometimes we are concerned. There are factions at work to divide this nation. There is developing, sad as it may seem, a feeling of bitterness between groups within our nation. The monster of inflation is eating away. The nation and the American public are in the greatest debt they have ever been in. The debt now has reached an all-time high—a good reason for concern. The world has not followed the counsel of the Church.

What price for peace? There are many who say now that bombs are being made to destroy civilization. What of our wives and mothers, our babies and children, and our grandchildren? Probably the greatest problem today facing this world is how to get peace. A great scientist has said that it is possible for certain individuals who have the controls of war to lose their balance of faculties in anger and have bombs dropped, and in so doing, destroy mothers, wives, children, and innocent people by the millions. One bomb, it is said, dropped in the city of the Los Angeles area could destroy every living creature and cause every building to fall in ashes between Santa Monica on the west, Los Angeles, Long Beach, Pasadena, and San Bernardino on the east.

What price for peace? There are some scientists who predict that we are headed for very serious trouble from spawning radiation. There is perhaps an answer to it all. Power? Power is not the answer. Faith is the answer. Would the people of this nation be willing to live in accordance with the teachings of God in order to guarantee peace? In recorded history, we have recognized that in times past, because of the righteousness of the people, the Lord has seen fit to protect a nation and stay the hands of those who would destroy civilization.

Prayer is that weapon. Prayer is a force as real as gravity. True prayer and worship have always been an acknowledged necessity of all mankind. One poet has called prayer "the bridge which reaches from earth to heaven, and the one pathway from despair." I wonder if we are on speaking terms with the Lord. Do we have companionship with him? Can he reach us if he wishes to?

The other day in a meeting in the temple, President Clark was offering the prayer. It was so sacred and so beautiful that one hesitates to mention it. He prayed for the membership of the Church, pleading with us to make sure that we are living so that God can speak to us if he so wishes. I wonder if this nation and the nations of the world would listen if God spoke to them.

Someone has said there are too many people trying to get along without God, and too many nations have turned from Christ. Religion is considered by those who know the meaning of it as the greatest blessing that can come to man. There is no place in the world that does not contain some trace of God. He has left his sacred marks everywhere, and they need only to be found to be realized.

"Religion is the bond that binds man to God. It is the golden arch that leads to happiness; destroy it and chaos will result."

Religion is playing a great part in the lives of men today, and if men would accept the true religion, there would be no war because in the gospel of Jesus Christ, one finds peace, not turmoil; love, not hatred; and the answer to the turmoil in the world and the threat of war is the acceptance of Christ and his teachings, for Jesus is the Son of God, the Savior of the world.

The gospel of Jesus Christ will play the most important part in any man's life. "The only man who can be triumphantly hopeful in these days is the man whose heart is knit to the coming of the kingdom of God."

What price for peace? Power? "Power is never good except he be good that has it." The key to all our problems, to life itself, is God our Father. He is every man's first need. One writer has said: "Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown," and one replied, "Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God—that shall be better than a light and safer than a known way."

And this might help: "Oh, God, as I begin this day and this new way of life, I put my hand in thine. May I not miss a step with thee today; may I be controlled by thy love. May my strong urges be taken hold by thy love and turned toward thy kingdom."

What we find in life depends upon what we give life. The same skies are dull and leaden to one, but glorious with their own blue to another. So often we leave beauties and experiences of worth unappreciated and untouched, even unseen. I wonder if we could not change our lives a little and say, "Let us all be kind to one another, for most of us are fighting a hard battle anyway."

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

I want to bear testimony that God lives and that Jesus Christ is his Son. I know as I know that I live that there are prophets in the earth today, the same as the prophets of old. May God bless the membership of this Church and the youth of this Church particularly. Let's take care of them, because in not too many years, this building will be filled with those who are young today.

May God bless us I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

You have just listened to Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church.

Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen will now lead the Congregation in singing, "Praise to the Man Who Communed With Jehovah." Elder John Longden will speak after the singing.

The congregation and the Singing Mothers Chorus joined in singing the hymn, "Praise to the Man Who Communed With Jehovah."

President David O. McKay:

Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder George Q. Morris.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Thank you, my brethren and sisters, those of you who were here this morning for your sustaining vote. I assure you that I will do everything within my power to be worthy of that vote as I go about the Church serving the membership, our Heavenly Father and his Son, Jesus Christ.

I would be ungrateful if I did not mention something about one of our colleagues, Elder Clifford E. Young. It was not my privilege to be here when he passed away, so I did not attend his funeral service. I was touring a mission at the time. I am most grateful for his companionship, for the splendid characteristics exemplified in his life, integrity to his calling, his faith and testimony of the gospel, and his unselfish service, many times, I am sure, filling his assignments when he was suffering physically though he did not indicate it.

I pray that I may imbibe and partake of these excellent lessons.

Then I welcome and look with joy and great anticipation toward associating with these two splendid men you sustained this morning, Elders Critchlow and Dyer. I have known them both for many years, thirty or upwards. Having been employed by the same company that Elder Critchlow has been with for so many years, I have seen him under fire, but he has always come through a devoted son of God.

Likewise with Brother Dyer. I have known of his work in the Church and just recently as I had the privilege of attending the Kansas City Stake conference, I felt of his spirit there and the spirit of many of his missionaries. So I am looking forward to closer association with these splendid servants of the Lord.

And now I would give you words to live by if the spirit will so dictate. I am reminded of an experience that happened in the life of President George Albert Smith. Several years before he became President of the Church, he gave a home for some months to a couple from Holland. They could speak but a few words of English and could understand very little English. However, the Dutch brother insisted on going to the English-speaking fast meetings and after about the third fast meeting as President Smith and he were walking back to the Smith home, President Smith asked, "Why is it that you insist on going to the English-speaking fast meeting when you understand so little of what is being said?" Here was the significant reply from the Dutch brother, "It is not what I see that makes me happy. It is not what I hear that makes me happy. It is what I feel that makes me happy, and I can feel just as good as anybody."

Yes, there are many who hear and yet do not hear. There are many who see, yet do not see. If our lives are in tune with the glorious teachings of the gospel of Jesus Christ, then we can feel just as good as anybody. We feel as good as anybody because we have a witness and a conviction that Jesus is the Christ. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:17.) There is no hesitancy, no surmising, no groping, but an assurance that God lives, that he is the Father of our spirits and that Jesus is his Divine Son, that they have again appeared in the earth in this dispensation as we have so gloriously sung a few moments ago.

Yes, I am grateful for the testimony of Joseph Smith.

It is interesting that I should have copied that testimony and his witness and that this song should be sung just previous to my being called to occupy this position. May I give it to you? He likened his experience to that of Paul when he said:

"However, it was nevertheless a fact that I had beheld a vision. I have thought since, that I felt much like Paul, when he made his defense before King Agrippa, and related the account of the vision he had when he saw a light, and heard a voice; but still there were but few who believed him; some said he was dishonest, others said he was mad; and he was ridiculed and reviled. But all this did not destroy the reality of his vision. He had seen a vision, he knew he had, and all the persecution under heaven could not make it otherwise; and though they should persecute him unto death, yet he knew, and would know to his latest breath, that he had both seen a light and heard a voice speaking unto him, and all the world could not make him think or believe otherwise." (Joseph Smith 2:24.)

Then Joseph further says:

"So it was with me. I had actually seen a light, and in the midst of that light I saw two Personages, and they did in reality speak to me; and though I was hated and persecuted for saying that I had seen a vision, yet it was true; and while they were persecuting me, reviling me, and speaking all manner of evil against me falsely for so saying, I was led to say in my heart: Why persecute me for telling the truth? I have actually seen a vision; and who am I that I can withstand God, or why does the world think to make me deny what I have actually seen? For I had seen a vision; I knew it, and I knew that God knew it, and I could not deny it, neither dared I do it; at least I knew that by so doing I would offend God, and come under condemnation." (Ibid., 2:25.)

My, what a powerful testimony! And there are thousands throughout the Church today, yes, thousands upon thousands who have a witness within their hearts that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that they did appear to the boy Joseph Smith, even though they have not seen or experienced a like privilege. The Holy Spirit bears witness to this in the hearts of young and old alike. They feel good inside because they are living the truths of the gospel which have been revealed in this day.

I should like to give you the witness from a young girl, seventeen years of age, a beautiful young lady, growing into womanhood. There was a period in her life when she might not have been too sure of her religious convictions, but she is being reared in a good home where the tenets of the gospel are lived, where parents (the father now passed away) feel good because they are in tune. Then she has some wonderful teachers and instructors in the organizations of the Church. Today she feels good because she has a burning testimony.

May I read her witness?

First, she said a group of MIA young folk invited some young people of another church to visit a fireside. Sixty of them responded; there were only forty members of our Church present. She says there was a great impression made upon many of the young folk, both members and nonmembers. They loved their teacher, Sister Nona Dyer, who happens to be the daughter of

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

Brother and Sister LeGrand Richards. Here is her witness:

"I really love the gospel, and it is the most powerful influence in my life. It seems that the older I get, the deeper the spirit of the gospel penetrates my soul, and the more beautiful life becomes.

"I certainly do admire Daddy for the way he lived the gospel and the example he set for others, and Mother, who is so unselfish. I just hope that someday I can learn to be that kind of person and give something to others in return for what has been given to me."

These words we have heard, my brethren and sisters, are words to live by. They bring peace and joy and hope in our hearts, regardless of what the conditions in the world may be. As we follow truth and abide by gospel teachings, we have no need to fear, I assure you. Regardless of who we are, we must keep alive this testimony in our hearts.

In conclusion, I will give you an experience that came to me from my colleague, Elder Clifford E. Young, a year or so ago. It seems that before President Heber J. Grant passed away, and many of you know that he was ill for many months, but three or four weeks before he passed away, Brother Young was in his home visiting him. President Grant uttered this prayer: "O God, bless me that I shall not lose my testimony and keep faithful to the end!" Here was the prophet of the Lord at that time, holding the keys of the kingdom, praying that he would not lose his testimony, that he would remain faithful to the end, even though he lay on his sickbed and must have known that he would never be well again.

Does it behoove us, then, brothers and sisters, to be faithful to the end that we may keep alive our testimonies through our works? The Holy Spirit will keep us feeling good if we do our part and remain faithful to the end.

I bear witness to you that I know that good feeling because I know God lives, that Jesus Christ is his divine Son, that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of God and those who have succeeded him down to President David O. McKay are prophets of God, and he, President McKay, has the mantle of authority and holds the keys of the kingdom of God in the earth. And I bear this testimony in the name of Jesus Christ our Savior. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. Elder George Q. Morris of the Council of the Twelve will be our next speaker. He will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I am wholly dependent upon your faith and the blessings of the Lord in directing me to say what I shall say upon this occasion. I have been thrilled with the proceedings of this conference. Many things have been referred to, and among them was the testing that we undergo in this life. Patriarch Smith referred to that, and in the few moments for me to speak I should like to make some reference to the uses of adversity. We are all subject to adversities. I need not enlarge upon that.

The Lord said to Adam that for his sake the earth was cursed and that he should eat his food in sorrow all the days of his life. The scriptures say that man is born unto trouble as the sparks fly upward, which means that it is in the design of God that we should have these adversities and experiences in the world. In the midst of life, death and a sea of trials and troubles are ever with us. So none of us are free from them, and it follows that we should find some way of meeting them successfully. As the Lord planned this earth, and in these plans were these problems, trials, and difficulties, he would not leave us without the means of meeting them, and so sent his Only Begotten Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, to the world to bring us the means of meeting all the conditions that we have to meet in this world.

As the Apostle Paul in the midst of Mars' hill was declaring to his pagan listeners the unknown God, he said: "For in him we live, and move, and have our being; . . ." (Acts 17:28) and the Lord Jesus Christ in whose hands the Father gave all things has said, "I am the light and the life of the world." (See John 8:12.) It follows that if we are truly intelligent we will center our lives in him.

I should like to read to you a few short testimonies of those who may have done so. The scriptures say: "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting. . . ."

"Sorrow is better than laughter; for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better." (Eccl. 7:2-3.)

I wonder if we realize the truth of that. Let me read these testimonies. There are a number of them, but they are very short and to the point, and they may have messages that will uplift and bless many who are here or who will hear them, who are in need of them.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity, which, like a toad, though ugly and venomous, wears yet a precious jewel in its head." (Shakespeare.)

"Affliction is the wholesome soil of virtue, where patience, honor, sweet humility, and calm fortitude, take root and strongly flourish." (Mallet.)

"Paradoxical as it may seem, God means not only to make us good, but to make us also happy, by sickness, disaster and disappointment." (C. A. Bartol.)

This short one, which evidently came from the heart of the woman who expressed it struck me forcibly: "Ah! If you only knew the peace there is in an accepted sorrow." (Mde. Guion.)

"It is a great thing, when the cup of bitterness is pressed to our lips, to feel that it is not fate or necessity, but divine love working upon us for good ends." (E. H. Chapin.)

"Affliction comes to us all not to make us sad, but sober; not to make us sorry, but wise; not to make us despondent, but by its darkness to refresh us, as the night refreshes the day;

not to impoverish, but to enrich us." (Henry Ward Beecher.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith one time said, when someone had remarked that somebody had affliction because of their sins, that it is an unhallowed statement to make, that afflictions come to all. And M. Henry said: "Extraordinary afflictions are not always the punishment of extraordinary sins, but sometimes the trial of extraordinary graces. Sanctified afflictions are spiritual promotions."

I wonder if we may not at some later time envy those splendid people who have had so many afflictions. "No Christian but has his Gethsemane; but every praying Christian will find there is no Gethsemane without its angel." (T. Binney.)

The final one: "Strength is born in the deep silence of long-suffering hearts: not amid joy." (Mrs. Hermans.)

The Lord has expressed himself about these adversities that come, and I speak, for example, of the Prophet Joseph Smith, who had adversity from the moment he delivered his glorious message of the vision in the grove. You will remember in Liberty Jail he cried out, "O God, where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place?"

"Yea, O Lord, how long shall they [thy Saints] suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened toward them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion toward them?" (D & C 121:1, 3.)

What was the Lord's answer to this prayer? "My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine affliction shall be but a small moment;

"And then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high; thou shalt triumph over all thy foes." (Ibid., 121:7-8.) Then the Lord held up before him other trials and difficulties that were to come, some even worse than he had had, but then said to him: ". . . know thou, my son, that all these things shall give thee experience, and shall be for thy good."

"The Son of Man hath descended below them all. Art thou greater than he?" (Ibid., 122:7-8.)

So, in adversity we may have that which will exalt us, or we may have that which will degrade us. We may have that which, "if we endure it well," will ennoble us, and we may have that which, if we indulge in self-pity and bitterness, may destroy us. In all our adversities there are these two elements, and the determining factor is how shall we endure them? Shall we endure them well? If not, they may destroy us.

Saturday, October 11

The Lord Jesus Christ, the one perfect being in the world, was described by Isaiah as "despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows; and acquainted with grief." (Isaiah 53:3.) That describes his life, the one perfect life lived in the world, full of love and of service. President Clark referred to his Gethsemane, and I will read the detail of it, the Savior crying to the Father:

"Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done.

"And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

"And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling to the ground." (Luke 22:42-44.)

And then on the cross, in the loneliness and terrible suffering of his dying moments, he cried out, using the words of the twenty-second Psalm, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matt. 27:46.)

Someone has said that in every great soul there must come a moment when he is left to himself, and no doubt at that time that was the feeling of the Lord Jesus Christ. The purpose of the Father in not removing the cup from the Savior in the depth of his suffering and the place sorrow may have in our lives is made clear in his answer to the Prophet Joseph's prayer, and in the testimony of the Apostle Paul as follows:

"Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Hebrews 5:8-9.)

"For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." (Ibid., 2:10.)

I should like to close with the testimony of President David O. McKay.

"Upon the membership of this Church rests the obligation to teach the divinity of Jesus Christ, in whose perfection we find every virtue; in whom are combined in wonderful harmony all the powers of the soul; in whose life and teachings we can find every comfort, and if we go to him in humility and faith, every guidance and inspiration we need.

"Our Lord, our Savior, Jesus Christ, is the head of this Church. I know the reality of his existence, of his willingness to guide and direct all who serve him."—"The Man of Nazareth," The Improvement Era, December 1957.

I add to that testimony my humble testimony that Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of the world, organized this, his Church, through the Prophet Joseph Smith, and in it is the power of God unto salvation, and that he is directing it as here implied, through his servant, President David O. McKay, I bear this witness in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder George Q. Morris of the Council of the Twelve. Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy will conclude this session.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

With all my heart I find echo in the testimonies which have been borne yesterday and today respecting the mission of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, and his relationship to the Son of God, even Jesus Christ. In the same breath I wish, also, to tell President McKay, so that he can hear me say it, that I uphold and sustain him as a successor of Joseph Smith and a prophet of the living God. And I pledge myself, as I have in the past, to support him, his counselors, and the Twelve in doing whatsoever I shall be assigned to do.

I say this now because I am going to do something which I dislike very much to do. For the few minutes that I have I want to change the tenor of this conference and talk of something else. Also, I should like to explain to you that I am going to reverse the process which I normally would use. I am going to make a conclusion, and then explain the reasons for it. Normally I would give the reasons, and then state the conclusion.

If I had a loaded gun in my closet, and ignored the possibility of my children using it, I would be a derelict parent. And if I said, in addition to that, "Why doesn't the Church do something about it?" I would be thought a fool, and justly, too. If I as a father knew of a condition which, though it might not be able to kill the body as a gun might, could slay my son's spirit eternally, and did nothing to change it, to the extent that I remained passive, the sin would be upon my head. Then if I should say, in addition to that, "I cannot understand why the Church doesn't do something about it," I would be vain, for so far as my family is concerned I am the Church. It is my responsibility to protect my family and not depend upon anyone else to do it. I may ask for help from Church members and others, but I am the primary protector.

In 1910 I stood next to the back fence of the Lowell School with several of my classmates. A seventeen-year-old boy was there—we were about eleven years of age—and he was exhibiting a picture and bragging to us small children his enjoyment of the situation depicted thereon. I need not tell you that the picture was pornographic in its nature, nor describe it further in detail. I saw it for not more than four seconds—just that long. It has been nearly fifty years, and I cannot, and have not been able to forget it. It has a way of boring itself into my mind, generally during the times I especially would not want it to.

The other day I was standing in a store near a magazine rack. In front of the rack were two young men, I should judge about sixteen years of age. They each had in their hands a copy of a magazine they had picked from that stand. I was not so far away but what I could see at what they were looking. One boy would turn a page, then snicker and nudge his companion who would look, and then he in his turn would guffaw and in a moment or two repeat the process.

They did not purchase these magazines. After they had satiated themselves with the material therein, they put them back on the rack and went out of the store. I followed them for a moment and watched them go up the street. When they got out into the open, where they were not inhibited, from the noises they made, from the laughter, and the joking and the kidding with each other, I would not need to have been a prophet to have been able to predict what they would do that night.

Those pictures in the magazines were not one whit less than what I saw fifty years ago. How widespread do you brethren think that practice is? How far does it extend? I would ask you. My father never knew what I saw. I never did tell him. Do you know what your sons are looking at when they stop in front of drugstore, department store, other store magazine racks?

May I take from the Doctrine and Covenants two verses of scripture which I am sure have not been applied to this particular thing, but which I should like to apply. One is a prophecy and a warning: ". . . In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you. . . ." (D & C 89:4.)

And the other: ". . . inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes . . . that teach them not to understand . . . the sin be upon the heads of the parents. . . . And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord." (Ibid., 68:25, 28.)

May God bless us to become alert to probably the most insidious danger that confronts our boys today, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy has just concluded speaking. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now sing, "Home, Sweet Home," conducted by Florence Jepperson Madsen. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder LeGrand F. Smith, formerly president of the Gulf States Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned until 7 o'clock this evening, when the General Priesthood Meeting of the Church will be held in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. Only those holding the Priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the Priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building. This Priesthood session will not be broadcast. In addition, however, to overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall, the proceedings of the Priesthood Meeting will be relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood assembled in 139 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada.

The general sessions tomorrow will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the west. The Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Those desiring to attend this broadcast must be in their seats at 9:15 a.m. It is requested that the audience during the broadcast refrain from making any disturbance.

We remind you, as we have done before, that large crowds will undoubtedly be waiting outside the closed doors, and when opened there is usually a rush by those outside to get good seats. We plead with those thus standing to be courteous, considerate one of another. Avoid pushing and crowding, will you please. Courtesy is a great virtue. Let us show it one to another, and especially to our visitors who are within our city gates.

Just a word more of appreciation of these lovely women. I believe I am right in saying that as a visiting choir, a guest choir, they have rendered greater service and sung in more sessions than any other group I can call to mind at this time in all my experience. They were here all day Tuesday recording, attended Relief Society sessions all day Wednesday and Thursday, with us two sessions Friday, and all day today. No wonder they are going to sing "Home, Sweet Home."

I cannot refrain from applying the words of the prince when he spoke to his father about his mother: "She of whom you speak, my mother, seems as true as some serene creation, minted in the golden mood of sovereign artist, not a thought, a touch, but pure as lines of green that streak the first white of the snowdrop's inner leaves." That is a beautiful tribute to a mother, and we pay it to these mothers, not only for their beauty of character, beauty of motherhood, but their self-denial to render service to the Church, leaving their homes for practicing hour after hour, and in these cases, day after day, paying their own expenses up here and devoting all this service. I know I express what is in your heart and in the hearts of all who listen when I say, "Sister Madsen and every mother in the Singing Chorus, God bless you."

They will now sing, "Home, Sweet Home," and Elder LeGrand F. Smith will offer the benediction. He is formerly president of the Gulf States Mission. This Conference will be adjourned until tonight at 7:00 p.m.

Singing by the Singing Mothers Chorus, "Home, Sweet Home."

The closing prayer was offered by LeGrand F. Smith, formerly president of the Gulf States Mission.

Conference adjourned until 7 o'clock p.m.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church was held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday evening, October 11, at 7:00 p.m.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the exercises of this meeting. The President made introductory remarks as follows:

President David O. McKay:

You will be interested to know, my brethren, that these services are being relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and in 139 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder Richard P. Condie directing, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir singing, "The Spirit of God." After the singing Elder Harold W. Lee, formerly president of the French Mission, will offer the opening prayer.

Singing by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, "The Spirit Of God Like A Fire Is Burning."

BISHOP JOSEPH B. WIRTHLIN

of the Bonneville Ward, Bonneville Stake

Dear President McKay and brethren of the Priesthood: I feel very humble in this assignment tonight and pray for the Spirit of our Heavenly Father to be with me that I may say those things that will be of benefit to the Church.

President McKay has asked that I speak to the subject, "Ways and Means of Keeping Reverence in our Sacrament Meetings."

As all of you know, this has been a very important subject to President McKay. He has emphasized it throughout his life and, I am sure, is very anxious for all of us to teach our families, and all the members of the Church,

President David O. McKay:

Elder Harold W. Lee, formerly president of the French Mission, will now offer the invocation.

Elder Harold W. Lee, formerly president of the French Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Give Ear, O Lord," directed by Elder Richard P. Condie.

---

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang, "Give Ear, O Lord."

President David O. McKay:

Our first speaker this evening will be Bishop Joseph B. Wirthlin of the Bonneville Ward, Bonneville Stake. The theme will be reverence in Sacrament Meetings and other ward meetings, and how to obtain it.

to be reverent in Sacrament Meeting.

Eight years ago, when the Bonneville Chapel had been completed and we held our first meeting in that beautiful edifice, President McKay was our speaker. At that time he emphasized this great ideal of reverence and admonished us to teach reverence to our children, that they would be reverent in Sacrament Meeting, and promised us that the Spirit of our Heavenly Father would be in our meetings if we would be reverent.

We are not perfect in our ward, but I believe that some advancement has been made in this regard, and I can tell you brethren that we have enjoyed the Spirit of our Heavenly Father. We have a rich, warm and friendly spirit in our Church. This we must not change. But at times we overdo this friendly spirit and we become irreverent.

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

I should like to consider reverence, as to what it is, why we should have it, and finally, the steps to gain reverence in our Sacrament Meetings.

"Reverence," wrote Ruskin, "is one of the signs of strength; irreverence one of the surest indications of weakness. No man will rise high who jeers at sacred things."

Not long ago in one of our Sunday School classes, the subject was discussed, and the conclusion was reached that reverence meant to respect our Heavenly Father. The most beautiful chapel in the Church loses its beauty and its sacredness if reverence is not found there. I believe that self-control is the basis of reverence. I have heard that Elder George Q. Morris taught his missionaries perfect reverence when they held meetings in the Sacred Grove. Those who have attended these meetings have been greatly impressed by the quiet attitude of several hundred missionaries in that Sacred Grove, and as soon as the Amen of the benediction had been given, these elders retired without conversation or the shaking of hands to the outside part of the Grove.

Could we not perhaps follow this fine example in our Sacrament Meetings?

Brother Asahel D. Woodruff has written beautifully about this subject. He said:

"Reverent behavior does not develop by chance, neither is it true that some people are just naturally reverent and others are not. Reverence is a form of behavior which is learned. It is a manifestation of a basic respect for God, no matter where the person may be. True reverence is a sign that the individual has become to some degree personally acquainted with his Heavenly Father and is developing that knowledge which Jesus said leads to eternal life."

The Lord has told us himself that we should be reverent in his Holy House. In Leviticus 19:30, he said:

"Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord."

When the Master lived upon the earth, he led a peaceful life, but when he saw that the temple was defiled, he "cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves, and said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer. . . ." (Matt. 21:12-13.)

I believe the great man is reverent. He reverences Deity; he reverences all things associated with Deity.

I believe the great problem that is facing the world today is a lack of reverence toward God, His Son, and the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

I should like to mention five steps to improve reverence. I am sure there are many more. But we have observed in our ward that these steps are helpful in keeping reverent our Sacrament Meetings.

Step 1: As members of the Priesthood, brethren, we should take the lead in teaching our children in the home, reverence in Sacrament Meeting. We should teach them that this is the most important meeting of the Church and that they should meet regularly. The Lord said that it is expedient that the Church meet together often to partake of the bread and the water in remembrance of the Lord Jesus. If the youth and all of us remember this, the great purpose of Sacrament Meeting, we cannot help but be reverent.

As parents we should always set an example to our children of proper reverence.

I believe that we should teach them to be prompt in attendance at their meetings; to be tardy in an appointment with our Heavenly Father is not reverent.

Also those who leave their meetings early are not showing the respect to those who preside over them and to those who speak in the Sacrament Meeting.

Parents must be on time to their meetings if they expect their children to be prompt.

Step 2: The Priesthood quorums and auxiliary organizations should continually teach reverence. The bishoprics of wards should teach the Aaronic Priesthood the sacredness of the Sacrament, and the deacons should have adequate supervision before and during the Sacrament service.

I believe that the leadership of wards should not tolerate irreverence. If the youth of this Church understand that we insist on reverence in our Sacrament Meetings, they will respect us for our stand. We can be kind but firm, and this attitude will command respect.

Step 3: Our Sacrament Meetings should be well planned in advance, and the details pertaining to the service reviewed carefully before the service begins. We have learned in our ward that if we plan our meetings a month in advance, and then check up on the details a week before, and then again meet forty-five minutes before the appointed hour to make sure that every detail has been taken care of, we eliminate confusion before the service and the need of discussion of details by the bishopric during the service.

Step 4: Proper respect and care of the chapels of the Church and showing concern as to its physical condition will indicate to the youth that we consider sacred these buildings. In this respect, it would be well to honor our custodians, publicly, for the splendid service they render in keeping our chapels clean and in good repair. This would add to their stature and thus their influence with the youth.

Step 5: We have encouraged parents to bring their children to Sacrament Meeting; for convenience, however, for the parents, nurseries, or mothers' rooms could be provided for the younger children. We have found in our ward enthusiastic response for the mothers themselves to supervise these nurseries. They would alternate this assignment which would come from a member of the bishopric on a weekly basis. The Relief Society could do much to encourage our young mothers in this respect. Inactive parents could be invited to bring their families and these mothers could be given an assignment to supervise the nursery, also.

I believe that parents are responsible for their children, for the behavior of their children. Loud talking, running up and down the aisles, or any other disturbance, have no place in the Sacrament Meeting. This behavior should include before, during, and after Sacrament Meeting.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower said on May 20th of this year: "Achievement and progress cannot be created for our people. They can only be created by our people. Americans would have it no other way. Our future is in our hands. Our prospects are limited only by our vision and by our exertions."

And we as a Church, if we are to achieve reverence, must do it ourselves. President McKay has asked for it so many times. We, too, must create it ourselves by effective teaching of our children and proper example by us of the Priesthood.

When God called Moses out of the midst of the bush, he said:

"Draw not nigh hither: put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." (Ex. 3:5.)

As we enter the chapels of the Church, do we not stand on holy ground? The Lord has asked us, not to remove our shoes, but he has asked us to leave the worldly things of this life behind us and to stand on spiritual feet as we worship our Heavenly Father and think of the Atoning Sacrifice made by the Savior for our redemption.

May our Heavenly Father ever inspire us to sense our great responsibility as bearers of his Holy Priesthood, in keeping reverence in our Sacrament Meetings, and I hear you my testimony, brethren, that I know this is the divine Church that has been restored in the latter-days and I should like to express my love and my loyalty to our Prophet and to all the General Authorities who are sitting before us tonight, and I pray this in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear from Bishop Stephen C. Richards of the East Mill Creek Fourth Ward, East Mill Creek Stake, on the same subject.

BISHOP STEPHEN C. RICHARDS

of the East Mill Creek Fourth Ward, East Mill Creek Stake

Thursday afternoon, after President McKay called me at my office and asked me if I would speak to you brethren on the subject of reverence, I began thinking about it and asked many of the people whom I met just what reverence meant to them.

I asked a sister in one of the wards, and she said, "Oh, brother, don't ask me about reverence. We have heard so much about it in the Church—it is beginning to be like the Word of Wisdom."

I asked a Scout and I reminded him that the 12th law of the Scout Law was that a Scout is reverent. And I did not receive a very good answer from him.

Then I went to a ward teacher and I asked him, "How about reverence in the homes which you visit?" And I was sadly disappointed to find that in many homes which this ward teacher visited, they would have to compete against television to put over their bishop's message, to put over the message which they were sent out into the homes to give to the people.

Finally, yesterday afternoon, while I was eating lunch, I asked the little waitress that was waiting on me, "What does reverence mean to you?"

And she said, "Do you really want to know?"

And I said, "I certainly do."

She said, "Reverence means to me to love and respect God."

I was disappointed in many of the statements which I received and many of the feelings which the people had that our meetings, the Latter-day Saint meetings were irreverent, and I came to the conclusion, three conclusions, if I might:

First, that reverence begins in the home, with the family, and with the association of friends.

Second, that reverence is fostered and encouraged and promoted in the Church and especially by those who preside over the wards, the stakes, and the Church itself.

And third, that the individual must have a desire to be reverent, to increase his testimony, and to love and respect God.

I found that true reverence stems from the heart.

I would like, if I might, just to take a minute or two and further these three conclusions.

Reverence begins in the home. A child learns to respect and revere or a child learns disrespect from his parents. A son begins to mimic his father and a daughter her mother, and we find that in those homes where there is no respect for people, those children come to Church with no respect for the bishop or for the Authorities of the Church.

I found in my own home, my little three-and-a-half-year-old daughter did not want to join us in the family circle for prayer, and so she would sit up at the table and wait until we had knelt at our chairs and had our family prayer, and then she would begin her meal. This went on for several months, and we tried to coax her down on her knees to join with us in family prayer.

Finally, the other day, without any further words from us, and it had been going on for some months, by herself she got down on her knees and joined with us in the family circle in family prayer.

I sincerely believe that reverence begins in the home. I am very thrilled with the song which the Primary teaches the young people and which I believe each of us as a Priesthood-bearer should learn and should be able to sing. My little three-and-a-half-year-old daughter sings it.

"I am a child of God
And he has sent me here,
Has given me an earthly home
With parents kind and dear.

"I am a child of God
And so my needs are great.
Help me to understand his words
Before it is too late.

"I am a child of God,
Rich blessings are in store,

If I but learn to do his will,
I'll live with him once more.

"Lead me, guide me, walk beside me,
Help me find the way.
Teach me all that I must know
To live with him some day."

Second, I found that reverence is encouraged and fostered in our churches, in the meeting houses, by those who preside and those who lead the membership of the wards.

I had one bishop say to me, "We have a hard time, bishop, keeping reverence in our ward. We have so many young married couples, and so many children, small children. We just cannot get reverence in our ward."

He also mentioned that there were two wards meeting in their building.

I would like to say that we, the East Mill Creek Fourth Ward, meet with three other wards in a small chapel that was built for but one ward, and the stake also holds their meetings in the same building. It can be done. It is a matter of those who preside over us.

I would like to tell you the story of one bishop in a ward here in Salt Lake County, who had the problem of talking during the Sacrament, of speaking out, and of the young people being irreverent during the passing of the Sacrament. So he with his counselors decided that they should present it to the membership of the ward, and they said, "Brothers and sisters, and young people, whenever you see the bishop or one of his counselors talk during the passing of the Sacrament, then all of you are licensed to go ahead and talk. Will you accept that challenge?" And they did.

You know, everything went fine until the stake presidency and the high council visited this ward one evening. The first counselor was presiding, and a member of the stake presidency turned to the first counselor during the passing of the Sacrament and said, "Brother, do you have a Bible?" And the first counselor looked out over the audience, and every eye was on him. He knew that if he spoke to the member of the stake presidency, that he licensed everyone in that audience to begin talking. So he paid no attention to what had been said.

And the second time, the brother said, "Brother, do you have a Bible?", a little bit louder this time, and a third time, and each time he looked away, and looked over at the bishop. Then this member of the stake presidency turned to the bishop to say, "Bishop, do you have a Bible?" and the bishop turned his head. They got through the Sacrament all right, and the bishop got up, very happy, and praised his first counselor and then he explained to the stake presidency their program of reverence.

Brethren, bishops, counselors, I say that you, too, in your ward can do the same thing. Say to your people, "When you see us talk here on this stand, then you go ahead and talk. If we do not talk, you remain quiet." And it is pretty hard for a bishop to remain quiet when he has the problems of conducting the meeting, but it can be done. And I tell you, you will increase your reverence, you will increase the wonderful spirit of your meetings.

I like the inspired poem that Edgar Guest once wrote:

"I would rather see a sermon
Than to hear one any day.
I would rather one would walk with me,
Than merely tell the way.

The eye's a better pupil
And more willing than the ear.
Fine counsel is confusing,
But example always clear.

And the best of all the preachers
Are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put into action
Is what everybody needs.

I soon can learn to do it
If you will let me see it done.
I can watch your hands in action
But your tongue too fast may run.

And the lecture you deliver
May be very wise and true,
But I would rather get my lesson
By observing what you do.

For I might misunderstand you
And the high advice you give,
But there is no misunderstanding
How you act and how you live."

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

Brethren, I see that my time has gone. But the third thing that I would like to mention is that reverence must be a desire in the heart of the individual. There must be a desire to be reverent. It must come from within. True reverence begins in the heart.

I clipped a small article from the Readers' Digest, had it printed and sent out to each member of my ward. It was simply this, an old Methodist saying:

"If every church member were just like me, what kind of a church would my church be."

You, too, can learn something from that saying. You, too, can keep that in front of you as a goal. If every church member were just like you, what kind of a church would your church be.

I know that reverence is not a matter of a meeting house. I held meetings in Germany in beer halls. I swept out the beer bottles and the cigarette stubs and we had wonderful, reverent meetings. I know that it comes from the membership, from the individuals, and I know that you brethren, you who are the Priesthood of this Church and who preside over the members, have got to be the leaders and have got to show the way and lead the way to reverence in our chapels and in our meetings. It can be done. It is being done.

I challenge you bishops and you counselors, accept that challenge of this bishop, who said, "Watch me and do as I and my counselors do." Try it, you will increase your reverence, you will increase the spirituality of your membership.

May the Lord bless you all. I leave my testimony of the truthfulness of this Gospel with you, and I do it, humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We shall now be privileged to hear from President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren, this is an awesome place to occupy, with the hope and the prayer in my heart, and I hope in yours, you who are seen and you who are unseen, but listening, that what I shall say, and it will not be too long, will be of some benefit to us.

I am sure, President McKay must be heartened and pleased by the report of the practical measures which these two bishops have taken to secure reverence. I am sure that you bishops who are here, and who are listening, will find in these two very able reports from these two young bishops, much food for thought and much ground for the adoption of measures that will bring the reverence that President McKay has been urging for years and the reverence which I believe our Heavenly Father expects if he is to lend to us his listening ears, when we pray to him.

As I said today, there is a royal road from here to our Sovereign, and unlike any other sovereign of whom we know, by some means of which we do not know, our petitions reach him instantly. Whether that royal road be open to our traffic or not depends entirely upon us.

I wanted to say a few words, if I might, and I will be as brief as I can, because I know you are waiting to listen to the others who will speak here tonight, about the Priesthood. I am not going to undertake to define it. I will regard it as the power of God delegated to those whom he chooses directly or through his regularly ordained servants. It is a part of his power which each and every of you has, for the offices and for the work which is entrusted to those who occupy the offices which we hold.

As I see the work of the Church, I will divide it for my purposes, tonight, into three parts: First, there is the obligation resting on all the Priesthood to keep the home fires burning. By which I mean, as you will guess, the obligation to keep the Church going.

Secondly, and depending upon the efficacy of the first, is the obligation to spread the Gospel among the living and bring them to a knowledge of the truth.

Thirdly, the obligation upon us to see to it that those who have gone before, without opportunity to hear and embrace the Gospel, have their work vicariously done for them and for this work you in your home capacity are responsible.

But I want to say more particularly, something about this home-work which we have. You know, this Church was badly driven in its early days. The third field, work for the dead was not known in the earliest days. They began the work of the second field and carried it on from the first, but it was hampered and more or less delayed by the mobbings and the drivings and the other indignities and persecutions which were heaped upon the early Church.

We began in New York, we went to Ohio, we went to Missouri, we came back to Illinois, and then we came West. And apparently we seemed to think that when we got West, we should be free from persecution. Such was not the fact.

But in the midst of our wanderings—shall I say—in the East, during the time that the majority of the Saints were in Missouri, grievous and terrible persecution came upon us. We read of the persecution of the early Christians. Those persecutions in the time of Rome were far more dramatic than those which we suffered, but in considerable part they were different and did not involve the humiliation and degradation of families in the way in which our persecutions involved them.

In the midst of all this, in Missouri, they arrested, on charges that apparently involved the death penalty, Joseph and Hyrum, Alexander McRae, Lyman Wight, Caleb Baldwin, and Sidney Rigdon. For some reason that I have not been able, in my casual search, to learn, Sidney Rigdon was released, leaving the five men there. I will not go through that. Four and a half months, as nearly as I can count, they were in Liberty Jail, and during the time they were in Liberty Jail, the Prophet wrote a great epistle and certain parts of that epistle have been taken out and placed in the Doctrine and Covenants as revelations, as they were, glorious in their language, in their principle, and in their instructions.

Out of that Missouri situation arose among some of the Saints, not many, but some of the Saints a feeling of vengeance and revenge that resulted in one of the incidents of our history that we wish we did not have to try to forget. But there were reasons.

You know, I have been in Liberty Jail. There is not much left there of what was there at the time the Prophet and his associates were there, but there is something. And for a long time the Authorities have been talking about restoring that Liberty Jail, or erecting there some kind of a memorial building. I have my own ideas about that but I will not present them.

But these revelations, these great outpourings of wisdom and the Spirit of the Lord, came at a time when the Church was struggling for existence. They were threatening to exterminate us in Missouri. They were threatening to kill our leaders. The great concern at that time was the keeping of what I have termed the home fires burning. They were still going, or had already begun and were still going on converting people, trying to carry out going into all the world and all the rest. But they were having their troubles.

I have been just a little bit disappointed in noting that some of our historians are rather inclined to excuse or to explain the burnings, the robbings, the plunderings, the rapings, and all the rest. Personally, I have no desire to forget all those things—not that I want to cherish them and build hate in my heart, but I do want to have some understanding of what our forefathers went through in order that we might come here. And I recommend to you that you read the last chapters of Volume I, I think it is, of Roberts' Comprehensive History of the Church, in which he sums up what happened in Missouri after they had gotten rid of us. It is an amazing story, and I assume accurate.

While the brethren were in prison, the Prophet Joseph and Hyrum and the rest, the Saints were led from Missouri to Illinois. Brigham Young led them. He tried to get Bishop Partridge to take out, provide for the getting out of Missouri, of the poor but Bishop Partridge did not and would not take on the work, so Brother Brigham had to do it himself. That was a great experience, one that every descendant, literally or spiritually, and all of us come in the latter group, should find a demonstration, a proof, of the great faith which those stalwarts had.

Saturday, October 11

Second Day

Now, I want to read, in conclusion, a few verses from Section 121, in which the Lord, through the Prophet Joseph, talks to all of us, not to those engaged just in missionary work, nor to those engaged in vicarious work for the dead, but to them and to all of us, also. I may stop here and there and say a word, but not much.

These are commandments, as I read them, to us for our daily conduct.

"Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen?"

"Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson—"

—That hits some of us.

"That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness."

—You bearers of the Priesthood have there a rule as to your own conduct.

"That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man."

—Very strong language—not mine, but the Prophet's through revelation!

"Behold, ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God.

"We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion."

—He had just told us what happens to those who exercise unrighteous dominion and then he repeats what he had said above—

"Hence many are called, but few are chosen.

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—"

—And the following verse contains what might be one of the greatest tests of what we can do and how we feel.

"Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; . . ."—and now note—"and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy; . . ."

—And in carrying forward that, the escape from hypocrisy and believed hypocrisy can be very, very doubtful, we must exercise what is called for there, with greatest care and discretion and without any hypocrisy.—

"That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death.

"Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven.

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever."

I conceive these to be the rules by which we bearers of the Priesthood shall conduct ourselves.

Recently a letter came before me written to be signed by the Presidency, and it gave direction such as would be given in a letter written with reference to the ordering of goods, or something of that sort.

Brethren, be careful, be prayerful, be wise, when you undertake to make your reproof, when you undertake to direct men who have nothing but their love of the Gospel and their respect of you to impel them to obey you.

Be careful of their feelings. Speak kindly and in such a way that there never will be any question as to your love for them and your desire merely to be helpful.

I bear my testimony to the truth of the Gospel. I bear my testimony that I do have a testimony that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that there is the Holy Ghost. I bear my testimony that the Gospel and the Priesthood were restored through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith and those associated with him. I bear my testimony that the same authority which was given to him has come down to us through all of the Presidents since the time of Joseph Smith, and that it is possessed now by President McKay, who I know strives to carry out these commandments of the Lord regarding the Priesthood and the exercise of its powers as the Lord has commanded.

May God be with us always and help us to do all we need to do in order to make the home Church strong and vigorous, that we may be able to cover the other fields, spreading the Gospel among the living, and by vicarious work among the dead, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

The congregation and the Men's Chorus sang the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

President David O. McKay:

Brother Stephen L Richards of the First Presidency will now address us.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My dear brethren, in some respects I regard this great meeting as of foremost importance in our Conference. When I contemplate standing in the presence of the ten thousand who occupy this building and its environs, plus the many more thousands of the Priesthood gathered in the Church edifices all across the country, I am overawed with the responsibility of taking even this small part of your time. I think, if I know my own heart and mind, that there is nothing that I prize higher than the Holy Priesthood which has come to me, and I gather, if you search your own hearts, that throughout these many meeting places where the Priesthood are assembled tonight, that that same feeling of appreciation exists with you. We all hope and pray that we may so magnify this marvelous power and influence which has come into our lives that we may be worthy of it, and that it may perform for us the high purposes for which it was given to our Father's children.

Now, without taking too much time tonight, I wish to repeat, and I hope repetition is not too serious an offense, something about two matters that I have brought to your attention on previous occasions. I think it was two and a half years ago this Conference that I took the liberty of bringing to you something from an eminent judge which I thought might operate to some extent to save life on the highways. I remember telling you at that time that whenever I observed the report of an accident on the highway in our area, I was always careful to look up the notice—often the funeral notice—to find out whether the person who had met with the tragic accident was a member of our Church, and one holding the Priesthood. In our own area I was surprised to find such a large proportion of all of the accidents involving fatalities among our own people.

Saturday, October 11

I always felt—whenever I found that out—that I had lost a fellow member of the Priesthood or a sister in the Church unnecessarily, and in most cases I think that thought is justified because we learn that much of the frightful accident rate is due to some kind of carelessness.

I recall giving that address two and a half years ago, and I received a letter just the other day dated October 3, 1958. I will not disclose the name of the writer now because I have not asked his permission, but I think he would readily grant it. He says to me:

"I am writing this letter to thank you for bringing me to my senses in my responsibility in obeying the laws of the highway. Two years ago last April conference I invited my bishopric [and this is from a bishop] to go to conference with me. I wanted to show them just how easily we could be in Salt Lake [he comes from a distance] for the first session in my new car. I didn't think we were moving if we slowed up to the speed limit, it was early in the morning and very few cars on the highway so I thought it smart to go 80 and 90 miles an hour.

"I attended the Saturday night priesthood meeting and heard you talk on speed demons, and I wondered how you had found out about my fast driving so soon. I felt you were talking right to me but I found out after the meeting there were a lot of ears burning. When you said it was just as bad to break the laws of the land as it was the laws of God [I looked it up and I did not say that, but have no objection to it] and when we break the speed laws we are on the devil's side of the line and the Lord is not bound to answer our prayers for safety if we deliberately break the law, encouraging every judge to throw the book at the first offender, it really struck home to me.

"I can truthfully say, since then, I have never deliberately broken a traffic law, knowingly, except our 20 mile speed limit in our town, and the last few months I have obeyed this. I have a family of six children and before last April they were always saying, 'faster Dad, faster,' and Dad went faster. Now they watch that speedometer and if it even gets close to the speed limit they warn me. My boy's ticket to take the car is to obey all traffic laws and we have a father and son agreement that we will not break them.

"A year ago I asked my bishopric to raise their hand in support of our highway laws, this they have done. About a month ago I wrote a pledge and asked the priesthood quorums to sign. They responded wonderfully well. Six out of ten of my priests have signed a similar pledge, two of them are away and the other two have not been contacted. The teachers quorums are all willing to sign to help stop the slaughter on our highways. Two of our town's seventeen-year-old high school boys lie in the hospital now, not expected to live due to the fact that they were traveling 100 miles an hour at night and missed a curve. I am on the City Council so I asked the City Officials if they would set an example and sign, and 100 percent signed the pledge. Many of our Rotary Club members have signed and they want to have 500 copies made and send them to clubs all over the world with a challenge to them to do the same. I had photostatic copies made of each of the pledges that were being signed. I am sending you a copy of each of the pledges of the quorums and also the city officials, and I dare say there are very few city officials that would sign a pledge of this kind." (Because he put in the pledge to his City Council to abstain from all intoxicating beverages whether driving or not. But they signed it.)

"I want to thank you again for setting me straight because I feel sure it has saved me and my family from accident. It is teaching us to better obey all laws and has helped me to repent."

Now I do not read that letter because it flatters me, but because I think he has hit upon a constructive thing. I gather that he has pledged from more than 200, I should say, that they will rigorously obey every traffic law, and he got all of his own quorums to sign the pledge that they would never drink at all and of course it was the understanding none would drink when driving. So, this bishop has done something about the problem, and I thank him for sending me this letter because it seems to me it makes a suggestion that we might follow in many quarters, and reduce this great tragedy on the highway. I solicit your help in this regard.

The other matter which I want to refer to, and which I mentioned once before in the Priesthood meeting, relates to gambling. I notice in the issue of the Saturday Evening Post under date of August 23, 1958 an article entitled: "I Was a Compulsive Gambler." It is a long article, and I do not propose to read it, but it says in the heading: "For ten wretched years the author lived on the edge of ruin. He tells anonymously how he became a gambling addict, and how he finally licked the 'tiger on his back.'" I will just read the first paragraph.

"Drug addicts say they have monkeys on their backs. For ten years I had a tiger on mine. I was a gambling addict. During that time, out of an income that varied between $5000 and $10,000 a year, I lost more than $25,000 in bets. At that, I was lucky. Time and again, driven by the gambling fever, I risked public disgrace, even jail."

Then he goes on to show how, during these sad ten years of his life, he had yielded to the gambling instinct to such a point that he just simply ruined his life for himself and his family and came nearly landing in jail because of issuing checks without funds and doing other illegitimate things. If you have the magazine handy, I think you would do well to read the article, and I think when you read it none of you would ever want to subject either himself or any of his family or friends to the possibility of becoming a gambling addict.

I have had a little opportunity to watch business for a good many years, and in my time I have seen a good many tragedies. I have seen fine young men with high promise for the future yield to the temptation to pay their gambling debts by stealing money,—some of our own boys, who may still be in Leavenworth Prison after 20 years. I have never heard whether all of these boys got out. Our Brethren know something about it.

I have known prominent men of this city with brilliant futures who have yielded to this gambling instinct and lost every prospect they had, lost the respect of all who knew them, and have died in disgrace. It is a dangerous thing. As this author points out, it gets into the very blood of people, and so I have no hesitance in advising my brethren to stay clear of it, and I go so far as to urge no one to begin even on the smallest basis. After my experience I have reached the point where I hate to see a youth, or even a man, put a nickel in a slot machine because I do not know where it will lead.

Now, there are a good many who will try to defend gambling. I have heard people say that all business is a gamble, that even life is a gamble. The latter statement is absolutely false to anyone who knows anything about life. There is no gamble about life, as everyone of you know. You know that it is all planned from the very beginning, and while we cannot foresee all the circumstances that will transpire, we know what life is. We know the course that life should take. We know its rewards and we know its penalties for infractions of the law. Life is not a gamble, and it is a mistake to say that business is a gamble. Anybody who understands the fundamentals of good business knows that it is not a gamble. Every legitimate business contemplates an exchange of values. One thing of value, services, for another thing of value, money or some other thing. All sound business is based solely on that principle—an exchange of values.

That is not true of gambling—absolutely not. That is an effort to secure either something for nothing, or much more than what is invested in the gambling, and this man whose article I quoted tells about gambling machines, and how if one were inclined to bet on chances he has no chance in winning against these devices in the long run. But it is the morality of it, my brethren, that I so much deplore because it puts men and women (and unfortunately there are many women who indulge) in a position where they are unable to appraise the sound values in life and in business, and it leads them on and on, like one who takes his first drink, until they may end up as alcoholics, or they may end up as gambling addicts, as this man calls them—compulsive gamblers. He could not stop, he could not get away from it. I hope you are sympathetic with that position because I know from long experience that it is the wise thing to do never to bet, but keep on the safe side and never trust your powers of resistance with the wrong thing. You would not with many other things, why trust yourself with this nefarious habit?

Saturday, October 11

Now, brethren, I will not take more of your time, but at the risk of repetition, I wanted to mention those two items again to you tonight. It is a tremendous responsibility to bear the Holy Priesthood. I wish all of you—perhaps all did not—had heard what President Joseph Fielding Smith told us yesterday, something I have long believed, and I was glad to have sanction for my belief. He said in substance that there will be no Sons of Perdition who do not hold the Priesthood. I have believed that for years because I do not think that the Lord in his mercy would ever condemn a man to that indescribable penalty of being put out entirely from the Kingdom and from all grace unless that man knew that Jesus was the Christ, unless he knew the power of the Christ, and he could only know that, I think, by holding the Priesthood. I believe that in the main that can be said to be true—that only men who hold the Priesthood of God stand in danger of that terrible penalty of being classed as outcasts.

On the other hand, only men who hold the Priesthood can aspire to the highest things of life, and that is the balance—to use this Priesthood to reach exaltation in the Eternal Presence or to abuse it and lose it and be cast out. I think that is a solemn thought for all of us, and I trust that as we ponder it we shall all decide, as I have reason to believe we will, that we will aspire to the highest ideals, to the loftiest stations attainable with this holy power that God has given to us. If we aspire to attain that exaltation, work for it consciously, serve faithfully, keeping the commandments, our rewards will exceed even our fondest expectations. Of that I am convinced.

May the Lord bless you, my brethren, and be with you always, I ask in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

When this vast congregation responded to Brother Condie's baton on the first note of "Do What Is Right," I was thrilled. The strength of your voices expressed a spirit which is sublime, and strangely enough, I was reminded of a statement that a leading businessman in the United States made to me on the plane that carried us to South Africa a few years ago. There were three businessmen—one who was president of the Board of a mining company there on the Coast of Africa; another who was a member of the Board going down to a Board meeting; and this gentleman who was head of a national Drug Store chain.

When he found out we are Mormons, he said, "Whenever I can find a young Mormon boy to take charge of running our drug stores, I tell my men to give him a position. I have many of them in my employ." He has found integrity in them. I thought I felt the strength and source of that integrity tonight.

I thought when the gentleman made that statement, that any young member of this Church who gets a position in that chain of stores may cast a reflection upon the entire body if he failed in upholding the standard of the Church. That is what he would do. Whenever anyone, any husband in this Church, treats his wife unfairly, or stoops so low as to strike her, as I heard only recently a man did, he disgraces his Priesthood, casts reflection upon the whole Church. That would be true if he were only a member, but if he holds a prominent position in the Church, as this man does, he disgraces his Priesthood, and proves himself untrue to his fellows. He disgraces his quorum, and proves himself unworthy of membership in it.

It is an inspiring sight to see this body in the Tabernacle, and to realize that assembled in 139 other houses there are members of the Priesthood, from the high priests to the deacons, meeting tonight and feeling the power of the Priesthood.

One principle emphasizes itself in my mind tonight, and that is the virtue of self-control. When a man accepts the Priesthood, he accepts the obligation of controlling himself under any circumstances. That is the first lesson that the Savior gave to us after his baptism—the power of resistance. Arising from the plain through which the Jordan River flows into the Dead Sea, near the spot of Christ's baptism, there is a precipitous cliff called the Mount of Temptation. People point to it and say, "It is on that Mount that Jesus went after he was baptized in the River Jordan."

Those three temptations which were given to Him are given to us. The first was an appeal to his appetite after 40 days of fasting, which temptation is really an appeal to the appetite. Second, an appeal to his vanity. 'Cast thyself down. I dare you this; and I dare you that.' And third, 'the kingdoms of the world and all the wealth thereof will be yours if you follow me.' When Satan reached that point he was not challenging, he was pleading. 'All these I will give thee if thou wilt bow down and worship me.'

As Christ resisted the temptation of appetite, of passion; as he resisted the appeal to his vanity and pride, he grew in power. I had better put it this way: that Satan's bombastic attitude, his challenging attitude, "If thou be the Son of God," is changed to one of pleading, and when Christ said, 'Get thee behind me Satan, for it is written thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve,' we glimpse what it means to be the victor over temptation, and we understand also how temptation loses its power and leaves us. As Satan slunk away, angels came and administered to Christ.

Well, the temptations come to every man who holds the Priesthood. One of the bishops who spoke to us tonight referred to the relationship of self-control, self-mastery, and reverence. That is one of the great lessons in this matter of reverence. Both bishops, who gave us some excellent suggestions, and whom I thank at this time, referred to the necessity of reverence in the home, control of presiding authority in conducting meetings, controlling their own tongues. I know of no attribute, no quality, more conducive to peace in the home than self-control. If the husband sees something in the wife about which he could find fault, it would be better for him to say nothing, to control his tongue. That is an excellent thing to do, say nothing about it. And if the wife would practice that same thing, how many disputations and quarrels would be stopped, quenched at their beginning.

Parents who suddenly become angered or hurt or injured at some act of a child innocently committed might hurt the child's feelings. Parents should manage to exert control of themselves, control of their hands, control their tongues particularly, then the child's feelings would not be hurt.

Every Sunday when we partake of the Sacrament we covenant that we will do just this one thing at least, wherever we are. Read what James says about controlling the tongue, an unruly member, and you will see that this is one of the fundamental principles. We covenant on that Sunday that we will take upon us the name of the Son, we witness that we will do it. It takes some control to keep that promise. We witness that we will always remember him.

We should be always dignified, self-possessed. When Pilate said, "Behold the man," he asked all to behold the perfect man. He was just that. We covenant that we will keep the commandments which he has given us. One reason why nonmembers, disbelievers in Christianity and in religion, so express themselves against it is because of the inconsistency between the Christian who pretends to do these things, and then in business affairs and in his home life he does just the opposite, and I apply to him that terrible title, "hypocrite," a sin condemned more vehemently by the Savior than any other excepting the great sins of adultery and murder.

I plead with the members of the Priesthood throughout the Church to practice self-mastery. That applies to prospective missionaries and to missionaries who are in the field. Be master of yourselves, master of your appetites, master of your passions. Husbands, wives, be as a light set upon a hill, that men seeing your good deeds and your good lives will glorify our Father in Heaven.

What was it that made the president of I suppose the greatest Drug Store chain in the United States say, "I choose the Mormon boys wherever I can get them." He has confidence in you. You will resist the temptation of taking any of his money. You will represent him in his business in giving returns for his investment. The poet has said:

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows by like a song,
But the man worth while is the one who will smile,
When everything goes dead wrong.
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years,
And the smile that is worth the praises of earth
Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy enough to be virtuous,
When nothing tempts you to stray,
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away;
But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor on earth
Is the life that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen,
Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered today;
They make up the sum of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion,
And the sorrow that hides in a smile,
It is these that are worth the homage on earth
For we find them but once in a while.

—"Worth While,"
by Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

I commend Bishop Wirthlin and Bishop Richards for their excellent messages to us on reverence, and as one of them said at the base of it all is this virtue of self-control, self-mastery. There is no whispering by parents during the administration of the Sacrament when they exercise this virtue. There is no whispering after entering the House of God. There is communion between the spirit, and the Spirit of the Lord. There is no whispering on the rostrum, because all preparation is made beforehand.

And children should know, though they want to play, that they have to resist it during the worshipping hour so they will not intrude upon the concentration and the spiritual communion of others.

God bless us that we may be true to the responsibilities given us directly from heaven. There is no use excusing it or modifying it, that is the truth, and the body of Priesthood listening in tonight, representing the hundreds of thousands who hold the Priesthood, carry the responsibility of setting an example to the whole world.

May God give us power to discharge our duties honorably and well—in our homes, in our business relationships, and especially in our association with leaders in the world who, seeing our characters, our leadership, may be influenced to lead many others of their members nationally under their control to favor acts and laws necessary that the missionaries, representatives of this Church may carry the Gospel to all the world. That is our duty—to teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever he has commanded, and he says, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

I leave my blessing with you, my dear fellow workers. Our hearts are full of pride—righteous pride—for the brotherhood exemplified last night by those young boys of the Aaronic Priesthood, and tonight by the tens of thousands of men holding the Melchizedek Priesthood.

I pray God to give us power, to enlighten our minds, quicken our understandings, give us good judgment under all conditions, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Will Bishop S. E. Abbott call Boise 4-2906. We will excuse you right at this moment.

They report that in the Salt Lake Tabernacle tonight we have 7,085 present. I thought we had more. It is crowded to capacity. We should have counted those in the doorways. In the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall we have 2,272; in the 139 groups reporting in, 29,046, or a total of 38,403 men in the Priesthood Meeting tonight.

We thank Brother Condie and members of the Choir for the excellent singing tonight. I do not know if we have had anything better than that second song which you gave us.

The Brethren of the Council of the First Presidency and the Twelve receive recommendations from you presidents of stakes every week about releasing bishops and recommending new bishops. Occasionally we have as a reason for releasing bishops, length of service. Sometimes that is a good reason, but other times it does not seem to the Brethren that it is a sufficiently valid reason to release a good bishop who has served perhaps only a few years—two or three or four years. Five years is sometimes considered quite a length of time. Some of you brethren who are past 70 will remember that bishops served 15, 20 and 25 years, and were real leaders in their social and political circles, too.

Now, five years is quite a long time because the bishop in this day has more to do than a bishop had at that time. He has a lot of work, but don't release bishops just because they have had two or three years at it—five years, 10 years,—let's get up to 20. If you have a good bishop most of your troubles are over. Isn't that true? A bishop who uses his counselors wisely, who has an influence over the young people of the ward, who has an influence in business circles, I tell you, he exerts a good influence spiritually.

The Choir will sing, "Sweet Hour of Prayer," conducted by Richard P. Condie, after which Elder A. Lewis Elggren, formerly president of the Western States Mission, will offer the closing prayer.

The session at 10:00 tomorrow morning will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. The Tabernacle Choir broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Those desiring to attend the Tabernacle Choir broadcast must be in their seats at 9:15 a.m.

We will now hear, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

The benediction was pronounced by A. Lewis Elggren, formerly president of the Western States Mission.

Conference adjourned until Sunday morning, October 12, at 10:00.

THIRD DAY MORNING MEETING

(For a full report of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, see pages 130-131.)

The Sunday morning session of the General Conference convened promptly at 10 o'clock, following the Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcast, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the meeting.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral music for this session, Richard P.

Condie conducting, Frank W. Asper at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Frank W. Asper at the organ, will open these services by singing, "Hear My Cry, O God." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Nathan Eldon Tanner, president of the Calgary Stake.

Sunday, October 12

Third Day

Singing by the Choir, "Hear My Cry, O God."

Elder Nathan Eldon Tanner, president of the Calgary Stake, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The opening prayer has been offered by Elder Nathan Eldon Tanner, president of the Calgary Stake. The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "The Lord Is My Shepherd," with Richard P. Condie conducting.

The Choir sang, "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

My brethren and sisters, please believe me that never before have I felt so keenly the need of your sympathetic co-operation, and particularly the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord. I have in mind and in my heart the feeling that the religious influence, sincere religious influence in the heart, or the life of the individual, is the most refining influence in the world. That spirit has actuated each one, I am sure, who has spoken to us in previous sessions of this conference, and I should like to emphasize that with your help and the inspiration of the Lord in the few remarks that I make on this occasion.

It is a wonderful influence—to see this vast audience, to realize that the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall are also crowded, and that tens of thousands are listening in by television and radio this morning.

Jesus, in a wonderful prayer—I think it must have been the most impressive ever offered in this world—said these words:

"And now I am no more in the world, but these [referring to the members of the Twelve who knelt with him] are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. . . ."

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." (John 17:11, 15.)

A number of years ago, a stake president upon being honorably released from his position in which he had served well, made the remark: "Now I am reduced to just a humble member." Because he had been released, he felt that he had lost something. Well, he had. He had lost the privilege of serving the members of his stake as president, for to be a stake president, or to hold any other position in the Church, is an honor as well as a great responsibility. But to be a lay member is also a great obligation as well as a great opportunity.

Membership is obtained by baptism, which is at once a burial and a birth—a burial of the old person, with all his frailties, faults, and sins, if any, and a coming forth to walk in a newness of life. Backbiting, faultfinding, slander, profanity, uncontrolled temper, avarice, jealousy, hatred, intemperance, fornication, lying, cheating, are all buried. That is part of what baptism by immersion signifies. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," (Ibid., 3:3) said Jesus to Nicodemus. He comes forth to walk in a newness of life, signifying that in the new life ahead there will be an effort to maintain honesty, loyalty, chastity, benevolence, and of doing good to all men.

Wordsworth once said of Milton: "Thy soul was like a star and dwelt apart." That is what membership in the Church does to those who keep the ideals they profess.

James said that, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." (James 1:27.)

It is in this sense of keeping ourselves "unspotted" from the world that the lay members, as all officers, are obligated.

Speaking of the apostles, Jesus prayed, ". . . these are in the world, . . ."

"I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." (John 17:11, 15.)

In the Book of Mormon, in the forty-second chapter of Alma, we are told why the children of God are here in the world—namely, to mingle with the sons of men, to gain an experience that will bring them back to God, but not to partake of the sins of the world. The Savior said to his apostles on the same evening that he offered that beautiful prayer: "... be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16:33.) Going soon to meet his Father, he admonished them to follow his example, praying that God should not take them out of the world, but should keep them from evil.

I have never met a member of the Church who would not express himself, and, if occasion arose, who did not so express himself as being willing to defend his membership if this Church were attacked. I have seen boys apparently indifferent to Church interest on occasions stand out and express defiance of an attack upon the Church. All very commendable, but perhaps at the very moment of that gallant defense there were encroachments upon their souls which weakened their power to defend the truth. Trees that can stand in the midst of the hurricane often yield to the destroying pests that can scarcely be seen with the microscope, and the greatest foes of humanity today are those unseen microscopic microbes that attack the body.

So there are influences at work in society which are undermining the manhood and womanhood of today. It is these unseen influences which come from the world that influence us when we are least prepared to defend ourselves. When we do not withstand the encroachments of these evil influences, we weaken the possibility of defending the Church of Jesus Christ. This is an individual work. What the individuals are, that the aggregate is. Jesus influenced individuals, knowing that if the individual is pure, strong, a thousand individuals would make a strong community, and a thousand communities would make a strong nation. Individual responsibility!

Some time ago, a party of friends were driving over a beautiful valley not far from Salt Lake City. They passed a wheat field. It was an impressive sight to see that dry farm of wheat, and one of the party expressed his admiration at the luxuriant growth in the field, and looked at it in general. There it stood, apart from the sagebrush and barren surroundings. But another member of the party was not satisfied with looking at it in the aggregate. He asked the conveyance to stop. Getting out, he looked at the individual heads of wheat, and exclaimed: "What large heads!" He cut an individual stalk which gave him that impression. But that was not enough. He broke the head, shuffled it in his hands, blew the chaff away, and examined each kernel. "The kernels," continued he, "are plump and solid." After all, the test of that wheat field was the individual kernel of wheat, and so it is in a community—so it is in the Church.

The test of the efficiency of God's people, is an individual one.

"What is each one doing," one should ask, "to foster the group known as the Church of Christ in the world? Is he living so that he is keeping unspotted from the evils of the world?" God wants us here. His plan of redemption, so far as we are concerned, is here, and we, my fellow workers in the Church of Christ, are carrying the responsibility of testifying to the world that God's truth has been revealed; that men and women can live in this world, free and uncontaminated from the sins thereof, following as nearly as humanly possible, Jesus as he walked about two and a half years in his day.

Now, what do we mean by the world? I take it that the world refers to the inhabitants who are alienated from the Saints of God. They are aliens to the Church, and it is the spirit of this alienation from which we should keep ourselves free. We are told by Paul not to conform to the fashions of the world. Timothy was warned not to partake of the evils of the world. One or two I quote:

"Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart." (II Timothy 2:22.) Zion is the pure in heart, we have been told, and the strength of this Church lies in the purity of the thoughts and lives of its workers. Then the testimony of Jesus abides in the soul, and strength comes to each individual to withstand the evils of the world.

Temptations come in our social gatherings. They come to us at our weddings. They come to us in our politics. They come to us in our business relations, on the farm, in the mercantile establishments, in our dealings in all affairs of life. In our home associations, we find these insidious influences working, and it is when they manifest themselves in the consciousness of each individual that the defense of truth should exert itself.

There may never come a great opportunity to defend the Church. We sing:

"It may not be
On the mountain height,
Or over the stormy sea;
It may not be at the battle's front
My Lord will have need of me;
But if, by a still, small voice he calls
To paths that I do not know, I'll answer, dear Lord, with my hand in thine:
I'll go where you want me to go."

When that still, small voice calls us to the performance of duty, insignificant though it may seem, and its performance unknown to anyone save the individual and God, he who responds gains corresponding strength. Temptation often comes in the same quiet way. Perhaps yielding to it may not be known by anyone save the individual and his God, but if he does yield to it, he becomes to that extent weakened and spotted with the evil of the world.

Let me cite an instance: A young missionary was invited to a wedding in a foreign country, at which two of his acquaintances were joined together in bonds of matrimony, the ceremony being performed by a minister of another church. This young man was the only member of the Mormon Church present amidst the one hundred or more guests at the table in the hotel. By each plate was a wine cup, filled to the brim, and also a glass of water. After the ceremony, as the guests were all in their places, the minister arose and said: "Now I propose that the company drink to the health of the newly married couple." They all arose. Now propriety suggested that this young man take up the wine in his wine cup. But he was a missionary. He belonged to a Church that preaches a Word of Wisdom. Science since has proved it to be indeed a Word of Wisdom. He was preaching that, and he was pretending to live it. Here was a time when he could indulge. No one would know—indeed, it seemed to be the act of propriety, but he resisted. Now was the opportunity to defend his Church, and that is what he did. He took the glass of water. Some of his immediate friends by him, dropping their wine cups, followed his example, and at least half a dozen wine glasses remained untouched. Others saw it, and the circumstance furnished an excellent opportunity to converse with those guests upon the Word of Wisdom.

Now, was he humiliated? No. He was strengthened. Were the guests embarrassed? No. Did they feel to condemn him? No. Condemnation was replaced by admiration, as it always is in the hearts of intelligent and God-fearing men and women.

Converts to the truth walk out of the waters of baptism with a glow upon their countenances, especially after confirmation which they have never had before. They realize that they have taken upon themselves the name of Christ, and covenant to walk in accordance with the ideals of his gospel. During Sunday School and Sacrament meetings they are permitted to make a covenant, as does every lay member. In the presence of his fellow members of the Church, he covenants before God that he is willing to take upon him the name of the Son, always to remember him and keep his commandments which he has given him, and by so doing to always have the Spirit of the Lord to be with him. That is true religion.

What a covenant for every lay member! Is he virtuous in thought and action? Is he dealing honestly with his neighbor in the horse and cattle trade, in the purchase of property, in any business transaction? If he believes in the covenants he has made, if he is true to the covenants he has made, if he believes in the efficacy of the Church to which he belongs, he has obligated himself to do these things. If called to a prominent position, it is his duty to be true, and he is more obligated than ever to set an example to others. He may not be called, however, but his membership in the Church of Jesus Christ obligates him to these high ideals. Only in that way can religion become the most influential and potent power in life.

It is generally understood that every member of the Church should be a missionary. He is probably not authorized to go from house to house, but he is authorized, by virtue of his membership, to set a proper example as a good neighbor. Neighbors are watching him. Neighbors are watching his children. He is a light, and it is his duty not to have that light hidden under a bushel, but it should be set up on a hill that all men may be guided thereby.

Here is a good example of how a lay member may preach by example:

Over a hundred years ago a man in his early forties who had already won distinction as a great writer heard of a company of Mormons who would be sailing from the docks in London on a certain day in June 1861. In charge of those Mormons was Elder George Q. Cannon. It was an emigrant ship. This great writer, Charles Dickens, was then writing what afterwards became known as The Uncommercial Traveller. He took his pad and paper, walked down to the docks. You who have read this book will remember how he describes those docks and the various characters around them. He got permission from the captain to go aboard the vessel which had been chartered to carry eight hundred Mormons across the sea on their journey to Great Salt Lake.

He recognized the passengers as some coming from Wales, some from Scotland, some from Yorkshire, and others from near London. He listened to the inspector call their names—Jesse Jobson, Sophronia Jobson—lay members of the Church. Next group: Susanna Cleverly, William Cleverly, etc.—layman after layman passed on board the vessel. Dickens went down to the lower deck and then he came up on the higher deck to investigate. He studied each group and each individual carefully. Among other things he said:

"Nobody is in an ill temper. Nobody is the worse for drink. Nobody swears an oath or uses a coarse word. Nobody appears depressed. Nobody is weeping, and down upon the deck in every corner where it is possible to find a few square feet to kneel, crouch, or lie in, people in every unsuitable attitude for writing letters, are writing letters." Then he says: "Now I have seen emigrant ships before this day in June, and these people are so strikingly different from all other people I have seen in like circumstances whom I have ever seen that I wonder aloud, 'What would a stranger suppose these emigrants to be?'" Then he adds: "What is in store for the poor people on the shores of the Great Salt Lake? What happy delusions they are laboring under now. On what miserable blindness their eyes may be opened then, I do not pretend to say. But I went on board their ship to bear testimony against them if they deserved it, as I fully believed they would. To my great astonishment, they did not deserve it; and my predispositions and tendencies must not affect me as an honest witness. I went over the Amazon's side feeling it impossible to deny that so far some remarkable influence had produced a remarkable result, which better known influences have often missed."

My dear fellow workers, lay members of the Church of Jesus Christ, what would have happened to this one hundred-year-old testimony by a world-renowned author if those members of the Church, Brother Jobson, Sister Jobson, and those other humble people from Wales, had not observed the principles of good conduct in the Church? What would have happened if they had taken the Lord's name in vain? If they had taken an oath? If Charles Dickens had seen them quarreling? Instead, not an oath did he hear. He saw no quarreling, heard no bickering. He was compelled to say: "Some remarkable influence had produced a remarkable result in the lives of these English people, which better known influences have often missed."

In other words, some influence had changed men's lives and made women and children better than they had ever been before. That is the mission of the gospel of Jesus Christ—to make evil-minded men and women good, and to make good men and women better; in other words, to change men's lives, to change human nature.

Sunday, October 12

Beverley Nichols (and I repeat what I have said before), author of The Fool Hath Said, writes impressively on changing of human nature: "You can change human nature. No man who has felt in him the Spirit of Christ, even for half a minute, can deny this truth, the one great truth in a world of little lies. You do change human nature, your own human nature, if you surrender it to him. To deny this is only to proclaim yourself as an uneducated fool.

"Human nature can be changed, here and now.

"Human nature has been changed, in the past.

"Human nature must be changed, on an enormous scale, in the future, unless the world is to be drowned in its own blood.

"And only Christ can change it. . .

"Twelve men did quite a lot to change the world nineteen hundred years ago. Twelve simple men, with only the wind to bear them over the seas, with only a few pence in their pockets, and a shining faith in their hearts! They fell far short of their ideal; their words were twisted and mocked; and false temples were built over their bones, in praise of a Christ they would have rejected. And yet, by the light of their inspiration, many of the world's loveliest things were created, and many of the world's finest minds inspired.

"If twelve men did that nineteen hundred years ago, what might not twelve men do today? For God has now given us the power of whispering across space, of transmitting our thoughts from one end of the earth to another. What shall we whisper—what shall we think? That is the question!"

To be just a lay member of the Church means that every man is a Christian gentleman, that every husband is true to the ideals of chastity, that every young boy and every young girl refrains from indulgence in tobacco, in strong drink, and keeps himself or herself free from the sins of the world. That is what Mormonism means in daily life. If you are called upon to render service in any position, render it. If you are released, you will accept your release, always remembering that the Church is established for your benefit, and the benefit and happiness of your children and your children's children. If you will live in accordance with those humble principles under the covenants you made at the water's edge, and since that time in Sacrament meetings, and many of you in the House of God, you will fill a noble mission, and God will reward you.

May every member of the Church experience this transformation in this life, and so live that others, seeing his good deeds, may be led to glorify our Father in heaven, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brothers and sisters and friends: I have sought earnestly to prepare myself for this occasion and now that it has come my hope and prayer, in which I ask you to join, is that we may continue to enjoy the sweet influence we have felt while listening to the great message of President McKay.

As I stand before you this morning I realize that many of you, unseen by me, are listening in on radio and television. You are most welcome. Indeed, we feel complimented by your participation with us. As I speak I shall have you in mind, particularly you who may not be members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

If you have been with us during the last hour you have heard, and perhaps seen, President David O. McKay deliver a most timely and inspirational address. Moved by it, as I know you were, perhaps you will be even more impressed if I tell you something about his high and holy calling.

You have already observed that he is an unusual personality—tall, straight, dignified, and gracious. Through a devoted lifelong service to his God and to his fellow men he has partaken so deeply of the divine nature that he is filled with that charity defined by one of the Book of Mormon prophets as the “pure love of Christ.”

Fine as he is in his own right, the great office to which he has been called adds to his stature. For he is not just the presiding officer of an ordinary church, he is the rightful successor to the Prophet Joseph Smith, Jr. He is God’s prophet and personal representative in the earth. Just as Peter was the president of the Church of Jesus Christ of former-day saints, so President McKay is today the president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He is the President of the priesthood of that Church. He is in fact and in truth a prophet, seer, and revelator. To this high station he was called through revelation from heaven. He was not appointed nor elected to it by men.

In 1906, under divine inspiration, President Joseph F. Smith, then God’s personal representative and mouthpiece in the earth, laid his hands upon President McKay and conferred upon him the holy apostleship with all its gifts and powers. Pursuant to the order of God’s Holy Priesthood which is the government operative in the Church of Christ, he was, in April 1951, sustained in and ordained to his present high office.

President Joseph F. Smith, who conferred the apostleship upon President McKay, had received his authority in like manner from President Brigham Young. President Young had received his authority from Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith, Jr.

And who was Joseph Smith, Jr.? He was none other than God’s great prophet of the restoration.

At the head of every gospel dispensation the Lord has placed one of his mighty sons—Adam, Noah, Abraham, for example. Jesus Christ, himself, stood at the head of the Dispensation of the Meridian of Time. Joseph Smith, Jr., than whom none of these save Jesus only was greater, was appointed and ordained in the heavens to head this last and greatest dispensation, the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, into which, as rivers into a mighty ocean, flow all former dispensations. Joseph Smith was and is to modern Israel what Moses was to ancient Israel, leader, law-giver, prophet, seer, and revelator.

You will recall that John the Beloved saw in vision an “. . . angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people.” (Revelation 14:6.) Joseph Smith was the person to whom that angel came.

Born of humble parents, he lived less than thirty-nine years. In June 1844, he died a martyr, sealing with his own blood his witness to the truth, even the gospel of Jesus Christ, which through him God had restored to earth for the benefit of all men.

This gospel has often been spoken of as a way of life. This however is not quite accurate. Consisting as it does of the principles and ordinances necessary to man’s exaltation, it is not just a way of life, it is the one and only way of life by which men may accomplish the full purpose of their mortality.

The gospel begins with God and man’s relationship to him.

In the early 1800’s, the days of the Prophet’s youth, no living man had a correct understanding of God. Professed believers knew no more about him than did the Athenians who posted inscriptions to the “Unknown God.”

Stirred by a religious revival, moved with a sincere desire to know which, if any, of the contending sects was right and relying upon the promise of James that, “If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him” (James 1:5), Joseph Smith in simple faith and earnest prayer sought wisdom from God.

The time was spring, 1820. Joseph was then in his fourteenth year.

Third Day

The place was Palmyra, Western New York state.

The result: God the Eternal Father and his Son Jesus Christ appeared to him. "I saw two Personages," he said, "whose brightness and glory defy all description." These two Personages spoke to him and called him by name. He heard their voices and asked them questions. They gave him answer. (Pearl of Great Price, Joseph Smith 2:17.)

When he came out of that sacred interview he knew with certainty the nature of God. He had seen and conversed with him. From him he had received a personal introduction to his resurrected Son Jesus Christ.

In after years Joseph referred to God as an "exalted man," and said that both he and the Son were personages of flesh and bone, as tangible as man. (D & C 130:22.)

Through subsequent revelations he learned that the relationship between God and men is that of parent and children. "The inhabitants" of the "worlds" . . . "are begotten sons and daughters unto God," said the Lord to him in one of the revelations. (Ibid., 76:24.)

The Prophet further learned through communication from heaven that as the begotten children of God we are endowed with the potential to become like him, even as mortal children may become like their mortal parents. He came to understand the high ideal projected by the Savior, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matt. 5:48.)

Not only did Joseph Smith receive through divine revelation knowledge concerning God, man's relationship to him, the doctrine of eternal progression, and all the other glorious principles and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ upon obedience to which man's exaltation is conditioned, he was also divinely commissioned to organize, and again establish upon earth, the Church of Jesus Christ; the organization through which these principles and ordinances can be authoritatively taught and administered. To enable him to do so he was endowed with the Holy Priesthood which is delegated authority to act in the name of God.

John the Baptist, who held the keys of the Aaronic Priesthood in the days of Jesus, now a resurrected person, came to earth and laid his hands upon the heads of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery and conferred upon them "the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins." (D & C 13.)

Peter, James, and John, who as the presidency of Christ's Church in the apostolic dispensation held the keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood, came and conferred this priesthood and the keys thereof upon Joseph and Oliver. Other holy beings delivered to them gospel keys which they had received and held in former dispensations. For example, in April of 1836, Moses "committed unto . . . [them] the keys of the gathering of Israel . . ." and the restoration of the ten tribes. Elias ". . . committed the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham," and "Elijah the prophet, who was taken to heaven without tasting death, stood before [them] . . . and said: Behold, the time has fully come, which was spoken of by the mouth of Malachi—testifying that he [Elijah] should be sent, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord come—To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers, lest the whole earth be smitten with a curse—Therefore, the keys of this dispensation are committed into your hands; and by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is near, even at the doors." (Ibid., 110:11-16.) Thus was the gospel for the salvation of the dead restored.

Having thus received from heavenly beings the foregoing and other endowments, Joseph Smith the prophet and his associate Oliver Cowdery conferred them upon the members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles as they were directed by the Lord to do. Brigham Young, one of the original Twelve succeeded the Prophet Joseph as president of the Church. President David O. McKay, as already pointed out, is today the rightful successor to the Prophet Joseph Smith. He now holds all the priesthood, keys, and powers received by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Now, my beloved brothers and sisters and friends, it is our solemn obligation and great joy to testify to you that these things are so. They are not "cunningly devised fables." They are realities of the utmost significance. We know them to be true with the same certainty that Peter knew Jesus was the Christ when, in answer to the Master's question, "But whom say ye that I am?" he boldly declared, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This he knew, said Jesus, because his Father in heaven had revealed it unto him. The conviction with which we speak was obtained in the same way. (Matt. 16:15-16.)

In like manner every child of God if he will but do the work as Jesus said, may know of the divinity of the mission of the Prophet Joseph Smith and that President David O. McKay is now his legal successor; he may likewise know that the gospel as restored through the Prophet Joseph is the gospel of Jesus Christ, that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the repository of that gospel, that the Church possesses the priesthood of God and the gifts of the Holy Spirit of God and that to the Church God has given the commission and the power to preach the gospel and administer all the ordinances necessary to the salvation and exaltation of us, his children.

The Lord is no respecter of persons. He himself has said that, "... every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am." (D & C 93:1.)

If enough people can be brought to this knowledge they will exercise such power for righteousness that the strifes and contentions of this world will melt away as the hoarfrost before the burning rays of the rising sun. Upon the slim prospect that such will be the case hangs the issue of the preservation or termination of our present civilization.

To provide an escape from our threatened destruction was one of the reasons specified by the Lord for restoring the gospel. "... knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth," he said, "I the Lord, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments." (Ibid., 1:17.) Obedience to the commandments here referred to—the principles and ordinances of the gospel—constitute the sure and only means of escaping the impending calamity. That the peoples of the earth will avail themselves of this means of escape is by no means certain. But whether they do or whether they do not they who know the truth are not dismayed, for they know that the promised blessings do not depend upon the conduct of others and that that peace promised by the Savior flows into the heart of every soul who keeps his commandments regardless of what others do. Even as Jesus "endured the cross" "for the joy that was set before him," (Hebrews 12:2) so his true disciples are sustained in their trials by an inner peace and the glorious hope and assurance of eternal life. Such are the fruits of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Of these glorious gospel truths I bear humble and solemn witness. To each of you I extend an urgent invitation to "Come listen to a prophet's voice,
And hear the word of God,
And in the way of truth rejoice,
And sing for joy aloud.
We've found the way the prophets went
Who lived in days of yore;
Another prophet now is sent This knowledge to restore."

—Joseph J. Daynes

God bless you, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He who has given the address to which we have just listened is Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve. The Choir and Congregation will now sing, "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet." Elder Condie will lead us.

After the singing, we will hear from Elder Ezra Taft Benson.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSONOf the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

My beloved brethren and sisters and friends, humbly and gratefully I stand before you in response to the call of him whom we sustain as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, and President of the Church. With all my heart I endorse and rejoice in the counsel received at this conference.

About a month ago our beloved leader, President David O. McKay, delivered an inspiring prayer at the dedication of the London Temple.

As an introduction to what I trust the Lord will be pleased to have me say today, I quote a short paragraph from that memorable prayer:

"Next to life, we express gratitude for the gift of free agency. When thou didst create man, thou placed within him part of thine Omnipotence and bade him choose for himself. Liberty and conscience thus became a sacred part of human nature. Freedom not only to think, but to speak and act, is a God-given privilege."

Our heritage of freedom is as precious as life itself. It is truly a God-given gift to man. Since the time of the council in heaven, the fight of liberty-loving people for freedom has continued.

Free agency is an eternal principle vouchsafed to us in the perfect law of liberty—the gospel of Jesus Christ. Freedom of choice is more to be treasured than any earthly possession. It is guaranteed in our heaven-inspired Constitution. Yes, freedom is an inherited, inalienable, divine gift to men.

When the Savior of mankind wished to impress on his hearers the fruits of his teaching, he used these words: ". . . the truth shall make you free." (John 8:32.)

We are moral agents with freedom to choose between right and wrong.

Past material advances have been the fruit of our freedom—our free enterprise system—our American way of life—our God-given freedom of choice. The progress of the future must stem from this same basic freedom.

Because our forefathers fought for the ideal of freedom; because our fathers preserved that ideal through our free enterprise system under our God-given free agency; because they were willing to make religion the vital force of daily living, all of us have climbed through the years to new heights of well-being and inner strength.

But it is not only in the moral choice of right and wrong that man is free. Among the relentless quests of human history, is the quest for political freedom. When Patrick Henry shouted his immortal "Give me liberty or give me death," he did not speak idly. When at Philadelphia in 1776, the signers of the Declaration of Independence affixed their signatures to that sacred document, they, in a very real sense, were choosing liberty or death. Not one of them but knew full well that if the revolution failed, if the fight for freedom should come to naught, they would be branded as rebels and hanged as traitors.

The inspired founding fathers formulated a system of government with checks and balances protecting the freedom of the people. But even this was not enough. The first order of the new congress was to draw up a Bill of Rights—ten amendments guaranteeing for all time the fundamental freedoms that the American people insist are theirs by the will of God, not by the will of government.

Yes, the founders of this nation bequeathed to us a heritage of freedom and unity that is our most priceless political possession.

But to be enjoyed, freedom must be won continually. The major responsibility of government is to guard the lives and safeguard the freedom of its citizens. Yet even in the operation of government—especially big government—there are real dangers to our freedom.

Today the scope and variety of governmental operations have become amazingly wide. We are touched by government from before we are born until after we die. Government impinges on our lives every hour of the day and night.

Most of these governmental activities are helpful in greater or lesser degree, of course. But we must face the central problem of just how much of our lives, of our freedom, of our economy, and of our society, we want to entrust to government.

And we must face the further fact of just what division of functions we want to make between Washington and our state capitals. We must be aware of the price we pay when we place more and more of our lives in the hands of centralized government.

It is high time we awakened to the dangers of excessive government in business and in agriculture. It is time we realized the perils of too great a centralization of power, and too much dependence on public agencies.

We have seen in the past quarter century a tremendous shift from individual to governmental responsibility in many phases of economic and social life. We have seen a rapid shift of responsibility from the states to the federal government.

The magnitude of these changes is revealed by a few simple figures. Twenty-five years ago the federal government received one-fourth of all the taxes collected in the United States. Today the federal government—in spite of the biggest tax cut in history of $7,400,000,000 (7.4 percent) in 1954—collects not one fourth but three-fourths of all our taxes. Twenty-five years ago all taxes, federal, state and local, took 14 percent of our national income. Today taxes take 31 percent.

I recognize that there have been reasons for doing more things through government, and for doing them from Washington. Fighting first a prolonged depression and then a war, unavoidably shifted responsibility to the federal government. The shrinking of time and distance and the growing interdependence of our economic lives have all contributed to a centralization of authority at the national capital.

Yet, deep in their hearts, the American people instinctively know that great concentration of power is an evil and a dangerous thing. They do not need to have it proved.

What lies behind this conviction? Basically, it is an intuitive knowledge that, sooner or later, the accumulation of power in a central government leads to a loss of freedom. Once power is concentrated, even for helpful purposes, it is all there, in one package, where it can be grabbed by those who may not be helpful in its use.

If power is diffused, this cannot happen. This is why the founders of our country carefully divided power between the state and federal levels. Nothing has happened in the meantime to call in question the validity of this arrangement.

Our traditional federal-state relationship, we must never forget, starts with a general presumption in favor of state and individual rights. Under the constitutional concept, powers not granted to the federal government are reserved to the states or to the people.

Many forces work toward the concentration of power at federal level. It somehow seems easier to impose so-called "progress" on localities than to wait for them to bring it about themselves. Raids on the federal treasury can be all too readily accomplished by an organized few over the feeble protests of any apathetic majority. With more and more activity centered in the federal government, the relationship between the costs and the benefits of government programs becomes obscure. What follows is the voting of public money without having to accept direct local responsibility for higher taxes.

If this trend continues, the states may be left hollow shells, operating primarily as the field districts of federal departments and dependent upon the federal treasury for their support.

It has been truly said by our present Chief Executive that, "The federal government did not create the states of this Republic. The states created the federal government . . . —if the states lose their meaning our entire system of government loses its meaning and the next step is the rise of the centralized national state in which the seeds of autocracy can take root and grow."

Sunday, October 12

Those are strong but true words.

The history of all mankind shows very clearly that if we would be free—and if we would stay free—we must stand eternal watch against the accumulation of too much power in government.

There is hardly a single instance in all of history where the dictatorial centralization of power has been compatible with individual freedoms—where it has not reduced the citizenry to the status of pawns and mere creatures of the state. God forbid that this should happen in America. Yet I am persuaded that the continuation of the trend of the past twenty-five years could make us pallbearers at the burial of the states as effective units of government.

The drift toward centralization of power is not inevitable. It can be slowed down, halted, reversed.

How? By state and local governments insisting that theirs is the responsibility for problems that are essentially local and state problems—insisting upon this, with the knowledge that responsibility and authority go hand in hand.

Inevitably, in centralized federal programs the money is not as wisely spent as if the states participated financially.

The people come to look to the federal government as the provider, at no cost to them, of whatever is needful.

The truth is that the federal government has no funds which it does not first, in some manner, take from the people. A dollar cannot make the round trip to Washington and back without shrinking in the process. As taxpayers we need to recognize these facts; programs which obscure them are contrary to public interest.

The thought that the federal government is wealthy and the states poverty-stricken is a dangerous illusion. The federal debt is now eight times as great as the combined debt of the forty-eight states. It is difficult for the states to make a strong case for assistance from the federal government when anything the federal government spends must come from the states.

The states not only have rights, they also have responsibilities, and they have opportunities.

In the last analysis, we are not trying to protect one government entity from another. We are trying to protect the rights of individual people. If we ever forget this, the whole process of government is pointless.

George Washington said: "Government is not reason, it is not eloquence—it is force! Like fire, it is a dangerous servant and a fearful master!"

"It is hardly lack of due process," said the Supreme Court, "for the government to regulate that which it subsidizes." But we must remember as President Clark has counseled us that a planned and subsidized economy weakens initiative, discourages industry, destroys character, and demoralizes the people.

Our people must remain free. Our economy must remain free—free of excessive government paternalism, regimentation, and control.

As a nation, we are strong. With the freedom of economic enterprise that we possess, we are able to produce as much industrial goods as all the rest of the world combined—even though we are only six percent of the world's people and possess only six percent of the world's land.

These abundant blessings have come to us through an economic system which rests largely on three pillars:

1. Free enterprise . . . the right to venture . . . the right to choose.
2. Private property . . . the right to own.
3. A market economy . . . the right to exchange.

Working together, we can maintain the strength of these three pillars.

There are some in our midst, nevertheless, who decry free enterprise, who would place business, agriculture, and labor in a government strait jacket.

Our economic order is not perfect, because it is operated by imperfect human beings, but it has given us more of the good things of life than any other system. The fundamental reason is that our economy is free. It must remain free. In that freedom ultimately lies our basic economic strength.

Let us admit the weaknesses that exist. Let us work aggressively to correct them. But never let us make the catastrophic blunder of putting chains on our basic economic freedom.

Yes, our phenomenal material advances have been the fruit of our freedom—our free enterprise system—our American way of life—our God-given freedom of choice.

The progress of the future must stem from this same basic freedom.

Yet these basic American beliefs, principles, and attitudes are threatened today as never before.

By whom are they threatened?

They are threatened by well-meaning but uninformed people who see the shortcomings of our economic system and believe they can legislate them out of existence. They try to reach the promised land by passing laws. They do not understand our economic system and its limitations. They would load it down with burdens it was never intended to carry. As their schemes begin to break down, more and more controls must be supplied. Patch is placed upon patch, regulation is added to regulation and ultimately, by degrees, freedom is lost—without our desiring to lose it and without our knowing why or how it was lost.

Our heritage of freedom is threatened by another group—self-seeking men who see in government legislation a way to obtain special privilege for themselves or to restrain their competitors. They use demagoguery as a smokescreen to deceive. These people have no love for freedom or enterprise. They would bargain away their birthright for a mess of pottage. They would learn the value of freedom only after it was gone.

A third, still much smaller group is dedicated to the overthrow of the economic and social system that is our tradition. Their philosophy does not stem from Jefferson, but is foreign to our shores. It is a total philosophy of life, atheistic, and utterly opposed to all that we hold dear as a great Christian nation. These men understand our system thoroughly—and they hate it thoroughly. They enlist innocent but willing followers from the uninformed and the unprincipled. Through rabble-rousing and demagoguery they play upon the economic reverses and hardships of the unsuspecting. They promise the impossible, and call black white, and mislead with fallacies masqueraded as truth.

If we lose our freedoms, it will be to this strange and unlike coalition of the well-intentioned, the slothful, and the subversives.

It will be because we did not care enough—because we were not alert enough—because we were too apathetic to take note while the precious waters of our God-given freedom slipped—drop by drop—down the drain.

Heaven forbid that this should come to pass!

Let us remember that we are a prosperous people today because of a free enterprise system founded on spiritual, not material values. It is founded on freedom of choice—free agency—an eternal God-given principle.

The founding fathers, inspired though they were, did not invent the priceless blessing of individual freedom and respect for the dignity of man. No, that priceless gift to mankind sprang from the God of heaven and not from government. Yes, the founding fathers welded together the safeguards as best they could, but freedom must be continually won to be enjoyed. Let us never forget these facts.

This is America—the land of opportunity! A land choice above all other lands. Let us keep it so!

We, here in America, as Theodore Roosevelt said a half century ago, "hold in our hands the hope of the world, the fate of the coming years, and shame and disgrace will be ours if in our eyes the light of high resolve is dimmed, if we trail in the dust the golden hopes of men."

With God's help the light of high resolve in the eyes of the American people must never be dimmed! Our freedom must—and will—be preserved.

Yes . . . this is a choice land—choice above all others. Blessed by the Almighty, our forebears have made and kept it so. It will continue to be a land of freedom and liberty as long as we are able to advance in the light of sound and enduring principles of right. To sacrifice such principles for momentary expediency—often selfishly motivated—is to endanger our noble heritage and is unworthy of this great American people.

Sunday, October 12

Third Day

With all my heart I love this nation. I have lived and traveled abroad just enough to make me appreciate rather fully what we have here. To me, this is not just another nation. This is not just one of a family of nations. This is a nation with a great mission for the benefit and blessing of liberty-loving people everywhere. It is my firm conviction that the Constitution of this land was established by men whom the God of heaven raised up unto this very purpose.

The days ahead are sobering and challenging and will demand the faith, prayers, and loyalty of every American. Our challenge is to keep America strong and free—strong socially, strong economically, and above all, strong spiritually, if our way of life is to endure. There is no other way. Only in this course is there safety for our nation.

God grant we may resolutely follow this course in humility and faith, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Sterling W. Sill will now speak to us.

ELDER STERLING W. SILL

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

One of the most important businesses in the world is the business of holding conventions. This week in every important center in this and other countries men and women will be assembling in groups to discuss their problems, exchange ideas, and develop techniques for accomplishment. I have had an interesting experience during these past few months of meeting with several occupational groups and listening to them discuss their interests. After each experience I have thought how much more interesting, and how tremendously more important, are the things that we discuss in the Church, where we meet and talk about God and eternal life and how to build character and godliness into our own lives.

All education is primarily about ourselves. We study medicine to learn how to keep ourselves well physically. Through the studies of the mind—psychology and psychiatry—we learn how to keep ourselves well mentally. Agriculture is how we feed ourselves. The social studies teach us to live together, successfully. We study law to try to keep ourselves out of trouble. Then we have this important field of religion by use of which we look out for our spiritual welfare.

The biggest problems involved in any of these fields center in us. Probably the thing that we know less about than anything else in the world is our own individual selves. You can ask a man many questions about science, invention, or history, and he will answer you. But if you ask him to write out an analysis of himself, to tell you about his mind and soul qualities, or if you ask him how he became the kind of man he is—you may not get very good answers. Or suppose that you ask him where he came from, why he is here, or where he is going. What kind of answer do you think you would get? How long do you think it would take someone to get to a given destination if he didn't know where he was going or why the journey was being made? "The Big Three" among life's questions are: Whence? Why? Whither?

The old Persian philosopher Omar Khayyam wrestled long and hard with these questions without getting any very satisfactory answers. He summarizes his conclusions as follows:

I came like Water, and like Wind I go.

Into this Universe, and why not knowing Nor whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing:

And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
I know not whither, willy-nilly blowing.

Up from Earth's Centre through the seventh Gate

I rose, and on the Throne of Saturn sate,
And many a Knot unravel'd by the Road;

But not the Master Knot of Human Fate.

There was a Door to which I found no
Key:

There was a veil past which I could not see.

(Rubaiyat, Stanza 28-29, 31-32.)

Shakespeare's Macbeth gave his opinion of the importance and purpose of existence by saying,

"It [Life] is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." (Macbeth, Act V, Sc. 5.) And Hamlet added,

"How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable, seem to me all the uses of this world! . . . 'Tis like an unweeded garden, that goes to seed; things rank and gross in nature possess it merely." (Hamlet, Act I, Sc. 2.)

What I would like to say this morning is that some of the most stimulating ideas ever known in the world are the thrilling answers to the big three given in the revelations of the Lord.

Our lives have been divided into three general periods. First there was a long pre-mortal existence when we lived as the spirit children of God. This is followed by a brief mortality. Then comes an everlasting immortality. There is a definite purpose to be accomplished in each of these periods, and our success in each depends upon what we did in those periods preceding. In this respect we might compare life with a three-act play. If you came into the theatre after the first act had been finished and left before the third act began, you might not understand the play. For about the same reasons this life, taken by itself, simply did not make sense to Hamlet, Macbeth, or Omar Khayyam. Yet each period has great significance.

The Lord has said, "And they who keep their first estate shall be added upon; and they who keep not their first estate shall not have glory in the same kingdom with those who keep their first estate; and they who keep their second estate shall have glory added upon their heads for ever and ever." (Abr. 3:26.)

In order to make an intelligent road map for the accomplishment of our lives we need to know what happened in the first act. We also need to understand the tremendous importance of those purposes to be achieved in the second act. And we need to know many things about the third act—and we need to know them before the third act begins. I have a relative who when she reads a book always reads the last chapter first. She wants to know where she is going before she gets started. And that is a pretty good idea to apply to our own future. An intelligent "pre-view" of the third act can be all-important to the final outcome. But first, suppose that we go back and review briefly the first act.

In the pre-existence, as in the two other periods, Jesus is our example. Nothing could be plainer from the scriptures than that the life of Christ did not begin at Bethlehem, nor did it end on Calvary. It is equally true that our lives do not begin or end within the narrow boundaries of mortality. The first things we knew about ourselves were in the grand council in heaven where our own future was being discussed. You were there; God was there; all the spirit children of God were there. Then we walked by sight. We have all seen God; he is our father; he was helping to prepare us for the great experiences of our second estate.

All life is primarily a preparation. We prepare for school; we prepare for marriage; we prepare for our life's work; we prepare for death. Our pre-existence was also a preparation. It was the childhood of our immortality. We had come to a place in our preparation where all young people always come, where it is desirable for them to move away from the homes of their parents where they can be by themselves. Even though their newly-established homes may lack some of the advantages of the homes of their parents, it is still important for them to learn to stand on their own feet, to be tested, and proven and tried. In our own case, God wanted us to see good and evil side by side and learn to make the right choices on our initiative. We would have far more freedom in this if we were living by ourselves than in the more immediate presence of God.

In the grand council our second estate was explained to us. An earth was to be created to serve as our new home. We were to be given wonderful, beautiful bodies of flesh and bones without which we could not have a fulness of joy. For the first time in our existence we were to be endowed with the powers of procreation. We were to have the privilege of organizing a family to last through time and eternity. This should be bound together by the authority of the priesthood and sealed and sanctified in the temple of the Lord. We were to have the opportunity to gain experience in exercising our free agency to help us to become sovereign souls. At this grand council the Savior was selected and ordained to come to the earth and redeem us from our sins.

Abraham, in telling of a vision that he was given of the pre-existence said,

"Now the Lord had shown unto me, Abraham, the intelligences that were organized before the world was; and among all these there were many of the noble and great ones.

"And God saw these souls that they were good, and he stood in the midst of them and he said, These I will make my rulers; for he stood among those that were spirits, and he saw that they were good, and he said unto me: Abraham, thou art one of them; thou wast chosen before thou was born." (Abr. 3:22-23.)

Adding to Abraham's statement that there were many noble and great who were ordained to positions of responsibility, Joseph Smith indicates that we were also ordained. He said, "Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of this earth was ordained to that very purpose in the grand council in heaven before the world was." (DHC 6:364.)

After this part of our preparation had been completed, we are told that "all the sons of God shouted for joy." (Job 38:7.) I feel certain that if we knew now what we understood perfectly then, we would be willing to go on our hands and knees through life for the opportunity of proving ourselves faithful and deserving of our magnificent opportunities.

Then we came into our second estate through the miracle of birth. There are some who claim to have difficulty in believing in the possibility of a literal physical bodily resurrection. It seems to me that no one should have any problem believing in the eternal life of the body who can believe in its creation through birth to begin with—that two microscopic cells can unite and by a spontaneous process of subdivision create this great masterpiece which is a human being, including body, mind, and personality.

Referring to the Savior's birth, Matthew said: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, "Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." (Matt. 2:1-2.) That is the question that wise men have been asking ever since. Ever since that day nearly two thousand years ago, wise men have been inquiring, "Where can we find Jesus? How can we know the Savior?" For "there is none other name given whereby man can be saved." (D & C 18:23.) The journey of the wise men was over when they had found the king; and so is ours.

Then we enter the third act. Most of the rewards come in the last act. There is where we find "the happy endings." That is also where we discover the tragedies, depending upon the kind of life we have lived in our second estate.

There is an old Greek play written around the fall of Athens. It tells of a Roman general who had captured an Athenian philosopher. The Roman had told the Athenian that he was to be put to death, but the philosopher did not seem greatly disturbed and the Roman thought that probably he didn't understand. And he said to the Athenian that maybe he did not know what it meant to die. The Athenian expressed himself that he understood but he felt the Roman did not understand. He said to his captor:

"Thou dost not know what it is to die, for thou dost not know what it is to live. To die is to begin to live. It is to end all stale and weary work and to begin a nobler and a better. It is to leave the company of deceitful knaves for the society of gods and goodness."

That is our proper objective for the last act. Death is the gateway to immortality. The most important part of life is death. James M. Barrie's little character, Peter Pan, in an extremity cried out bravely, "To die will be an awful big adventure." Who can doubt that it will be so? We live to die, and then we die to live.

Yesterday the singing mothers inspired us with John Howard Payne's immortal verse, "Home, Sweet Home." When this song was written in 1822, John Howard Payne was living in Paris, far away from the old homestead which he knew and loved so well. But he was in the process of preparing to go home for a much-anticipated holiday. He knew, as we know that the happiest holidays are those we go home for. To go home is to go back where you grew up; home is where mother and father are; and John Howard Payne was going home. But it will not be very long before every one of us will also be going home. We will also be going back to where we grew up; we will be going back to where God is, to where our mothers, fathers, and families are.

After the resurrection we will have these wonderful bodies, celestialized and glorified, with quickened senses, amplified powers of perception and vastly increased capacity for understanding, love, and happiness. Not only will our bodies be immortal and celestial but our personalities will be immortal and celestial also. If we have properly prepared during our second estate, then with what enthusiasm we will sing with John Howard Payne, "There is no place like home."

I would like to leave with you my testimony that the gospel of Jesus Christ has been restored to the earth with the authority to administer in all of the ordinances having to do with the celestial kingdom. A great flood of new knowledge has recently come into the world, including three great volumes of new scripture outlining in every detail the answers to the most important questions of our lives. May God help us to understand and live those answers, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles.

As many of you know, and all should know, these services have been on the air by radio and television all throughout these western states. Many will go off promptly at 12 o'clock, and we should like them to hear the strains of music by the Tabernacle Choir, and if we continue to give some notices and expressions of appreciation, they might miss it, so we will change our usual order of business and have our closing song by the Tabernacle Choir at the present time: "How Beautiful Upon The Mountains," conducted by Richard P. Condie.

The closing prayer, following some expressions, will be offered by Elder Glenn E. Nielson, president of the Big Horn Stake.

Selection by the Tabernacle Choir, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains."

President David O. McKay:

We are glad our listening audience heard that wonderful anthem, so inspirational and artistically rendered.

Brethren and sisters, we bring to a conclusion this sixth session of the One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. We express our sincere appreciation to the owners and managers of the many television and radio stations who have offered their facilities to us. We are grateful for this outstanding public service so generously extended. We are grateful also for the attendance of all who are present in the Tabernacle, in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and in other gatherings where this Conference is seen and heard.

We desire to acknowledge the presence this morning of prominent persons, and I am sure all will be pleased to know who many of these are, for we appreciate their interest, not in just attending but in the welfare and advancement of the Church: Senator Arthur V. Watkins; Senator Wallace F. Bennett; Congressman William A. Dawson; Congressman Henry Aldous Dixon; Governor George Dewey Clyde; J. Berkeley Larsen, Lt. Governor of Idaho; Lamont Toronto, Secretary of State; Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of the Brigham Young University; Dr. Homer Durham, vice president of the University of Utah; Dr. Daryl Chase, president of the Utah State University; Dr. John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College; Dr. E. Allen Bateman, State superintendent of Public Instruction; Dr. M. Lynn Bennion, superintendent of Salt Lake City Schools; Mayor Adiel F. Stewart of Salt Lake City; Sherman B. Christensen, Judge of the Federal Court; Dr. A. Ray Olpin, president of the University of Utah; and perhaps others whom we have not seen, nor are able to see.

We appreciate your attendance and interest, and that of all others who have shared in this inspirational gathering. We have received greetings from the president of the Western Canadian Mission. He says: "Reception is excellent. Sincere expression of love from Western Canadian members." Signed, President Parley A. Arave.

The beautiful flowers which you see arranged on the rostrum and pulpit have come from two countries far removed from each other—South Africa and Hawaii. The flowers from South Africa are several varieties of the protea, the national flower of South Africa. These flowers are unique inasmuch as South Africa is the only place in the world where they are found, and they are as fresh this morning as when they left South Africa. Brother Glen G. Fisher, president of the South African Mission, informs us that the branch Relief Society sisters throughout the South African Mission have put on cake sales and made individual contributions, and have manifested a keen interest in this project in order that they might send these rare flowers for our enjoyment during Conference. The entire South African Mission membership will have more than common interest in our Conference, since at this very time they are enjoying a visit from Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve. Sister Lee is accompanying him on this tour.

The other flowers, the beautiful red antheriums, come to us, we are informed by President Jay A. Quealy, Jr. of the Honolulu Stake, with the love and greetings from the members of the Honolulu Stake. With all our hearts we express appreciation and thanks to the members of the Church in these far-off lands for these lovely flowers bearing their messages of loyalty, affection, and greetings. Our thoughts and best wishes will be with them as we enjoy the beauty of these flowers this October Conference.

We desire to make mention of the General Priesthood Meeting which was the fifth session of this General Conference. This meeting was held in the Tabernacle last evening with overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, and was relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood assembled in 139 Church buildings from coast to coast and in Canada. There were present or listening over direct wire from the Tabernacle 38,403 members of the Priesthood.

We have heard the singing of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting and Frank W. Asper at the organ. We express appreciation to these men and women who give so generously of their time and talents, and we join unitedly in praying that they will have outstanding success in the approaching Concert Tour that they are about to make.

We shall now be dismissed by Elder Glenn E. Nielson offering the closing prayer.

President Glenn E. Nielson of the Big Horn Stake offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference convened promptly at 2:00 p.m. Sunday afternoon, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for this session of the Conference.

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City, Utah, in the concluding and seventh session of the One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. For those who are unable to enter the building, we announce that these services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall over television.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder Richard P. Condie conducting, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Tabernacle Choir singing, "To Music," with Jay E. Welch conducting.

The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Lawrence D. Olpin, president of the Lorin Farr Stake.

---

The Choir sang "To Music," Jay E. Welch conducting.

Elder Lawrence D. Olpin, president of the Lorin Farr Stake, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Lawrence D. Olpin, president of the Lorin Farr Stake, has just offered the invocation.

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Mountains," conducted by Richard P. Condie.

Our first speaker, following the Choir, will be Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER MARION D. HANKS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Through this conference I have been feeling a great warm surge of gratitude—gratitude that I belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, gratitude that there has come to me, in spite of my limitations, the blessing of service and the blessing of learning to know and to love so many of you, to feel your strength, understand your purpose, and observe your dedication.

I have been grateful for the marvelous sermons, the great themes of truth which have been here uttered. I was very grateful this morning as these strong and forthright and inspired messages went out to the world.

Last night I read on the editorial page of the Deseret News an account of a survey, actually a clinical research inquiry, of a number of men incarcerated in the Utah State prison as compared with an equal number outside the prison who were of the same general background as to age, intellect, social, and economic circumstances, etc. The report re-emphasized strongly the vital importance to the well-being of young people of a home where love and interest are shown, where there are fair rules consistently enforced, where there is a religious atmosphere in the home and religious activity outside it, and where parents set the proper affirmative example.

Since I read the article I have been even more grateful for the home I grew up in, humble as it was in terms of material things; for a loving father, who was called home in our infancy; for a wonderful mother and brothers and sisters through whose love, unselfishness, and co-operative effort I came to enjoy some blessings that they did not have themselves.

I am grateful that I know something about some of the problems that exist in the world and that I have the privilege of counseling, weeping, and sympathizing with some of the people who have them.

I am grateful for the kind of mountains that the choir has just sung about (as well as for other mountains) and that God blesses us with strength enough to climb if we are humble enough.

Recently I have been thinking about three great areas of problems which actually encompass the whole of human experience, the whole of an individual's life, thinking about them in terms of the Church program and the principles of the gospel. We have a lot of youth problems and we know it, difficulties in many fields of youth behavior and experience. Then there is in our communities, and the nation, a great problem with unhappy adults—broken homes, marriages, and lives; increasing incidence of moral decadence, of alcoholism; increasing prison incarcerations and so forth. There is a third problem that I am not sure we have thought much about (perhaps in the Church we do not know as much about it as a problem as some do), and that is the field of geriatrics, the subdivision of medicine dealing with the elderly and the aging, many of whom lose status in the family, community, and business with advancing age.

Some recent experiences have permitted me the privilege of observing and participating in activities having to do with some of these problems. Out of those experiences I have come with increased gratitude to my Heavenly Father that in the graciousness and goodness of his love we have been blessed with the principles, programs, and inspiration which can preserve us from the most serious of these problems, help us overcome them to the measure we find ourselves in them, and lead us, through God's good gifts, to the happiness here and the eternal opportunity hereafter which we are meant to enjoy. There is no occasion today to do more than recognize the existence of the problems and to testify of my deep assurance that through proper parenthood and leadership and instruction, and through a willingness to learn, hearken, and participate, the principles of the gospel and the great programs of the Church will help us avoid or overcome most of the difficulties which beset us.

There is a story in point which I thought of as I read last night. A young man who had lost his father in his earliest years went to an elderly medical man who had been a close friend of his father and asked the doctor what kind of man his father had been. The old doctor answered the question with a question: "Suppose you could have chosen your father—that is, what kind of man he would be—what would your choice have been?"

The young man replied that he would have chosen one who was courageous and forthright and true; a kind, wise, and loving man; a worshiper, worker, and servant of God. He described clearly and forcefully an ideal father, then asked: "Doctor, is that the sort of man my father was?"

Said the doctor. "As your father's friend, let me ask you another question. Is that the sort of man you have chosen to be the father of your own children?" The young man said, "With all my thinking about life and its responsibilities, I confess I have not thought about this important matter in just that way before. Though I had nothing to do with choosing my own father, I have everything to do with choosing what sort of father my own children shall have. I give you my word that I shall think about and act upon it from now on."

My wonderful young friends, in the Church and out of it, you face real challenges and great pressures, but the objectives and opportunities before you are marvelous. When I look at you, I do not see in you the leaders of tomorrow, only; I see what you now are, the boy friends and girl friends, the young husbands and wives of today. In your hands, stretching ahead before you, there are important occasions for decision and choice, decisions that will affect your happiness in this world and your eternal future.

Do you make negative judgments about the parents, leaders and teachers you now have? Have you thought enough about what kind of parents, leaders and teachers you are going to be? These are not far-off challenges, they are upon you; in less time than you can now conceive these blessings and burdens will be yours.

A few weeks ago I sat in an auditorium in the East with some of the leading businessmen in America and heard Brother Benson discuss the Youth Fitness Program now underway across the land. As the viewpoints of the Church were so impressively presented I was again moved with gratitude that through revelation the Lord has blessed us with the principles and the programs which can lead us to effective, participating citizenship in the community and in the kingdom; which, whatever kind of home we came from, can lead us to be the sort of father or mother we would have been pleased to choose had we had the opportunity.

Without the intention or occasion to be detailed, may I mention a principle or two given us by the Lord for our well-being, physically, intellectually, emotionally, socially, and spiritually.

Consider the understanding the Lord has given us as to the nature of this physical body which houses our spirit. "... the spirit and the body are the soul of man." (D & C 88:15.) "For man is spirit. The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receive a fulness of joy.

"The elements are the tabernacle of God; yea, man is the tabernacle of God, even temples; and whatsoever temple is defiled, God shall destroy that temple." (Ibid., 93:33, 35.)

I am grateful to understand that my physical body is an eternal, non-evil component of my eternal soul, and that I have, therefore, a duty to honor and respect and care for it, and to refrain from knowingly imposing upon it any treatment or substances deleterious to it. While I could not choose nor govern the condition of the body into which I came, I have the responsibility to give it the best care I can, and if I do not I am acting in derogation of a great gift of God.

For some time I have wanted to put into the record a statement by Thomas Edison in his autobiography, made in the twilight of his productive life:

"The useful man never leads the easy, sheltered, knockless, unshocked life. At [age] thirty-six he ought to be prepared to deal with realities, and after that until he is sixty he should be able to handle them with a steadily increasing efficiency.

"Subsequently, if he has not injured his body by excess indulgence in any of the narcotics (and by this term I mean liquor, tobacco, tea and coffee), and if he has not eaten to excess, he very likely may continue to be achievably efficient up to his eightieth birthday, and in some cases until his ninetieth."

The testimony of the times corroborates what Edison said, and what the Lord told us—information that has been in our hands for more than sixscore years.

The Lord has blessed us with knowledge that we are under obligation to develop our minds, for "The glory of God is intelligence," (Ibid., 93:36) and "It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance." (Ibid., 131:6.) He has given particular emphasis to spiritual truth, but in addition to charging the early brethren to teach one another the doctrines of the kingdom, he also instructed them to prepare themselves in a wide field of knowledge, including languages, history, and law. In the Church there are the principles and program which can lead us to the possession of minds that are clean and honest, educated, trained, controlled, creative, productive, and useful.

We have received the word of the Lord that "... men are, that they might have joy," (2 Nephi 2:25) and we know that there is joy in responsible relationships with our fellow men. As this is true of other men, it is especially true of our own families. The family, sealed together under the law of God, is the eternal unit, and our own high possibilities in the eternities are contingent upon our relationship with our family, as well as with our Heavenly Father and his other children.

Sunday, October 12

Underlying all that has been revealed to us the Lord has given us to know that we are his children, that life is purposeful and meaningful, and that we are blessed with the possibility of a high destiny. I thank God that I know these things, and I pray that he will bless us to understand that though we may have partaken of some of the problems of the world, though we may have undergone some of the tragedies of the world, there is hope and answer for us in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Though we could not choose or direct in our earliest days the home we grew up in or the parents who bore us, yet we can do something about the sort of parents we are or will be, and about the home our children will grow up in.

I thank the Lord for the good things he has blessed us with, and pray that we may have the wisdom to be steadfast and faithful and to do that which will perpetuate for those who are to come the blessings which the Lord has made available through the principles and programs and inspired leadership of his great Church.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Marion D. Hanks, member of the First Council of Seventy, has just addressed us. We shall now be favored to listen to Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Bruce R. McConkie.

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I feel very grateful, brothers and sisters, for the privilege that is mine to be associated with you in this great conference, and my heart has been made to rejoice in the wonderful messages we have received and the testimonies that have been borne. Not only that, but I have been made very happy to greet so many of you on the block and in the building whom it has been my privilege to meet as I travel through the Church and visit the various stakes of Zion. I have a profound respect and appreciation for the faith of you Latter-day Saints, for the great work you are accomplishing in your own localities. I never return from a conference but what I say to my good wife, "My, the Saints are wonderful," and I thank the Lord that I am a part of this great organization.

It has been my privilege to spend much of my life in the missionary work of the Church. I imagine today that through the courtesy of the radio and television stations there will be many listening in who are not yet members of this Church. I am sure they will be some day when they know what we know about it. I have always said that there is not an honest man or an honest woman in this world who really loves the Lord who would not join this Church if he knew what it was.

Those of us who have had missionary experience know how our hearts have been made to rejoice when we find people who really love the Lord and who want to serve him the way the Lord wants to be served, and they come to a knowledge of the truth. Sometimes we find people who have looked for years and years to find the truth. I had a letter from a man recently, a prominent attorney who had investigated many churches, and when he found "Mormonism," as it is known to him, he said he had found an answer to all of his seeking. And some years ago, in my missionary work, we brought an attorney into the Church. He was an intelligent man. We asked him to talk in one of our conferences, and he said something like this—we had asked him to tell what he had found in Mormonism that appealed to him. He said, "If you have hunted for something all your life until you decided it did not exist, and then you just happen to stumble on to it, you do not need anybody to tell you that you have found it, do you?" He said, "That is what I did when I found Mormonism and the thing about it that is most wonderful to me is the fact that the more I know about it the more wonderful it becomes."

I have a testimony here, copied from a letter from a lady who wrote in to the Bureau of Information for information about the Church. She said she had hunted for fifty-three years to find the truth, and then she told about the various institutions and churches she had investigated, and after getting our literature, she finally joined the Church, and after so doing this is what she wrote:

"I now have a serenity and composure and inner strength and an inward joy which I never before possessed. Do all souls receiving enlightenment exclaim within their silent heart, feeling compassion for a blind, groping, and grieving world, 'O suffering world, I come. I come.'"

The missionaries find ample compensation for the great work they are doing when they see honest souls who seek after righteousness brought to a knowledge of the truth through their instrumentality. The Lord said to the early elders of the Church that if they should labor all their days and bring save one soul unto him, how great would be their joy with that soul in the kingdom of the Father.

I want to bear you witness that many of us have great joy in the companionship of those to whom it has been our privilege to bring the restored gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and I want to say to you that the Latter-day Saints are doing a great work in providing missionaries. It is the most unselfish movement I think this world has ever known. There is no thought of any monetary compensation. Sacrifices are made by young and old alike in order to carry the gospel to those who are yet in darkness, and we invite everyone to join with us.

Sometimes I wonder if we have invited our neighbors and our friends to become a part of us, and if we do, then we will find the joy that comes in being instruments in the hand of the Lord in carrying the truth to them.

President McKay indicated today that we are all missionaries. In fact, he has told us that each of us should be a missionary, and while we are not all called and set apart to go from door to door, we are called by the Lord, for he said: "Let every man who is warned, warn his neighbor," (See D & C 88:81) and that is a call from the Lord, and President McKay has asked that each of us should be a missionary and try to bring someone into the Church.

I repeated that request in a stake conference a few months ago, and a few weeks thereafter, I received a two-page typewritten letter from a young man who was in that conference. He was a son of the stake president. He was only there visiting on an assignment. He said, "Brother Richards, I heard you request each of us to try to bring someone into the Church. I believed that you meant me, so I wrote my wife and said, 'When I come home I have a proposition to make to you,' and the proposition was that they should bring some family into the Church. Then he said to his wife, 'The young man that I work with in the office seems to be quite a fine man, and if you are willing I will invite him and his wife to our home and we will have them for supper.'"

Well, of course when the supper was over they had to talk about something, and you know what they talked about, and the letter was written to tell me the joy he and his wife had because that couple had now joined the Church. I tell you, it will bring great joy into the lives of people when they know what the Church is.

I want to say to you today that my testimony is such that I believe we live in the great day of fulfillment. As I think of the history of the past, two great events stand out paramount above all others in religious history, and all the prophets have looked to those days and testified of them. The first was the coming of the Redeemer of the world, and you will remember that when he came, he took the Holy Scriptures to prove to the people that he had come in fulfillment of the words of the prophets. You remember his statement as he walked along the way toward Emmaus with two of his disciples following his resurrection, and their eyes were holden that they did not recognize him. After he had heard what they had to say and seeing that they did not realize what his mission was, he said, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken," (Luke 24:25) and beginning with Moses and the prophets, he showed them how that in all things the prophets had testified of him. Then he opened their understanding that they might understand the scriptures for all the prophets had looked to that great event.

The second great event is when he shall come in power and great glory in the latter days, to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords, and all of the prophets have looked to our day. I wonder sometimes if we are mindful enough in order to interpret the promises of the prophets. I think of the words of the Savior when he said:

"Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." (John 5:39.)

I like to look upon the scriptures as a blueprint that shows the things that God intended to do, and I think it is a wonderful thing to know what the prophets have had to say, but I think it is more wonderful to live in the day of the fulfilment of the promises of the prophets. The Savior puts his stamp of approval upon the necessity of knowing the scriptures. He said to the Pharisees who endeavored to catch him in his words: "Do you not therefore err because ye know not the scriptures?" (Mark 12:24.)

If we knew the scriptures, we would understand them. Let me give you an illustration. While I was still the Presiding Bishop, we brought the plans of the great Los Angeles Temple to show to the First Presidency. There were eighty-five pages, and we did not have them complete—the electrical work and the heating facilities were not done—eighty-five pages about five feet long and three feet wide. It was glorious to look upon those plans and see that temple, but not a hole had been dug in the ground. Compare that with when we went to the dedication, and in the evening when the floodlights were turned on that magnificent building, it was just as if some ethereal thing had been dropped down from heaven. I thank God that it is my privilege to live in the day of fulfilment of the things that the prophets have foretold for the latter days to prepare the way for the coming of the Lord.

I give you the words of the Apostle Peter. He said:

"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:

"Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

"For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." (II Peter 1:19-21.)

If you will think about that for a minute, and then consider the words of Isaiah where he said that the Lord had proclaimed the end from the beginning, then the prophets have, as it were, drawn a blueprint of what the Lord intended to do, and we live now in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times that has been referred to in this conference, for the Apostle Paul said that the Lord had revealed unto him the mystery of his will,

"That in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him." (Ephesians 1:10.)

I want to say unto you that no other people have a program of uniting all things which are in heaven and which are on earth. We understand this in the great work that is being done by the living for the dead, and that brings us to another great event that was to transpire in the latter days, to which Brother Romney referred this morning—the coming of Elijah the Prophet to turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest he come and smite the earth with a curse. (Mal. 4:5-6.) Who knows anything about that great program of uniting the children on the earth with their parents who have gone beyond except the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, as the Lord has revealed these great truths in our day?

Referring again to the words of Peter where he said, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy," (II Pet. 1:19) I now give you his words on the day of Pentecost to those who had crucified the Lord when he called them back to repentance, saying:

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3:19-21.)

If we believe the Holy Scriptures, as we are admonished to do, and the words of the prophets, we cannot look for the second coming of Christ in power until there is a restitution of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began. I want to say unto you that that is what this Church is, as it has been pointed out in this conference—the restoration of the Holy Priesthood, the re-establishment of the Church of Christ in the earth, founded upon the foundation of apostles and prophets, with Christ our Lord as the chief cornerstone (Eph. 2:20), which God placed in the Church according to the Apostle Paul

"For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

"Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, . . .

"That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." (Ibid., 4:12-14.)

How can anybody look at the Christian world today and see its divided condition and know that the Lord intended that we should come to a unity of the faith, without realizing that we must return again to the organization that he placed in the Church? And what an organization that is, where every man and every man's son can be co-partners, as it were, with the Lord through bearing his Holy Priesthood, to help establish his kingdom in the earth.

If there is to be a restitution of all things, that presupposes that it cannot be a reformation. It also presupposes that the truth did not remain upon the earth. There is not time today for me to go into the prophecies of the falling away, but men of our day have borne witness that the truth is not upon the earth. I like the statement contained in Smith's Bible Dictionary, prepared by seventy-three divines and bible students, in which they say:

"We must not expect to see the Church of Holy Scripture actually existing in its perfection on the earth. It is not to be found thus perfect, either in the collected fragments of Christendom, or still less in any of those fragments."

How wonderful, when seventy-three noted divines trying to find the truth just by reading the scriptures without the living testimony of the Spirit, come to know that the world has drifted away from the teachings of the scriptures. You will recall that great leader among the Baptists, Roger Williams, who resigned as pastor of the oldest Baptist Church in America and gave these reasons:

"There is no regular constituted Church of Christ, on the earth, nor any person authorized to administer any church ordinance, nor can there be until new apostles are sent by the great head of the Church for whose coming I am seeking."

If he had lived in the day of the restoration of the gospel as taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith, he would have known that apostles had been sent again in our day with the same authority, the same organization, the same truths that were taught in the Meridian of Time.

There is not time to discuss all the great truths that we have received through the restoration of the gospel, but if you will think of the things that have been mentioned in this conference: the gathering of Israel, the building of temples, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon—and nobody can read the

Third Day

Bible without knowing that there is a companion volume of scripture that must be united with it, which is to become one in the hands of God—and when you think of a record of over 500 pages of history and words of prophets who have lived upon this land of America, and when you read the promises to Joseph of a new land in the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills, and his blessings which were to be greater than the blessings of his progenitors, you cannot help but wonder why the Lord would have made such promises unto that chosen of the House of Israel, without providing for the recording of the fulfilment of those promises. So we have the record of the fulfilment of all these promises.

I leave you one more passage of scripture before I close, and that is in the third chapter of Malachi, where the Lord said he would send his messenger to prepare the way for his coming, that he would come swiftly to his temple, and who would abide the day of his coming, because he would be as refiner's fire and fullers' soap.

I call attention to the fact that he did not come to his temple in the Meridian of Time, and I ask you today, where is a people in all the world that are building temples to the Most High? You know the record of this Church, the number of temples that have been dedicated in recent years. This great temple that stands upon this block, and yet the churches know not what temples are for, nor do they have a knowledge of the ordinances that are to be performed therein. We would not know either, except that we live in the day that Peter spoke of, to prepare the way of the Lord when there was to be a restitution of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began, truly the day of fulfilment.

In closing I leave you a testimony of a man who sat in my office recently, who spent thirty years as a minister of the gospel. Then he met the Mormon elders. He said, "I had always thought I had as much authority as any man to perform the ordinances of the gospel, until I met the Mormon elders and then I knew that I must accept baptism at their hands." And then he added: "Brother Richards, when I think of how little I had to offer my people as a minister of the gospel compared to what I now have in the fulness of the gospel as it has been restored, I want to go back and tell all my friends what I have found. Now, they will not listen to me. I am an apostate from their church."

But such are the testimonies of people, who, as Jesus said "hunger and thirst after righteousness." He also said:

"My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:16-17.)

I bear you witness, and make the promise to all who are not members of this Church that if they will investigate our message and ask God, the Eternal Father, that they can know beyond a shadow of a doubt that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that the truth has been restored in its fulness to the earth to prepare the way of the coming of the Lord.

This testimony I give to you in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder LeGrand Richards, a member of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. Brother Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Brother LeGrand Richards, one of the forceful and eloquent preachers of righteousness in this latter-day kingdom, has just spoken to us in a powerful manner, setting forth the restoration of the everlasting gospel in our day. Now, if I may be guided by the same Spirit, and be under the same power, I have it in my heart to make a brief expression relative to the stability, growth, and eventual destiny of the great latter-day kingdom that has been established as part of the restitution of all things.

When I speak of the kingdom, I mean the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which, in the most complete, real, literal, and accurate sense, is the kingdom of God on earth. For a text I will read some words originally written by the great prophet Isaiah, words which later were quoted by the resurrected Christ as he ministered among the Nephites. When Jesus quoted these words, he put them in their perspective, in their context. He had just announced that the restitution of all things was to take place; that the gospel was to come again in its fulness; that Israel was to be gathered; and that the kingdom of God on earth was to be established in the last days. Then he quoted these words from Isaiah, words which are addressed to the Church and which specifically describe the stability, growth, and eventual destiny of the Church.

Thus saith the Lord unto the Church of Jesus Christ:

"Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thy habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes;

"For thou [meaning the Church] shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left, and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

"Fear not, for thou [meaning the Church] shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded, for thou shalt not be put to shame; . . ." (3 Nephi 22:2-4.)

"For the mountains shall depart and the hills be removed, but my kindness shall not depart from thee [meaning, of course, the Church], neither shall the covenant of my people be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." (Ibid., vs. 10.)

The everlasting covenant is the gospel. This promise is, then, an assurance that the gospel of Jesus Christ will remain in and be administered by the Church and kingdom as set up and established in this day.

"And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children.

"In righteousness shalt thou be established; [and then this next, pertaining to a yet future day] thou shalt be far from oppression for thou shalt not fear, and from terror for it shall not come near thee.

"Behold, [this pertaining to our day] they [meaning the wicked] shall surely gather together against thee, not by me; [certainly there will be trials, troubles, persecutions, and the like, but having so recognized, then comes this glorious promise and assurance]: whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake. . . ." (Ibid., vs. 13-15.)

"No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." (Ibid., vs. 17.)

Now, I think we all understand that this great latter-day kingdom has been set up for the last time, never again to be destroyed, and that never again will the necessity arise for another and future restoration. The ordinances and principles of salvation, the requirements which men must abide in order to gain a celestial inheritance, are ever, eternally, and always the same. God is no respecter of persons, and every person from Adam to the last man must abide the same identical law in order to qualify for a celestial inheritance.

But there is one great thing about this dispensation which differs from all the dispensations of the past. It is that this time, with the opening of the heavens and the revealing of the gospel in our day, there came the positive, unqualified assurance that the gospel was to remain on earth; that the kingdom was to be secure; that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was to remain among men to prepare a people for the second coming of the Son of man.

We are familiar with the visions that Enoch received. You will recall that he saw our day. He saw the restoration of the gospel, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, truth springing out of the earth and righteousness looking down from heaven. He saw the hosts of scattered Israel gathered to a holy city. He saw the tribulations, the wars, the desolation, the troubles that would prevail in this day, and then the voice of God spoke to him and said: "... great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve." (Moses 7:61.) That is an immutable, positive assurance.

Some things we get, provided we abide the law which entitles us to receive them. Some promises come from the Lord without conditions attached to them. We die whether we like it or not. That is immutably decreed. We will be resurrected and have immortality. There is no question of that; we cannot avoid it. In that same category is the promise that the Lord will preserve his people in this day.

We are familiar with the great vision and revelation that Daniel had, in which he saw the successive kingdoms of the world set up by the power of men's hands, and then finally saw this kingdom, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, set up by revelation, without the hand of man. And then he said that this kingdom would never be given to another people; that it would grow and increase and break in pieces all kingdoms and fill the whole earth.

Well, after the Lord had set up this Church and restored the gospel, he said by his own mouth to the Prophet Joseph Smith: "The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth." (D & C 65:2.) That is an immutable, irrevocable promise. That promise we have.

May I quote one sentence which the Prophet Joseph Smith, writing by revelation and inspiration, included in that famous document, "The Wentworth Letter." He said: "... No unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly, and independent, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country, and sounded in every ear, till the purposes of God shall be accomplished, and the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done." (History of the Church, vol. 4, p. 540.)

You and I are in this kingdom at its beginning. The groundwork is being laid. Out of small beginnings come great things. We have had tremendous progression and growth; we are established and recognized in the world already; but there will be an eventual day when the whole earth will be converted to the truth, when every living soul will come into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We are in the kingdom of God now which is exclusively an ecclesiastical kingdom. This kingdom is going to grow and increase, multiply and abound, and nothing can stop it, until the day comes that it will be both an ecclesiastical kingdom and a political kingdom, and it will govern in all things,—spiritual, civil, temporal, and political. The kingdoms of this world are going to become the kingdom of our God and of his Christ.

President John Taylor said this: "It has been asked . . . whether this kingdom will fail. I tell you in the name of Israel's God it will not fail. I tell you in the name of Israel's God it will roll forth, and that the things spoken of by the holy prophets in relation to it will receive their fulfilment. But in connection with this I will tell you another thing: A great many of the Latter-day Saints will fail, a great many of them are not now and never have been living up to their privileges, and magnifying their callings and their priesthood, and God will have a reckoning with such people, unless they speedily repent." (Gospel Kingdom, p. 137.) He said many similar things.

One more quotation, this one from President Wilford Woodruff:

"When the Lord gave the keys of the kingdom of God, the keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood, of the apostleship, and sealed them upon the head of Joseph Smith, he sealed them upon his head to stay here upon the earth until the coming of the Son of man. Well might Brigham Young say, 'The keys of the kingdom of God are here.' They were with him to the day of his death. They then rested upon the head of another man—President John Taylor. He held those keys to the hour of his death. They then fell by turn, or in the providence of God, upon Wilford Woodruff.

"I say to the Latter-day Saints, the keys of the kingdom of God are here, and they are going to stay here, too, until the coming of the Son of Man. Let all Israel understand that. They may not rest upon my head but a short time, but they will then rest on the head of another apostle, and another after him, and so continue until the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ in the clouds of heaven to 'reward every man according to the deeds done in the body.'"

"I say to all Israel at this day, I say to the whole world, that the God of Israel, who organized this Church and kingdom, never ordained any President or Presidency to lead it astray. Hear it, ye Israel, no man who has ever breathed the breath of life can hold these keys of the kingdom of God and lead the people astray." (Discourses of Wilford Woodruff, pp. 73-74.)

Now these things are amply attested to. The revelations and inspired utterances of living oracles give us the full account. We should know these things from the records which are before us. Then, also, we should go to the Lord, in faith and in mighty prayer, and get in our hearts the revealed assurance that this work is true. Brother Richards quoted: "... my doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:16-17.) Every living soul in this world who will abide the law that entitles him to know by personal revelation from the Holy Ghost of the divinity of this work, of the stability and destiny of this kingdom, can get that knowledge, and I for one have that knowledge and so certify to you in sincerity and solemnity, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

My dear brethren and sisters, after the concluding session of conference yesterday afternoon, I was congratulated six times on the fine talk I had given at that session of conference, and wanting to be an honest man, I should like now to pass on those compliments to those who gave my talk yesterday afternoon.

It has been most inspiring to be in attendance at this conference. I have had a long time to think. Some observations that have gone through my mind I felt might be interesting to you, even though most of these things have already been said in a better way than I will ever be able to say them.

The first observation I should like to make is the terrific impact that a general conference of the Church has upon its membership and upon the many thousands of people who are friendly toward the Church. We will leave this great conference, I am sure, more enthusiastic and more desirous of furthering the purposes of our Heavenly Father. We will be better men and women because of our attendance here and of hearing the word of the Lord go forth as it has done. More than thirty-five profound sermons have been delivered in this conference already.

Sunday, October 12

I have been wondering, too, if we realize that this is probably the greatest religious gathering held any place in the earth. Have you ever thought about this? A general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints comprised of those who are present, those listening in on the radio, and those who might be viewing this conference on television all become part of this greatest of all religious gatherings that are held.

I think of the people who have come here, representing many nations of the earth. I have shaken hands with people from New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, Tonga, Samoa, Switzerland, Hawaii, Canada, and Mexico. I feel certain there are those here representing other foreign countries also, and practically every state in this great nation of ours.

I have been thinking of the thousands, yes, many thousands who would give their all to be here at this conference today, but their all is not sufficient to buy them a ticket and to take them back to their homes at the conclusion of the conference. To them, this conference will come either through the missionaries, the mission presidents, or by the printed word as it will be circulated through the periodicals of the Church.

Another observation I should like to make is that we are sitting in the presence of three of the great men of the world—the First Presidency of this Church. My close association with them, and the honor and privilege I enjoy of sitting in meetings with them two or three times each week bears testimony to me that there are no greater men living today. As you already know, they have been appointed by our Heavenly Father to preside over his Church. They have been sustained by you to be the leaders of the Church, and I hope that to us sustaining them means we will work as we have never worked before to promote the great purposes of the Lord.

A further observation I should like to make is that when revelation, counsel, the interpretations of the doctrines of the Church, or the law of the Church goes forth to the members in all parts of the earth, it is going to go forth from this source. Therefore, I would say, keep your eyes and ears on the First Presidency, and listen to the counsel that comes from them. If any person ever becomes confused, disturbed, or critical, I would say to you, come to the fountainhead of the Church for the answers to your questions. You will discover that these brethren are more than willing to give you the answers that you require so that you may not get lost or wander astray. Do not go to those who are undermining the Church, to apostate groups, or to those whose intent it is to destroy the work of our Heavenly Father.

Another observation that has impressed me is that as we look at those on the stand in the Tabernacle, there are represented here the great councils of the Church—the Council of the First Presidency who preside over the high priesthood of the Church; the Council of the Twelve Apostles who are special witnesses of Jesus Christ, who travel the length and breadth of the Church, and whose work has increased to such proportions that they cannot entirely carry the responsibility. Therefore, eight other men have been appointed and set apart to assist them, known as the Assistants to the Council of the Twelve. All of these brethren may be considered as counselors to the First Presidency of the Church. On the stand also is the Patriarch to the Church. There are also seven men who comprise the First Council of the Seventy who have a definite and specific responsibility. Finally, there is the Council of the Presiding Bishopric who preside over the Aaronic Priesthood of the Church. Has it ever occurred to you that as you sit here in conference, you are in the presence of these great councils and also that you hear a personal message from each of these brethren during the course of a general conference?

Another observation that has impressed me as I have been sitting here is that those of us who had the honor of being here at 9:30 this morning and listening to the broadcast of this great choir could not help but realize that from this spot every Sunday morning, for nearly thirty years now, has gone a living broadcast to the people of the nation and as far elsewhere as radio carries the inspirational music and message of the spoken word that emanates from this great Tabernacle Choir organization. As I thought about them, I began to realize the sacrifices that many of these people have made in spite of wind, snow, sleet, rain, cold, heat, and all other conditions. These brethren and sisters dedicate every Sunday morning, except the few Sundays they are away on tour, to the presentation of these wonderful hymns and anthems. Aside from this, there are many, many hours of rehearsals required for the preparation of these programs. I should like to say, "God bless them for their devotion and faithfulness to this great cause."

Another observation I should like to make is that the priesthood about which we have heard so much during this conference is so important that heavenly messengers personally brought it to the earth. The priesthood is the very lifeblood of the Church. It is an honor to be a bearer of and a worker in the priesthood. It is through this power that the gospel was restored to the earth in this the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. It is through this priesthood that the Church continues to remain organized and to function in the earth.

I was proud of the great audience of Aaronic Priesthood boys who were in attendance last Friday evening when we held the dedicatorial services for the beautiful Aaronic Priesthood Memorial Monument, located just north of the Tabernacle, depicting John the Baptist, a heavenly messenger, conferring the Aaronic Priesthood on Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. On this occasion, more than five hundred boys sang a number of inspirational songs that thrilled all who were present. Four young boys whose voices had not yet changed singing the song, "On Lovely Susquehanna's Banks," brought a lump to my throat. They stood right behind me on the stand, and as they began to sing in their soft, unchanged voices, I was really touched.

In my humble opinion, we are building a greater youth today than we have ever had before and preparing them to take over positions of responsibility which will certainly come to them as they prove worthy. In passing I would like to add that we should stay close to these young men, and assist in molding their lives, which will be a blessing to them and an honor and credit to the Church they represent. When I think of the millions of men and boys living in the earth and appreciate that we are but a few of those who have been selected, called, and honored, and knowing that our leaders are depending upon us to do our part, I begin to realize the privilege it is to serve and the blessings that come from serving.

Through the power of the priesthood, miracles are performed in this day as they were in other periods in the history of the world when the gospel was upon the earth. As long as men magnify their callings in the priesthood, we will have miracles, and so also will the Church grow in influence, in strength, and in favor among the people of the world. Therefore, may all of us who have been so honored to bear the priesthood, magnify our callings, appreciate it to the fullest, and stand at the head of our homes in dignity where we can be a blessing and a strength to our families. Our children look to us for counsel and leadership, and I am afraid that in some of our homes the situation is in reverse. Sometimes the father is reactivated through the boy who holds the Aaronic Priesthood or even a younger child. Many thrilling stories have been told about youngsters who have helped their fathers back into activity. I heard one not too long ago about a father and a son who were asked to be ward teaching companions, and it rather thrilled me as the mother related to me some of the experiences they were enjoying and how they learned to know each other through this experience. She indicated that after they had been teaching together for a number of months, her son came to her and said, "Mother, you know Dad is really quite a man. I am amazed at how well he understands the gospel and how well he teaches when we visit the homes on our district. I have learned many things from Dad that I did not understand before, and I am glad to be his ward teaching companion; otherwise, I may never have learned to know him so well." This mother remarked that a day or two later, her husband came to her and said, "You know, I think the world of John. I did not know he had it in him, but when I say to him, 'Tonight it is your turn to give the lesson,' you would be proud of John if you could hear him present the topic to the families that we teach. He is developing into one capable of going on a mission." I began to think what a lovely thing it is for a father and a son to become acquainted through one of the great programs of the Church—the ward teaching program.

Sunday, October 12

Finally, I feel to say: "What is the objective of our Heavenly Father after all?" I should like to quote a passage of scripture that Brother Hinckley gave in his message last Friday. One of the Lord's objectives has been put in these words: "For behold this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

Brethren of the priesthood, we are the assistants of our Heavenly Father in helping him to achieve this great objective for the blessing and benefit of those who live upon the earth. When we magnify our callings in the priesthood to the extent that we are willing to put our arms around our brethren who need assistance and encouragement, we are strengthening the kingdom of God. If every man in the Church who holds the priesthood magnified his calling in that priesthood, we would go forward with a power the like of which this world has never seen before. Nothing could stay it.

Literally, we are engaged in our Father's business. Have you ever thought of the impact of this statement, to be engaged in our Father's business? Many of us are engaged in a business or we work for men engaged in a business, but how many of the eternal blessings will come to us from our work in these businesses? Compare your business with our Father's business, and then thank the Lord that you have an opportunity of being engaged in his business. It is a tremendous responsibility and yet a wonderful opportunity.

I sincerely hope and pray we will always be found engaged in our Father's business, helping to carry his great message of glad tidings and peace on earth to the people of the world, and keeping active those who are members of his kingdom now established in the earth.

My testimony is that if we dedicate our lives to magnifying our calling in the priesthood and awake and arise to our opportunities, the work of our Heavenly Father will grow and prosper until no power can stay it. This is my conviction and my testimony to you. I pray that our Father in heaven will give us the deep and abiding appreciation for our membership in the Church and then nudge us all to serve as we have never served before, and I ask it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric. We will now hear from Brother Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by President Ernest L. Wilkinson of the Brigham Young University.

ELDER HENRY D. TAYLOR

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, after sitting for three days waiting to be called on to speak, it has been difficult for me to realize the great blessing that comes to him who endures to the end. My soul has been thrilled and deeply touched with the inspiration of this conference, and more than ever in my life I appreciate my membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

I would like my message today to be an expression of gratitude and appreciation for the privilege that has been Sister Taylor's and mine of laboring for the past three years with your sons and daughters in the mission field. It has been a glorious period in our lives, a rich and rewarding experience. We love these young people.

The question is often asked, "Why does the so-called Mormon Church engage in such an active proselyting program?" Our answer is, "We have the truth and have not only the responsibility, but the urgent desire to share that truth with all the people who dwell here upon the earth. We have been warned; we have the responsibility of warning our neighbor."

Also in fulfillment of prophetic vision, the gospel message, which has been restored, must be carried to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. Young women and young men primarily constitute the army in excess of five thousand fulltime missionaries who are engaged in carrying the gospel message to the people of the earth in the forty-six missions of the Church. It is an inspiring experience to watch the growth and development that comes to these missionaries. They come from all walks of life, from the farm, from the cattle ranch, the sheep camp, from business and professional fields, students from the schoolroom, and many young men recently released from the armed services of our country. And yet regardless of where they are when the call comes from the President of the Church, they gladly respond. They are happy to be engaged in the work of the Lord.

Their parents share with them this great happiness, and support them financially and offer encouragement. These young men and young women go out into the world with little formal training. They are inexperienced, often immature, timid, lacking in confidence, and yet we find that their home training, activity in the priesthood quorums, auxiliaries, in the seminaries, is a wonderful blessing and advantage in preparing them to do missionary work. Through study, prayer, hard work, and the blessings of the Lord, these young people do grow and develop. They gain a knowledge of the gospel; confidence, power, and a maturity far beyond their years. They acquire a strong and burning testimony, and bear that testimony with such a fervency that it carries conviction to the hearts of the people they are teaching.

Certainly the methods of teaching the gospel have changed over the years since many of us were in the mission field. We are currently using what is known as the Systematic, or Uniform Plan of teaching the gospel, where our beliefs are presented in a systematic, orderly fashion. This has proved an effective way of teaching the gospel, a noticeable increase in convert baptisms is a result of these improvements in methods.

Brethren and sisters, the Lord is blessing the missionary work. It is a stirring experience to sit in a meeting with the missionaries and hear them relate instances where they have been led by the Spirit of the Lord to certain doors. They have knocked on the door, introduced themselves, had the people greet them warmly and say, "Come in, we have been waiting for you to call. Why have you been so long in coming?"

I am acquainted with one fine woman whose husband passed away quite some time ago. She was deeply impressed with the beauty of one of our LDS temples. She had heard somewhat regarding our beliefs of a literal resurrection, our belief in a life hereafter, and wanted to know more concerning those concepts. One day upon arising from her prayers she began scanning through the telephone book in an attempt to discover the address of one of our LDS chapels. Just then a knock came on her door, and upon answering it she found two young missionaries there. They had been prompted by the Spirit to approach this home. Upon introducing themselves, they were invited in and commenced teaching that good woman the gospel, and she is now a faithful and devout member of the Church.

The time of a mission in the life of a young person is a time of dedication. It is a time of consecration. Young people are willing to forego worldly pleasures and concentrate on things of the spirit.

And now to you parents. I am confident that I represent all the mission presidents of the Church when I say to you, "Thanks for the encouragement that you give to your sons and your daughters, not only the financial assistance that you furnish them, but for your love and your understanding." Your hearts would be warmed if you could sit in a testimony meeting and hear the young people stand, with tears in their eyes, and say, "I love my father and mother. I am grateful for the sacrifices that they are making that I might be here in the mission field. I neglected to express that love before I left home, but when I return that will all be changed. I shall always be grateful to them."

Missionary work is a wonderful unselfish work, and I would strongly urge that every young man in this Church set as an aim and a goal the filling of a mission; that he will live a clean and pure life so that when he reaches the required age his bishop and his stake president can recommend him for missionary service.

It has been pointed out that every member in the Church can and should be a missionary. We can do that, brethren and sisters, by setting proper examples, being good neighbors, keeping all the commandments. I have noticed in the various sessions of the conference groups of our young men and women who are wearing the uniform of the armed forces. Now you young brethren and sisters in the military service can be effective missionaries if you will remember that "actions speak louder than words." We know that you are confronted with many temptations, but if you will live the commandments you can be a shining example for your associates.

I have been impressed with the great number of young men that we have in the mission field today who were converted to the Church while they were in the military services, and that was through the efforts of their good companions, faithful Latter-day Saint boys. You can be good missionaries, brethren, if you will maintain the standards of the Church.

Now, brethren and sisters, what is the message that the missionaries are teaching? In brief, it is this: that there is a Supreme Being. He is the Father of our spirits. He is our Father in heaven: That our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, is the Redeemer of this world, and through his atonement mankind is assured of salvation and has the possibilities of exaltation; that the gospel and the priesthood, which was taken from the earth due to the acts of men, has been restored, and Joseph Smith was the chosen prophet through whom the restoration was effected; that the Book of Mormon is true and was translated from ancient golden plates by power from on high to Joseph Smith; that prophets have succeeded Joseph Smith as Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; that President David O. McKay, the great presiding high priest, is a prophet, seer, and revelator, and holds all the keys and the powers that had been bestowed upon his predecessors.

I accept and subscribe to these teachings of the missionaries. I bear you my testimony and witness my brethren and sisters, that I do know they are true, and this I humbly do in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve.

From every state in the Union and several foreign countries, from homes of members of the Church, come our sons and daughters to the Brigham Young University, probably the leading Church University in the world. I felt impressed to let you and all those listening in meet personally this afternoon the president of the Brigham Young University, Elder Ernest L. Wilkinson. He knew nothing about this, and was recently—a year or so ago—in the hospital with a heart attack. I hope this will not affect him in any way.

ELDER ERNEST L. WILKINSON

President of the Brigham Young University

I was once taught that if one wants to make a good off-hand speech he should have a good speech on hand, but I am caught at this time totally unprepared.

It was just one hundred and fourteen years ago that a young Scotch boy, sixteen years of age, walking down the streets of Glasgow, Scotland, noted in flaming newspaper headlines the story of the martyrdom in the United States of the Prophet Joseph and his brother Hyrum. This young Scotch boy had never before heard of Mormonism, but he was so indignant that in free America religious leaders should be murdered, he decided he would find out about the religious cause they espoused. Later he was privileged to hear some missionaries, learned from them what he could about this restored gospel, and in 1848, at the age of twenty, joined the Church. Three years later he was himself called on a mission to England and later to the continent of Europe. Returning to England for additional missionary labors, this young Scotch boy, who had never been on American soil, at his own request went to Saxony in Germany and there was instrumental in converting to this Church a young German educator by the name of Karl G. Maeser. The late President Heber J. Grant has said on many occasions that if all the money we had spent in sending missionaries to Germany had been spent in the conversion of this one young man, it would have been well spent.

President Franklin D. Richards of the European Mission was present to participate in the baptism of young Maeser, which was the first to take place in Saxony. The baptism took place in the River Elbe, and Brother Maeser later related that as he was confirmed a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, he prayed as he had never prayed before, for an immediate personal testimony of the divinity of this work. But when he was confirmed he was disappointed, for he seemed to have no different feeling than before. Then he, President Richards, and young Budge began a rather long walk back to Karl G. Maeser's home. For this purpose young Budge placed himself in the center so he could translate the English of Brother Richards into the German of Brother Maeser, and vice versa. But no sooner had he started translating than he was told by both that translation was unnecessary, that they understood the foreign language of each other just as perfectly as they understood their own native tongues. When they arrived at the home of young Maeser, the gift of interpretation of tongues left them as quickly as it had come upon them, and young Maeser turned to young Budge, for they were both of the same age, and earnestly asked for an explanation of what had happened. The young Scotch missionary, divinely inspired, replied in substance: "Brother Maeser, that is the testimony for which you prayed when you were confirmed a member of this Church."

In due time young Brother Maeser and his family, and the Schoenfeld and Martin families (his wife's sisters and their husbands), decided to emigrate to the promised land of America. In order to do so they left Germany by night, for fear the Prussian police would prevent their going to Zion. When they arrived in London the Maeser family was separated from the others. The Schoenfeld and Martin families left for America, but young Maeser was abruptly called on a mission to England and Scotland, the native land of the young man who had converted him. If you cast your bread upon the water, that bread will return to you. Scotland was now to be honored by hearing the word of God from this young German convert who had received the same word from its own native son. And young Karl Maeser, like young William Budge, was to begin his great service to the Church before even setting foot on American soil.

After serving an honorable mission in the British Isles Brother Maeser and his wife and their two children finally set sail for the new world. Two days out of New York harbor one of their two children departed this life. On July 4th, their new nation's birthday, they arrived in a strange land to bury their child.

After this heart-breaking experience, the Maesers proceeded to Philadelphia, where they ran out of money. When, through hard work, they had about saved enough to renew their journey to Zion, Karl was called on another mission—this time to Virginia. His heroic wife remained in Philadelphia. In Virginia, traveling without purse or script, and not being very vigorous in body, he often found it difficult, with little food, to make the long walks with his more robust companions. Discouraged and humiliated he sometimes would urge them to go on without him, while he slept and rested beside the road. But they never left him behind and he never abandoned them in spirit.

Sunday, October 12

One day while in the city of Richmond, later the capital of the Confederacy, he was seized with an impulse to enter a music store where he hoped they would let him play a piano—he loved music. While in this store a distinguished looking customer entered and requested a piano demonstration. The only clerk in the store could not play one. Brother Maeser volunteered. On the basis of Brother Maeser's demonstration the clerk sold the best piano in the shop. The distinguished customer then engaged Brother Maeser to give piano lessons to his two daughters. This customer was ex-President Tyler of the United States. With the money thus earned in giving piano lessons, Brother Maeser completed another honorable mission.

Returning to his family in Philadelphia, he again worked and saved for the journey to Zion. Although he was given certain responsibilities in his emigration company, he had neither the experience or inclination to harness the horses; others did this for him.

On arriving in Salt Lake City he organized a private school, but the pioneers had so little to pay by way of tuition that he and his family almost starved. While reflecting on how he could make a better living he one day attended a General Conference of the Church. There he heard Brigham Young call out his name as having been designated to serve a third mission—this time to his native Germany.

The story is told that as he left home he gave to his wife his last fifty cent piece. In Germany he tried to convert his father and mother and other relatives, but failed. He did not believe he had been outstanding as a missionary. When he returned home his wife met him at the door and returned to him the fifty cent piece he had left with her. Through the help of the Saints she had actually prospered better while he was away than when he was home. I have known of other similar situations.

After returning from his third mission, he again organized a school, being permitted to use a Ward meetinghouse. One day this meetinghouse burned down. Greatly distraught, he sought his Bishop, Bishop Sharp, whom he found in the office of Brigham Young. Without awaiting to be announced, he burst in the office and told them of the catastrophe which had occurred.

President Young looked at him and hoping to ease his anguish said, "Brother Maeser, do not be alarmed. I have another mission for you." Brother Maeser looked for an opening in the floor but could not find one. President Young quickly reassured him by saying, "We want you to go to Provo and found a Church academy. Will you come back in a couple of days and let me know if you can go?" Brother Maeser was back the next morning, volunteering to go and asking for instructions. Having been raised in the Prussian system of education, he expected a long series of written directions. But Brigham Young turned to him and said, "Brother Maeser, your instructions are only these: You should teach not even the multiplication tables or the alphabet without the aid and inspiration of our Heavenly Father. That is all. God bless you. Goodbye."

And without any budget, without any arrangement for compensation, no "union" to bargain for him or to deprive him of his free agency, Brother Maeser went to Provo and there met his first 29 students. The minutes of their first assembly record that Brother Maeser played the organ and led them in singing at the same time. He then gave them a short sermon in which, in its entirety, he spoke as follows:

"We trust you all; we give you our confidence; we hope you will do nothing to weaken that confidence. We put you on your word of honor."

From those simple instructions and that humble beginning, Brother Maeser, during the 25 years he was Principal of Brigham Young Academy and later Superintendent of Church Schools, often prophetically proclaimed that the time would come when the influence of that institution would extend to every hearthstone of the Church. If, my brothers and sisters, you came to the Brigham Young University campus now, you would know that that prophecy is being fulfilled. By the time registration closes this coming week we will have 9900 students from all 49 states in the union, from every territory and from some 40 foreign countries. They come to us with a variety of experiences; some from homes of wealth even judged by worldly standards; some from homes of adversity; some from broken homes; but they nearly all come with a religious heritage and desire to learn more of the revealed word of God so that they may better serve their fellowmen. This common religious heritage and spiritual yearning transcends all other qualities, and the motivation arising therefrom overcomes many other obstacles.

I recall one little girl from the state of Idaho who presented herself for admission a few years ago. We had given her a scholarship for all of her tuition, otherwise she would never have come because she had a widowed mother who had the sole responsibility of providing for a large family. This choice daughter when she registered, in addition to her scholarship, had the munificent sum of five dollars with which to pay her year's expenses. This fine girl, with her spiritual determination and innate capacity, and an understanding university which helped her to get a job, finished the year with flying colors.

Another lovely girl transferred from an institution of higher learning in California, where she had been elected president of her home economics club. I should here add parenthetically that the last time we made a count we had on our campus 1,689 students who had transferred from 185 other colleges and universities. They are anxious and grateful to have the opportunity to attend an institution where they may obtain not only secular learning but where their divine spirit may also flourish and bloom.

And so it was with this beautiful girl who had transferred from a fine institution of higher learning in California. Anxious to know why she had transferred from a school where she had received outstanding recognition, I sought her out and obtained this story: Her mother was born in Pleasant View, just north of Ogden, where both of her parents died while she was yet a small child. Thereafter she was an itinerant boarder living first with one relative, then with another. As a young woman her mother found herself living in a timber camp in California. There, without any Church influence to sustain her, she married outside of the Church, thinking, as do all those who make this mistake, that when children came she and her husband, who belonged to the largest professing Christian church of our time, would be able to resolve their religious differences and agree upon the religious life of their children.

When, however, the first child, a son, was born, the father insisted on christening him in his church. When the second child came, likewise a son, the father again insisted on his rights. When the third child, the daughter who had now registered at Brigham Young University, arrived, the mother had her baptized a member of the restored Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The fourth child, also a daughter, was also baptized a member of our Church. So this fine transferee girl belonged to a divided family—the father and two sons belonging to a church which centuries ago apostatized from the faith, and the mother and two daughters being members of the Church as originally organized by Christ, which in this day, the fullness of times, has been restored to the earth with all its pristine purity and authority. After having completed three years at the California college, her mother came to her and asked her if she would finish her education at the Church University. And she looked at me and said, "President Wilkinson, that was the first request of a serious nature my mother had ever made of me, and I could not say no."

At Thanksgiving time she came to my office with her father and a brother, members of the apostate Church. At the beginning of the winter quarter she came to my office and told me that her brother had registered at the Brigham Young University. As I passed down the line of march at graduation in June she stepped out of line to inform me that the day before her brother, impressed by his association on our campus, had been baptized a member of our Church. [Since delivering this informal talk I have been informed that the other brother and father have now been baptized members of our Church, a tribute to a mother who never let her faith burn out, and to a dutiful daughter who attended Brigham Young University. The Author.]

I would not have you think from this rich story that we have no students at the Brigham Young University having religious problems. We do, for youth always has been the period of religious skepticism and doubt and at the same time, with proper enlightenment, the period of greatest understanding, faith and religious resolve and performance. Most of our students having religious problems, however, are those struggling to throw off the shackles of darkness or other faiths, once they see the sunshine of the restored Gospel. And I don't want you to think that the time of persecution for one changing his faith is over. Just two weeks ago I had an earnest young man call me on the telephone one evening. He wanted to see me at once. I could tell he was disturbed, so I invited him to my office. With tears streaming from his cheeks he told me that the day before he had been physically beaten by both his father and mother, members of an apostate Christian faith, because he had confessed he had been attending a Mormon Sunday School and was interested in joining the Mormon Church and enrolling at Brigham Young University. After the beating he was ejected from their home with only the clothes he had on his back, denied the right to return for his other clothes or for his 1950 model Ford which he had purchased with his own money. The next morning he went to the bank to draw out his summer earnings, which he intended to use for enrollment at Brigham Young University, only to find his mother had already been there and drawn it out, for they had a joint account. Homeless, disinherited, penniless, but having seen the vision of a new light in a Mormon Sunday School, he wanted to know if the way could not still be opened so that he could drink further of the living waters at the Brigham Young University. The next day I told of this experience at a Stake Conference of one of the Stakes in Provo. Before I had arrived home after the Conference the sole remaining daughter of Uncle Jesse Knight had called to say she would be honored to provide financial help for this young man. God bless her, for thanks to her help this young man is now enrolled at the BYU. And when he marries a sweet Mormon girl, which I am certain will eventuate, and they have children, there will not be the intolerance, bigotry and anti-Christian hatred in their home that at the present time darkens and demoralizes the so-called home of his mother and father.

These absorbing stories, of which there are many and variant counterparts at the BYU, prompt me to explain that while about 96% of our students are Latter-day Saints, we have about 400 students who come from more than 25 different religious faiths. Approximately one-fourth of them are baptized into our Church while they are on our campus; another one-fourth after they leave; and we have written testimonials from scores of others that their lives were changed for the good during the time they were students at the Brigham Young University.

We are proud of the fact that the General Authorities of the Church within the last few years have organized a great Stake of Zion, 24 Wards, on our campus, and if you should come down there this evening, or if you come on any Sunday, you will find almost as many students on our campus as you do any other day of the week. I say "almost" because only about 8,000 students belong to our Stake, the others living at home and maintaining their membership in their home Wards.

The BYU Stake would be a paradise for any Stake President. Imagine having 24 wards, 8000 members and no building program to undertake, because the members can all be accommodated for religious purposes in the buildings of the University. I boasted about that in a BYU Stake Conference one day, pointing out we had saved the Church at least $1,500,000 in construction costs for Ward meetinghouses. Brother Henry D. Moyle of the Executive Committee of the BYU heard me make that statement, and when he arose to speak, stated, "I suppose President Wilkinson will now come to the next meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Brigham Young University and ask for another million and a half dollars for academic buildings." Under the circumstances I thought that honesty was the best policy and informed him that I was already preparing a speech to support the request. With this unexpected frankness on my part he agreed to go along with the request.

May I, my brothers and sisters, in conclusion express our gratitude for your support and confidence in us, not only at the Brigham Young University, but also for your confidence and support of all the various units of the Unified Church School System. Not only do we have 9900 students at the Brigham Young University this fall, which will grow to over 11,500 before the year is ended, but we have approximately another thousand college students at Ricks College.

This year, also, there will be around 8,000 Latter-day Saint students enrolled in religious courses of university grade at 56 Mormon Institutes of Religion adjacent to 56 other colleges or universities, which include all of the major institutions of higher learning, save one, in the eleven Western States and the Province of Alberta, Canada. This is an increase of 40 colleges or universities at which we have organized Latter-day

Saint Institutes of Religion in the last five years. In our time Latter-day Saint Institutes of Religion will be organized all the way from New England and Florida on the East to Alaska and the southernmost area of California on the West, and in foreign countries. Already we have requests for such institutions from our students at the University of Florida and from our Saints in Germany and Hong Kong.

This year, also, religious classes are being given for approximately 50,000 Latter-day Saint high school students in Seminaries connected with 713 high schools extending all the way from Maryland on the East to the Hawaiian Islands on the West. I hope your child is one of those 50,000 choice spirits.

By the year 2000 A.D. we expect students in our Church institutions of secondary and higher education to more than quadruple. Truly for our young people the "glory of God is intelligence."

May the Lord bless us to appreciate the significance of this great educational system; may we have the inspiration to carry on under the simple but powerful instructions of Brigham Young, that we shall do nothing without the aid and inspiration of our Heavenly Father, I ask in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He who has just spoken to us is Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

My brethren and sisters, we have come to the closing exercises of a great conference. My soul, with yours, has been filled with thanksgiving and gratitude to our Heavenly Father for the outpourings of his Holy Spirit. We have heard some great messages from the leaders of this Church, and what I have noticed with great satisfaction, are the receptive audiences, showing that the messages were received graciously, with gratitude.

At noon today, there came to me the memory of something I had read years ago in a book entitled, The Simple Life, written by Charles Wagner. He said:

"Your religion is good—first, if it is vital and active; second, if it nourishes in you confidence, hope, love, and a sentiment of the infinite value of existence; third, if it is allied with what is best in you against what is worst, and holds forever before you the necessity of becoming a new man; fourth, if it makes you understand that pain is a deliverer; fifth, if it increases your respect for the conscience of others; and sixth, if it renders forgiveness more easy, fortune less arrogant, duty more dear; the beyond less visionary."

The gospel when obeyed does all that and more. To this every true member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints can bear witness.

I love these associates of the General Authorities, and love them in the spirit of the true meaning of that word, the love of the brotherhood of Christ. God bless them and bless their wives and their children that the ideals that make for the dignity of manhood, that lead into the presence of our Heavenly Father may eventually continue to be perpetuated in our homes, in our association with our business fellows, and in all our travels.

God bless Zion, the pure in heart. God bless our friends with whom we associate, who are contributing, too, to the advancement of this great Church. We appreciate their fellowship.

God bless those who speak evil against us because they do not know us, and give us charity in our hearts for them, and may he enlighten their minds and open the vision of their souls that they may see Christ's Church as it is and that for which it stands. Hasten the coming of our Lord when peace shall reign and the kingdom of God be established, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir will now favor us with, "Worthy Is The Lamb," conducted by Elder Richard P. Condie. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Kenneth B. Dyer, formerly president of the West German Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned for six months.

The singing, as you know, for this afternoon has been furnished by the members of the Tabernacle Choir, and you have thrilled with the excellency of their singing.

We express appreciation and gratitude for the public press, the reporters' fair and accurate reports throughout the sessions of our Conference; for the co-operation of City officials, Police Chief W. Cleon Skousen, traffic officers in handling the increased traffic, for the Fire Department, and the Red Cross standing ready for any emergency.

We express appreciation to the ushers of the Tabernacle who have rendered service early and late in seating the great audiences; especially for the radio and television service rendered by the various radio and television stations here in our own city and state and in other states named in the various sessions of the Conference. All have been the means of permitting untold thousands of people to hear the proceedings of this, the One Hundred Twenty-Eighth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church.

We appreciate the singers throughout this entire Conference, the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir last night thrilled us, and today this great Tabernacle Choir. They leave October 20th for a 23-day tour to major cities of the eastern United States, including Wichita, Kansas; Kansas City, Missouri; Columbus, Ohio; Washington, D. C.; Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston; Toronto, Canada; Detroit, Chicago; and St. Louis, Missouri. Brother Condie, members of the Choir, Brother Hewlett, and the other officers, you have our prayers and best wishes for your success on this memorable tour.

The beautiful flowers which you see arranged on the stand and pulpit have come from two countries far removed from each other—South Africa and Hawaii. What we have said in other sessions we now repeat, and send greetings and thanks to those who so graciously furnished us with these beautiful flowers.

Tonight, the Deseret Sunday School Union Conference will convene in this building at seven o'clock. All Sunday School workers will wish to be in attendance. The public is cordially invited.

The Choir will now sign, "Worthy Is The Lamb," and the benediction will be offered by Elder Kenneth B. Dyer, and this Conference will be adjourned sine die.

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir, Elder Richard P. Condie conducting, "Worthy Is The Lamb."

Elder Kenneth B. Dyer, formerly president of the West German Mission, pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The choral music for the Friday and Saturday morning and afternoon sessions was furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the three Southern California regions, with Florence Jepsen Madsen conducting.

At the General Priesthood meeting Saturday evening the music was furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie as director, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir at the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast.

Accompaniments and interludes on the organ were played by Alexander Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy M. Darley.

SALT LAKE MORMON TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Sunday, October 12, 1958, through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas. The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played, "As the Dew From Heaven Distilling," and on signal the Choir and organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard P. Condie conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank Asper, Tabernacle Organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

First from the Choir we hear music from Mendelssohn's Elijah, with words of gratitude for the rain that fell upon the parched land, to save a repentant people: "Thanks be to God! He laveth the thirsty land! The waters gather; they rush along; . . . The stormy billows are high; their fury is mighty. But the Lord is above them, and almighty! Thanks be to God!"

(The Choir sang: "Thanks Be To God."—Mendelssohn.)

Announcer: With Frank Asper at the Tabernacle Organ on Temple Square today we hear one of the celebrated Psalm settings of Benedetto Marcello from the 16th century: "Allegretto."

(Organ selection: "Allegretto."—Marcello.)

Announcer: From the Requiem by Brahms, the Choir sings these worshipful words: "How lovely is Thy dwelling place, O Lord of Hosts! For my soul it longeth, yea, fainteth, for the courts of the Lord; My soul crieth out, yea, for the living God!" "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place."

(The Choir sang: "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place."—Brahms.)

Announcer: Frank Asper next recalls from Temple Square a "Prayer" from his album of devotional organ music.

(Organ selection: "Prayer."—Asper.)

Announcer: With the music of Charles Gounod, Richard P. Condie now conducts the Choir in these meaningful words from a New Testament text: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, Thou that killest the prophets and stonest them, which are sent unto thee, How often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings and ye would not." "O Turn Thee To The Lord Thy God."

(The Choir sang: "O Turn Thee."—Gounod.)

Announcer: It takes many kinds of courage to live through life—the courage to face facts, to solve problems; the courage to accept assignments, to stay with what we have started, the courage to follow through; the courage to preserve principles, and sometimes to fight for them. And there are times, paradoxically, that call for another kind of courage—even the courage to run away. It is this kind of courage that we would talk of for a moment or two, first recalling an example of it in the decision that saved Joseph in Egypt when Potiphar's wife enticed and tempted him—"But he refused and said unto his master's wife . . . how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God? . . . and he fled, and got him out."<sup>1</sup> And then the record reads that "the Lord was with Joseph, and shewed him mercy, and gave him favour"<sup>1</sup>—because he had the strength, the courage, to resist an evil invitation, even the courage to "flee, and get out." Some lightness of humor has sometimes been suggested in walking back from rides rather than yielding to improper proposals. But the courage to walk out away from moral compromise is a high kind of courage: the courage to remain virtuous, to preserve chastity; the courage to sever an undesirable association. There are many enticements in life, many temptations—to compromise principles, to come with the crowd, to follow false fashions, to play for popular approval. And while it is generally good to be as pleasant with people as possible, it is never good to be agreeable to enter into any act of evil. There is an old saying that misery likes company. And evil does also—and it doesn't easily let loose. And it sometimes takes a special kind of courage on the part of young people to turn from ridicule, from the pointing of fingers, from the accusation of being afraid to take a dare—to do what shouldn't be done. Yes, life requires many kinds of courage—the courage to turn back, to swallow pride, to admit a mistake, to repent, to forgive, to be reconciled, to leave bad habits behind. Courage is required sometimes to retreat, and sometimes to stay and stand. But at that precarious moment when the odds of evil are uppermost, we may most need the courage to walk out, to close the door, to leave the evil environment, even as did a young man in ancient Egypt, who “fled, and got him out.”

(Organ selection: “O My Father.” Tune: “Harwell.”—Mason.)

Announcer: With Frank Asper at the organ we have heard an old hymn tune, “Harwell,” by Lowell Mason, to which the words of “O My Father” have sometimes been sung.

And now the Choir closes with William Cowper's hymn of strengthening, heartening comfort and conviction, with the music by William B. Bradbury: “God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform: He plants His footsteps in the sea, And rides upon the storm. Deep in unfathomable mines Of never failing skill, He treasures up his bright designs And works his sov'reign will. Ye fearful Saints, fresh courage take; The clouds ye so much dread Are big with mercy and shall break In blessings on your head. Judge not the Lord by feeble sense, But trust him for his grace; Behind a frowning providence He hides a smiling face.”

(The Choir sang: “God Moves In A Mysterious Way.”—Bradbury.)

Announcer: Once more we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the fifteen hundred twenty-first presentation continuing the 30th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

Richard P. Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir. Frank Asper was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard once more from the Crossroads of the West.

The One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, April 4, 5, and 6, 1959.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, April 4, at 7:00 p.m.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast and telecast over Station KSL and KSL-TV at Salt Lake City, Utah, and by arrangement through KSL the following stations made available to their listening or viewing audiences one or more of the six general sessions:

In Utah: KSVC at Richfield, KSUB at Cedar City, KVFL at Vernal, KVNU at Logan, KDXU at St. George.

In Idaho: KRXX at Rexburg, KID and KID-TV at Idaho Falls, KBOI and KBOI-TV at Boise, KPST at Preston, KLIX-TV at Twin Falls, KLEW-TV at Lewiston.

In Colorado: KREX at Grand Junction, KBTW at Denver.

In California: KSRO at Santa Rosa, KRDG and KVIP-TV at Redding, KEEN at San Jose, KGO-TV at San Francisco, KNXT-TV at Los Angeles, KERO-TV at Bakersfield, KEYT-TV at Santa Barbara, KOVR-TV at Stockton, KFMB-TV at San Diego, KIEM-TV at Eureka.

In Oregon: KKID at Pendleton, KACI at The Dalles, KOIN-TV at Portland, KBES-TV at Medford, KOTI-TV at Klamath Falls.

In Arizona: KOLD and KGUN-TV at Tucson, KPHO and KPHO-TV at Phoenix, KCLS at Flagstaff, KVWM at Show Low.

In New Mexico: KRSN AM and FM at Los Alamos.

In Nevada: KLAS-TV at Las Vegas.

In Washington: KTNT-TV at Tacoma, KBAS-TV at Ephrata, KXLY-TV at Spokane, KIMA-TV at Yakima, KEPR-TV at Pasco.

In Montana: KXLF-TV at Butte, KOOK-TV at Billings.

All general sessions of the Conference were broadcast in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square, in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loudspeaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle Grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over public address systems, and by direct wire over a public address system to members of the Priesthood in other assemblies throughout the United States and in Canada.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting System's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record. (See page 123)

Elder Joseph Anderson was Clerk of the Conference.

FIRST DAY

MORNING MEETING

The Conference convened in the great Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Saturday morning, April 4, 1959 at 10:00 a.m., with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The music for this session was furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, Norman Gulbrandsen conducting, Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

President McKay opened the Conference with the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

In the words of Peter from the Mount of the Transfiguration, "Lord, it is good for us to be here." There is a saying in the Bible: "Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend." (Prov. 27:17.) It is in that spirit that it is good to meet you. It was good to meet with the members of the General Authorities who met as guests in the House of the Lord last Thursday morning. You know, when you come home from a trip, it is glorious to be welcomed by loved ones. Whenever you meet a friend, your soul is lifted, you have an ecstatic feeling. That is the feeling we enjoy here this morning as we meet as guests in this old Tabernacle, guests of the Lord. It is always a feeling of joy to meet old friends. It is a greater ecstasy to meet in the spirit of brotherhood.

We welcome all who are listening in this morning at this, the opening session of the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square. Every seat is filled. The doorways are occupied by eager listeners. All of the General Authorities are present. Brother Joseph Anderson will be Clerk of this Conference.

We wish to announce that these services, and all general sessions of the Conference, will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall by television. The general sessions of this Conference will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. The names of these stations have already been announced to the television and the radio audiences. To the owners and managers of these various stations, in behalf of all the General Authorities and in your behalf, we express our sincere appreciation for this outstanding public service so generously rendered.

To the large audience assembled in the Tabernacle, the overflow gatherings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, and to the unnumbered thousands comprising the television and radio audiences, in behalf of the First Presidency, the Council of the Twelve, and other General Authorities, we bid you a hearty welcome to this, the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church.

Please note that any important messages or calls that come to us for persons attending this Conference will be announced at the dismissal of the meetings over the public address system on the grounds.

We note this large group of choice young men and young women. They constitute the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses occupying the seats usually occupied by the Tabernacle Choir. This Chorus will furnish the music for us today. It is a joy to have them present this morning.

Note the lovely flowers arranged here. We are pleased to let you know of those who have thought of us and who wished to add to the beauty of this occasion:

First. Five thousand daffodils have come from the Puyallup Valley Daffodil Festival, Inc. of Tacoma, Washington, in cooperation with the presidency of the Tacoma Stake. These daffodils come from the Puyallup Valley where are found the nation's and the world's largest plantings of the Giant King Alfred daffodils.

Second. The calla lilies—twelve hundred from the high priests of the Oakland-Berkeley Stake, California.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Third. Forty dozen gladiolas from the Ft. Myers Branch of the Southern States Mission, grown by Brother and Sister William Nychyk, who have 200 acres of gladiolus in Ft. Myers, Florida.

Fourth. The beautiful stocks have come from Arizona, from the Phoenix, the East Phoenix, and the Phoenix North Stakes.

Fifth. Seventy-eight beautiful Easter plants have come from Paul Flint of the Kaysville Second Ward. Each plant contains several blossoms.

Sixth. Mary A. Persson of Woodland, California, sent three dozen beautiful calla lilies.

Seventh. Fifteen thousand sweet peas from the Indian Sunday School at Fort McDowell, Arizona, grown and picked by the Indian children.

With all our hearts we express appreciation and thanks to the friends and members of the Church for these floral gifts, bearing their sweet messages of affectionate greeting and loyal support. We express appreciation of the effort put forth by members of these wards, branches, stakes, and missions. We express also appreciation to Brother and Sister Mart Jorgensen of the Granite Ward of this city, who have worked early and late in arranging and placing these thousands of flowers in vases.

We acknowledge the presence of our stake presidencies, bishoprics, temple presidents, and general auxiliary officers, our mission presidents from the United States, Mexico, Central America, and Canada. We also extend a hearty welcome and express satisfaction and pleasure in the attendance of prominent men in the nation, state, city, and other places.

You will all be pleased to know we have noted Senator Wallace F. Bennett, United States Senator; Frank E. Moss, United States Senator; David S. King, United States Congressman; George Dewey Clyde, Governor of the State of Utah; Lamont Toronto, Secretary of State; Adiel F. Stewart, Mayor of Salt Lake City; Ernest L. Wilkinson, president of the Brigham Young University; President A. Ray Olpin, president of the University of Utah; President John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College; Pres. William P. Miller, president of Weber College; Dr. M. Lynn Bennion, superintendent of Salt Lake City Schools; Dr. E. Allen Bateman, state superintendent of Public Instruction; I think we have others: Elder Ezra Taft Benson, member of the Council of the Twelve, Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Arthur V. Watkins is here, whom we have frequently had, while he was serving; H. Aldous Dixon—did I miss you? I want to thank you especially for the report you made to us recently.

Now we can see others down here. Thank you for your presence. We are glad you are all here.

As already announced, the singing for this morning's session will be furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Norman Gulbrandsen conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin this session by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses singing, "Come, Come, Ye Saints," conducted by Elder Gulbrandsen.

The opening prayer, following the singing, will be offered by Elder Joseph T. Bentley, formerly president of the Northern Mexican Mission and at present General Superintendent of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association.

---

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses sang the hymn: "Come, Come, Ye Saints."

Elder Joseph T. Bentley offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was just offered by Elder Joseph T. Bentley, formerly president of the Northern Mexican Mission and at present General Superintendent of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now sing: "Behold the Lamb of God," conducted by Norman Gulbrandsen. After the singing President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will speak to us.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency of the Church will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Antoine R. Ivins.

There are several others in the audience whom I would like to mention, among them President Daryl Chase of the Utah State University; and you will be pleased to know that we have Mr.

Joseph A. Brunton, Jr., of New York, Assistant Chief Scout Executive, of the Boy Scouts of America; Robert W. Perin, of New York also, Assistant Director of Volunteer Training of the Boy Scouts; and Mr. D. L. Roberts, director of "Mormon" Relationships of the Boy Scouts of America. We welcome you gentlemen. They have been with the Primary Association and have given messages to our teachers interested in the Boy Scout movement.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.Second Counselor in the First Presidency*

My brothers and sisters, here in the building and on the air, all children of our Heavenly Father, I stand before you in humility, in need of help from our Heavenly Father. I have asked him to help me. I would appreciate an equal prayer from you to the same end.

This is Easter time. The celebration of the resurrection has just passed, and sometimes there is a tendency to think that thereafter the Lord ascended, and we have nothing more to do about it. I have had particularly in mind two or three passages that I shall try to recall.

In the Passover chamber, the Lord said, "... I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6.) At various times in his mission, he added the word "light," so that in its complete form it stands, "I am the way, the truth, the life, and the light."

I remember that at the time of the raising of Lazarus, the Lord said, in response to a statement from Martha:

"... I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead; yet shall he live:

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?"

"She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world." (John 11:25-27.)

Peter, speaking to the Sanhedrin, in response to their question, "... By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?" replied, "... by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified,

... for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:7-10, 12.)

As I have read the record, I have been persuaded that not so fully did the apostles themselves, up until after the resurrection, understand who the Savior was or might be, as did the learned men of Israel, who saw, who partially understood, and who feared.

The Savior, the Book tells us in Acts, remained on the earth after his resurrection for forty days, during which time he worked and preached and, I would assume, assisted in setting in order his Church.

But I thought that I might run over, so far as my memory serves me, a few of the visual demonstrations that were given in those early days of the Resurrected Christ. You remember that an earthquake came before the break of day and rolled back the stone from the sepulchre. We are not given an account as to how the Savior came from the sepulchre except that we read that the burial clothes were left in the sepulchre itself.

You remember that Mary Magdalene was the first, even before the dawn broke, to go to the sepulchre. Seeing it open, she rushed to tell Peter and John. They not realizing, not understanding, not knowing what to look for, rushed to the sepulchre and found it empty.

Shortly after that the women came with spices because there had been no time on the previous Friday night properly to prepare the Christ for his burial. They did not understand that he was to be resurrected on the morning of the third day, for they came on that morning properly to dress and prepare the body for burial. Mary Magdalene was with them and Mary the mother. You recall that while he forbade Mary, to whom he had already shown himself, to touch him, he permitted the women to hold his feet.

They saw him. They heard his voice. They knew he was resurrected.

A little later on that day, two of the disciples were on their way to Emmaus. The Savior joined them. He seemed to be uninformed about what had happened in Jerusalem which seemed to have been common talk in Jerusalem by that time, and they talked a bit about that. The Savior did not appear apparently to them as he had appeared before his resurrection. So he went along with them and began to tell them all about it, who he was, and began to repeat the scriptures to them. Coming to an inn they invited him in with them. They went in, sat down, preparing to eat. He broke bread and offered it to them. Then they recognized for the first time who he was, and he vanished.

That night the ten—there were only eleven altogether now because Iscariot had committed suicide—were sitting in a room together and suddenly the Savior stood among them. They were frightened. They thought he was a spirit. He said, "... Why are ye troubled? ... Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." (Luke 24:38-39.) They had thought he might be a spirit.

And then he asked them—and this has always been interesting to me—he asked them for food—they were at dinner—and they gave him broiled fish and honeycomb, and he ate—a resurrected being ate of these earthly foods.

Thomas was not there, and Thomas said that he would not believe if he could not touch the Savior to be sure. Eight days following, the apostles were all together again, this time Thomas with them, and the doors being shut, so the record says, the Savior suddenly appeared in their midst and addressing himself to Thomas, with his unbelief, invited an examination of his body. "Reach hither thy hand," said he, "and thrust it into my side: . . ." Whether

Thomas did as he was bid or not, is not clear, but at the end of it, Thomas said, "My Lord and my God." (John 20:26-28.)

Thereafter, or on that same day, he had shown himself to Peter as was disclosed in the report which was made by these disciples who had seen him on their way to Emmaus.

Thereafter, he appeared several times; among others he appeared to five hundred at one time, and the writer of Acts declared that some were then living of that five hundred when he wrote.

He appeared to the disciples and talked with them thereafter, particularly on the occasion when Peter and six others of the apostles, apparently, decided that they would go fishing, that everything was over. So they went fishing. You will all remember, I am very sure, the incidents of that fishing trip. The apostles had fished all night and caught nothing. As they neared the shore of the Sea of Galilee they saw a figure on the shore by a fire. The figure asked them if they had caught any fish. They answered no. Then said he, "Cast the net on the right side of the ship," which they did, and it was filled with fish. Then John perceived that this was the Lord and so told the group.

Peter, the impetuous Peter, who sometimes apparently talked before he thought, cast himself over the side of the boat, having first wrapped himself with his coat, for he was naked and did not want to appear before the Christ in that kind of condition—which carries its lesson, I think, as to chastity and morality and modesty—and he hurried to the shore. They all went to the shore. They found there the Lord whom they then recognized. He had already prepared something to eat and invited them to partake of it.

It is not clear to me whether or not the Lord ate at that time, though the inference might be that he did.

That was the time when he questioned Peter a bit, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" referring, I assume, to the fish and the food. "Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. . . ."

"Feed my lambs." (Ibid., 21:15-16.)

The second inquiry came and the same answer, except that at this time the Lord said, "Feed my sheep." And even a third time did this question come, and the third time Peter, with what quite evidently was something of irritation, said, "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee."

"Feed my sheep." (Idem, 17.)

A great lesson in three words of the mission and duty of the Church then under organization and which has been the obligation and the duty from that day until now of those who possess the priesthood of God, as we do.

Finally, he called them together again on a mount in Galilee, the disciples, and at that time he gave them the great commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16:15-16.)

Those are the words of the Christ. Then he told them of the signs which should follow them that believed.

We, brethren and sisters, are the recipients of the great blessings that attach to the work of the last dispensation. We are also the obligees of the great responsibilities which have been placed upon those whom God has called to lead this last dispensation. I personally try to think more frequently of the obligations I have than of the blessings that I have enjoyed, and yet as I cast my mind back over a long life, I think of no one in my acquaintance who has received greater blessings of health and strength than have I myself, for which I am grateful.

I am grateful, as we all are, for the prayers of the Saints in our behalf. We know we have them, we know they are efficacious. We pray that you will overlook our weaknesses and failings, for each and all of us are human; make us humble but never let us forget our gratitude for the blessings which we enjoy.

The Lord is good to us. He is giving us direction if we will take it. I urge you to bring your thoughts back, as I did last night, from space, about which we know nothing in comparison with what there is to know—and fix our minds upon the great powers and authorities which we have as members of the priesthood, representing our Heavenly Father, endowed with a portion of his authority to work out his purposes, not ours.

I bear my testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel, that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that the Prophet Joseph was a prophet raised up under his direction, who with his authorities through the revelations of our Heavenly Father, founded the Church. I bear my testimony that the same Spirit and the same power and the same authority with which he, the Prophet Joseph, was invested, now exists in the Church and has since its foundation, that President David O. McKay is the recipient of that power and that authority today.

I urge upon you with all the fervor that I can express, that we follow the leadership of the Church, know that President McKay is the prophet, seer, and revelator of the Church, that we bring our lives into complete harmony with the commandments of the Lord, all to the end that having fulfilled our obligations to the dead and to the living, we may be finally saved and exalted in his presence, which I ask in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency. Elder Antoine R. Ivins will now address us. He is a member of the First Council of the Seventy.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren and sisters, as I stand before you this morning I seek an interest in your faith and prayers, that the few words which I may offer may be directed by the Spirit of God, that they may be in harmony with the wonderful testimony of President Clark to whom we have listened.

My heart is full of gratitude this morning for many, many things. I am thankful that I have come to appreciate and understand in a measure the redeeming work of Jesus Christ, and that through my service I have developed a faith which I hope may carry me through to the end of my days in service, for I have covenanted with God and my fellows who surround me that I shall strive to serve in this capacity and do it well.

Among other things, I am thankful that my wife is able to be here at this service, a manifestation of the power that there is in the priesthood when it is united with faith in prayer. I think faith is a most essential thing to us as members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—faith not only in ourselves and in our ability to do the things that we have to do, if we are humble and prayerful, but faith in the teachings of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, that Christ saw fit to bring about a restoration of his Church in the earth in the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith, the organization of which was perfected by the Prophet Joseph Smith and faith in the priesthood which was restored by heavenly beings. There sits before me today a body of men I think almost all of whom hold the Melchizedek Priesthood and responsible office therein.

If we can develop the faith that is necessary for the proper accomplishment of our responsibilities and the realization of the covenants which we have made, it will be a wonderful thing.

As I stand before you today, there is only one of the General Authorities who face you who has not moved into his present office since I became a member of the First Council of the Seventy. My memory goes back farther than that to the time when Brother Junius F. Wells came into southern Utah to organize the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association, and in that time, which is now nearly seventy years since I was a baptized member of the Church, I have known, and have had more or less intimate association with most of the General Authorities of the Church.

I want to bear you my testimony, brethren and sisters, that over that period of years there has grown in my heart a faith not only in the plans of God, of which we have heard something this morning, but also in this organization which we call the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and in the officials who have stood at its head over that period of time. I trust that that faith may never waver.

Now in addition to this type of faith which we must have in the organization, we must develop a loyalty to it. And what would that mean? It would mean that we would recognize the obligation that comes upon us in the covenant of baptism and in the covenant, implied or actual, when we receive the Melchizedek Priesthood. If we are to be loyal to those things, brethren and sisters, we will live worthy of them. We will sustain the work. I grant you that we who stand as your servants are human, as you are, and there may be certain things which may not always meet the approval of other people, but out of the efforts of these Brethren who stand at the head of the Church, there has come only a desire to serve the people, which I believe represents an inspiration from the Spirit of God, our Heavenly Father. In my association with them that has always been manifested.

Now, brethren and sisters, if we are to be loyal to these promises which we have made, and to this organization, which we teach the world is a restoration of the Church of Jesus Christ, with all the keys which ever existed in any previous dispensation, restored to us, then we must live absolutely true to the covenants which we have made so as to teach by word of mouth and by example the power that is inherent in the priesthood of God, united with a pure faith in his work.

My wife's grandfather, who lived into his eighties, was always worried, and said, "Antoine, I am just worried for fear I will not be able to prove faithful to the end." I grant you that it is possible for people in their dotage to make serious mistakes, and my hope is that the faith which I have today never wanes, and that I may always be worthy to serve you to the best of my ability. The position I occupy came unsought to me, and over these years I have tried to get the Spirit of God to help me in my ministry.

May I prove loyal to these, my Brethren. May you prove loyal to them. May you prove loyal to the organization.

May you be able to accept without undue criticism and faultfinding the program—an inspired program—which is for the benefit and upbuilding of the people, is the humble prayer I offer, and I do it in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Romney, will you please come forward. He to whom we have just listened is Elder Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of Seventy. Brother Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve will now address us.

ELDER MARION G. ROMNEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Brethren and sisters: I ask you to join your faith and prayers with mine, that what I say will be in harmony with what has already been said. What I have been thinking about is, I believe in harmony with President Clark's great message. I pray that I may have the Spirit of the Lord as I speak.

To suggest what I have in mind to say, I quote these words which Jesus spake to the unbelieving Jews: "... if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." (John 8:24.)

I should like to direct my remarks particularly to this great group of singers here in the choir from Brigham Young University, and to all other students—students who are challenged by the wonders of the universe, and who want to learn more about them, and at the same time prove faithful and true to the faith of their parents.

Such a student returning from a celebrated eastern university recently said in substance: "Some of my fellow students are apparently as well off as we are. They seemingly observe our standards with respect to chastity, Word of Wisdom, clean speech, and have lofty ideals. What do we have which they do not have? If there is a difference between us just what is it?"

A little reflection, I believe, will suggest a number of differences, but the one I wish to emphasize this morning is our beliefs and faith in Jesus Christ—not our belief that there is a God, but rather our peculiar concept about his nature and identity, and our relationship to him. It is when we descend to particulars that the differences show up. As a matter of fact, it seems that belief in the existence of a God is almost universal. Thinking people everywhere, particularly scientists, are accepting the hypothesis that there is a God who created and is now controlling the universe. The materialistic concept which denies God altogether is being replaced with the theory set forth by the late French scientist, Dr. Pierre Lecomte du Nouy, in his great book, Human Destiny. His thesis is that there is "an idea, a transcendent will, a supreme intelligence," an "anti-chance" sustaining the universe. This supreme intelligence he calls God.

Aroused by what he terms "the universal demoralization" and loss of faith which has resulted from "paralyzing skepticism and destructive materialism," he examines "critically the scientific capital accumulated by man"; and derives "therefrom logical and rational consequences" which to him and many other eminent scientists "lead inevitably to the idea of God." The existence of such a Being is, he concludes, a scientific fact. It is his hope that the acceptance of his thesis will supply men with a basis, and give them a motive which will sustain faith in God and in the high destiny of man—a faith which will keep men struggling to reach the moral and spiritual plane exemplified by Jesus. "Men must be made to understand," he says, "that the important thing is to develop what is within them, to purify themselves, to better themselves, to come closer to the perfect ideal which is Christ."

Now, of course, we believe with him that there is a God who is the Creator and ruler of the universe. His statement that God's purpose is to bring men "closer to the perfect ideal which is Christ" is, when interpreted in the light of our belief in Jesus, in harmony with the Lord's declaration that "... this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.) However, we do not see eye to eye with him as to the nature of that perfection, nor as to the process by which it may be attained. Our differences on these matters arise from our incompatible beliefs about the nature and the identity of God and Jesus, and our relationship to them. A comparison of these beliefs will point up the differences. As to his beliefs, we will let him speak for himself. First, as to God:

"Any effort to visualize God," he says, "reveals a surprising childishness. We can no more conceive Him than we can conceive an electron." And again, "... the idea of God is a pure idea, like the idea of force, or of energy, and does not need to be visualized: nor can it be. . . ." And finally: "When we were led to call on an external action so as to account for the birth of life and the development of evolution, we admitted that the only possible, logical interpretation coincided with that which recognized the existence of God. And . . . we were driven, in order to explain the universe and evolution, to accept the idea. . . . However, we were careful not to define the attributes of this force, which evidently corresponds to the admitted idea of God. We, therefore, used the consecrated name, but avoided as much as possible any anthropomorphic idea."

Now of course this is not our concept of God. But I think we should respect this scientist's desire to establish a scientific basis for faith in God. He did the best he could with the light under which he worked. We will not be disturbed nor disappointed by his conclusion if we keep in mind the fact that the truth about Deity does not lie within the range of scientific research nor philosophical interpretation, but rather in the field of direct revelation.

As to his concept of Jesus he says: "... let us not forget that the perfect man is not a myth; he has existed, in the person of Jesus," who he says "can be assimilated," [that is, likened or compared] "to one of the intermediary . . . forms, perhaps a million years in advance of evolution."

Because they are familiar to most of us I shall not here review in detail our beliefs about Jesus. President Clark set them forth with much clarity this morning. But I do submit to you that these postulated concepts of God and Jesus omit every essential aspect of the divine Redeemer whom we worship. They rule out his and our pre-existence, his divine Sonship, the fall of Adam, and Christ's atonement, Christ's and our resurrection, his past, present, and future role in the courts on high, and our eternal progress and destiny in the world to come.

I repeat that in our peculiar beliefs and faith in Jesus Christ, comprising the foregoing and other revealed truths concerning him, we greatly differ from other people of the earth.

But does it make any difference which beliefs men accept? Remembering that Jesus said a tree may be known by its fruit, let us look at this question for just a moment. One of the fruits of the foregoing conceptions of Jesus is that the good life which he projected may be attained by accepting and applying his so-called "ethical and moral teachings" such as those expressed in the Sermon on the Mount, while at the same time denying his divinity and ridiculing the fundamental doctrines of his gospel. Here is a quotation from one of the most ardent proponents of this theory.

"What was Jesus' ancestry? Was He a descendant of Joseph and Mary, or of God and Mary? He was a descendant of Joseph and Mary. He was the most perfect human being who ever lived, but He was not the Son of God." And further, "belief in . . . , the Virgin Mary, the atonement, trinity, etc., will not help to make a better world, but belief in the fundamentals of Jesus' democracy and the social values named in the Sermon on the Mount will." (The Good Society, by Willis, p. 58.)

Now I submit to you that all history, including the present state of world affairs, testifies that the fruits of the teachings of Jesus Christ cannot be had by accepting some of his teachings, rejecting the rest, and denying his divinity. Of all the world's ills, none is more tragic than the denial of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, by so many people who profess to believe in him.

Another fruit of the supreme intelligence theory is that God set a goal for man, but "did not prescribe the means" by which that goal may be attained. This was left, so the theory runs, for man to discover by trial and error. Such a doctrine is the antithesis of our knowledge that Jesus Christ prescribed the exact course by which men may come to the perfection he enjoined.

"He marked the path and led the way,
And ev'ry point defines,
To light and life and endless day,
Where God's full presence shines."

(Eliza R. Snow)

Now to come directly to the point of these remarks, let us consider the fruits of believing Jesus to be what he claimed to be—the literal Son of God in the spirit and in the flesh; the revelation of God to man, the Redeemer, our advocate with the Father. What does such a belief do for one?

Speaking generally, it becomes the motivating force in one's life. Specifically, it induces one to render obedience to the initiatory principles and ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ. That is, to have faith in Jesus, to repent, to be baptized by immersion for the remission of sins, and to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. Wholehearted obedience to these purifying and sanctifying principles and ordinances works in the life of the true believer a far-reaching miracle. For one thing, it confers upon him membership in the literal kingdom of God, identifying him as a sheep of the true Shepherd.

Through obedience to these principles and ordinances there is introduced into one's life a new light, a light which conveys to his mind, and opens his understanding to, "... pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul, ..." (See D&C 121:42.) Such an one is in a real sense readmitted into the presence of God. The direct line of communication from God to him is reopened. By this he is sustained in his belief in Jesus Christ with an assurance beyond the understanding of the uninitiated.

This great source of pure knowledge, wisdom, light, and intelligence is, of course, the Holy Ghost who the Savior said would lead men into all truth. To understand and appreciate this great gift it must be experienced. But I bear you witness that it is real and will work a miracle in your understanding. You will remember that without it Peter denied Jesus on the night of his great trial. Possessing it, Peter and John defied their captors, (although those captors had the power to put them to death and in a sense had the disposition to do so) with this declaration: "... whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

"For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." (Acts 4:19-20.) While one enjoys this gift, his belief in Jesus Christ is secure.

Now, the third effect of complying with these principles of the gospel is forgiveness of sins. This is in itself a mighty miracle. Sin is wickedness and "... wickedness never was happiness." (Alma 41:10.)

Most of the suffering and distress endured by people of this earth is the result of unrepented and unremitted sin. Paul spoke two universal truths when he said to the Romans, "... the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Romans 6:23.) Just as suffering and sorrow attend sin, so happiness and joy attend forgiveness of sins.

Alma said of his suffering for sin, "... there could be nothing so exquisite and so bitter as were my pains," and then, speaking of the joy which came to him when, through repentance, he had received forgiveness, he said, "Yea, and again I say unto you, ... that on the other hand, there can be nothing so exquisite and sweet as was my joy." (Alma 36:21.)

Forgiveness of sins is prerequisite to a full fellowship in the Church of Jesus Christ. It is a prerequisite to enjoying the gift of the Holy Ghost. As a matter of fact every blessing of the gospel of Jesus Christ is predicated upon receiving forgiveness of sins; for, as Jesus said, "... no unclean thing can enter into his [God's] kingdom; therefore, nothing entereth into his rest save it be those who have washed their garments in my blood, because of their faith, and the repentance of all their sins, and their faithfulness unto the end." (3 Nephi 27:19.) Then he added: "Now this is the commandment: Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me [that is, believe on me] and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day." (3 Nephi 27:20.)

In this statement Jesus Christ gave the only prescription there is for obtaining forgiveness of sins, and, therefore, the only way to happiness, the only way to a pure knowledge of God our Eternal Father and his Son Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. The following of this prescription depends wholly upon one's belief in Jesus Christ.

I sincerely pray that should the question arise as to, "What do we have which others do not have?" we will remember and try to understand the eternal truths implied in Jesus' statement to the unbelieving Jews, "... if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." (John 8:24.)

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

I pray humbly, my brothers and sisters, that what I shall say may be appropriate. I have been so uplifted by that which has already been spoken from this pulpit this morning, that my heart is filled with gratitude for the goodness and blessings of the Lord, especially for the absolute testimony that I have of his divinity.

Almost two thousand years ago he said, "If any man will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16:24.) And again he said, "Let no man be afraid to lay down his life for my sake; for whoso layeth down his life for my sake shall find it again.

"And whoso is not willing to lay down his life for my sake is not my disciple." (D&C 103:27-28.)

We can place ourselves in either category we wish.

In my opinion, one of the noblest expressions of unselfish devotion and a willingness to give of one's self is found in missionary work. We believe that every Latter-day Saint who has the capacity to so do carries the obligation to share with others the truth of the restored gospel. The depth of this belief is adequately demonstrated by the more than ten thousand missionaries at home and abroad, full time and part time according to their calls, who are serving at their own expense in the missions of the world and in the stake missions.

God grant that each of us may escape such a death by believing with Peter that Jesus is "the Christ, the Son of the Living God," I humbly pray in his name. Amen.

They answer the calls to serve without equivocation or hesitancy. It matters not one whit to which land or country or clime they may be assigned, even though it might require the learning of a new and difficult language; even though it requires personal sacrifice for him or his family or both, he goes forth and figuratively loses his life for that period of time in the hope that he may bring to others a newness of life and hope and understanding—which may lead to salvation.

Missionary service is not only a test of faith but a real test of character. This is seen in the remarks of a young missionary who said: "In the Army I was forced to obey orders, but in the mission field I am given instructions and then placed on my honor. This has been to me one of the greatest tests in my life—"

Although a few months have passed since we visited your sons and daughters in the ten missions of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Netherlands, North Germany, West Germany, Swiss-Austria, France, and Great Britain, I wish to fulfil a promise and bring the greetings, not only of the missionaries, the mission presidents and their devoted wives, but also of many of the faithful members in the fourteen countries that comprise those missions.

In addition to our meetings with the missionaries in report and testimony meetings, I had the privilege of interviewing practically all of the nearly twelve hundred who are laboring in those various missions. It was an arduous undertaking, but it was compensating and worth while to look into their handsome faces across a table and inquire about their work, their thinking, and their faith, their living, and to ask about their parents at home and to receive almost without exception the assurance that they are living clean lives, that they are doing well as ambassadors of truth, that they know the gospel of Jesus Christ, as it has been restored, is true. Not only can you be proud of them but they, too, are proud of you, their families at home, and have deep concern about you.

One young missionary from Canada reported: "My greatest moment came this morning. You see, my father is a baptized member, but he is inactive. He was not in favor of my coming on this mission, but this morning I received a Christmas card from him on which he wrote, 'I am proud of you, my son, and I wish you success on your mission.' This has been the best Christmas gift that my dad ever gave me."

In Denmark, one of these fine young men said, "When I received my call, my grandfather was using tobacco.

Then and there he said that he would quit, and he did. He never went to Church much before I left, but now he goes regularly. And, he has lately gone to the temple. Now the greatest hope that I have is that my dad will prepare himself to go to the temple with his family so that we can enjoy our family association forever as we now do." He said, "If my mission does nothing more than to bring my family to a realization that the gospel is the most important thing in their lives it will have been worth while."

It is true that parents live in their thoughts every day and almost every hour with their missionary sons and daughters.

One young man from Springville said, "Every time my mother tells anyone that she has a son in the mission field, she can hardly keep from crying because she is so proud of me. She feels that I am filling a mission for two. You see, when my father received his call, he was financially unable to go. I am determined to give this mission the best I have, both for him and for myself."

Working hand in hand with the missionaries from the stakes of Zion there are in each of these ten missions a surprising number of local, full-time missionaries as well as part-time missionaries. The devotion of these young men and young women as well as their effectiveness are equal to that of our missionaries from America.

When we met in Berlin in our conference, which was attended by nearly six hundred members of the Church, there were present a number from the east part of Berlin. Among them were twenty-one missionaries who were laboring under Brother Berkhart, a counselor in the mission presidency. After the general meeting we met with them and heard their testimonies and their reports. It touched our hearts to feel their faith, their spiritual strength, and their love of the gospel. I said to them in conclusion, "Remember that the brethren and the Saints are praying for you."

One of them raised his hand and stood up and said, "Brother Christiansen, tell the Saints and the brethren, that we are praying for them." I thought that was wonderful to think that they would be concerned about our well-being.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Directing the labors of these missionaries are the mission presidents who, along with their capable wives, are carrying out their heavy assignments with complete devotion. I pay my tribute to their unselfish and efficient service.

In these ten missions there are nearly forty-five thousand members of the Church. I could see that the gospel is a compelling instrument in transforming the lives of those who accept it and who live it.

One convert, a teacher in a university, put it this way: "It is like coming out of the darkness into the light. It is so consistent with reason, and it gives understanding and assurance which all men need."

The faith of many is something to behold. In Heidelberg, Germany, a local district president stood before the pulpit with one arm gone, having lost it in the war. He formerly was a high officer in the SS. Then, he carried out the orders of the war lords for the destruction of men, but now having been converted to the gospel, he stood before this group of Saints, humbly, carrying out the wishes and the plans of the Lord for the salvation of men.

A convert of a year or so, living in Hallein, Austria, who is a self-supporting woman, insists on paying twenty percent in tithing. When we talked to her, she said, "Why, I have been a member of the Church only a short time, and I have missed out on many blessings. I feel that I can never repay the Lord for what I have received in finding the truth. Let me go forward with this program."

My brothers and sisters, I felt a surge of interest amongst the people in those missions. Respect for the Church and even admiration on the part of the people, generally, is evident. This has come not only because of a better plan of presenting the gospel and increased effectiveness of the missionaries, but also where new buildings of our own design have been erected it is not difficult to see that the respect and the interest of the people, beyond that of curiosity, has increased and a wider interest is manifested by many fine people.

Where public meetings were held in our own buildings the attendance of friends and investigators was far beyond our expectations. Fifteen buildings were dedicated in these missions on this tour.

I found that in place of mere tolerance there is an ever-increasing desire to recognize and to investigate, and I am convinced that an epoch of growth and progress is immediately before us in the various missions in Europe and Scandinavia. In practically every city, except in one mission where the state has not recognized this Church as such, we were visited by polite, interested reporters who gave very good and honest publicity. Twenty-six reporters attended a news conference in the city of Berlin and stayed for an hour and fifteen minutes asking pertinent questions about the Church. I was informed that very acceptable newspaper articles appeared in the press the following day.

The presence of the Swiss and the London temples has had a very definite and noticeable effect upon the people in the areas surrounding them and far into the other lands as well. These temples bring to Europe not only a newness to the landscape, but more importantly, they bring also a newness of thought and of purpose to the lives of thousands of people who know about them and their purposes.

This newness of life's purpose is expressed in the words of a visitor to the London Temple prior to its dedication. After the nature of the work to be done in the temple had been explained, members of the group were asked if they wished to comment or ask questions. One said, "I can say nothing. I'm overwhelmed because of the beautiful and desirable principles that have been revealed to me here today." People are still coming onto the grounds, feeling the influence of those sacred edifices and learning from the guides there the true purpose of life and of salvation.

I was instructed, by the First Presidency, to encourage the members to engage in genealogical research. I did this to the best of my ability. I was pleased to note the willing response and the certain interest that was manifested on the part of the Saints everywhere and to find that now in almost every district there is a genealogical organization set up with men and women who have considerable understanding as to the procedures of genealogical research.

I am happy to return in service to the Church and to the Lord a little of that which I have received in such abundance. I am happy to bear my testimony. I know that Jesus is the Redeemer, the Savior of mankind. I know that the gospel has been restored according to the promise of the Lord through his prophets and that Joseph Smith was the instrument in his hands; that all Presidents of the Church were and are prophets, seers, and revelators. I know that in due time of the Lord our testimonies will be vindicated, because in the words of another, "Truth like the sun permits itself to be obscured, but like the sun only for a time."

May God bless us that we may be true and faithful, I pray, humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ, the Lord. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He who has given us that glimpse of his recent visit to Europe is Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve. Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin of the Presiding Bishopric will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder LeGrand Richards, who will be our concluding speaker.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

President McKay, my brethren and sisters, I sincerely hope that I may have the inspiration and guidance necessary to express to you one or two thoughts.

I have been thinking about the Israelites when they were in Egypt and were slaves, but through the guidance and direction of the Prophet Moses, it was possible for them to become free and leave Egypt and go to the Promised Land. The Lord gave them inspiration through Moses and guided them which built them up in the faith that God actually lived and that in the future, his Son, Jesus Christ, would appear upon the earth. He gave them the Ten Commandments. I draw to your attention the eighth commandment. I shall only read part of it. The Lord said, "Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

"Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

"But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: . . ." (Exodus 20:8-10.)

As the Israelites traveled along, they forgot the Ten Commandments. They gathered together their gold and built the golden calf which they worshiped in place of the Lord, and they forgot the Lord's day—the Sabbath day. They failed to meet together on the Sabbath day and thank the Lord for all of the blessings that he bestowed upon them, namely freedom and the right to hold the Promised Land.

This event with reference to keeping the Sabbath day holy by commandment from God took place 3,500 years ago. Two thousand years ago, the Christ taught the world to keep the Sabbath day holy, for he declared, "And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath:" (Mark 2:27.) Conditions in the world then as of today indicate that man is made for the Sabbath and not the Sabbath for man. Brethren and sisters, if people will give consideration of the Sabbath as a holy day and remember God who has given them life as their Father and Jesus Christ, his Son, as their older Brother, meeting together in priesthood meeting and Sacrament meeting with the attitude of prayer, they will be blessed, guided, and directed by divine inspiration whereby they can bear testimony that God actually lives and that Christ is his Son.

Again, it was necessary for the Lord to make it clear to the people that the Sabbath day is his day, a holy day, for on August 7, 1831, one hundred and twenty-seven years ago, an American Prophet, Joseph Smith, received a revelation from the Lord, "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day;

First Day

"For verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; . . ." (D&C 59:9-10.)

We of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints accept this marvelous revelation, and we accept and look upon the Sabbath day of the Lord as the most sacred day of the week. As a people, we have a great responsibility not only living the gospel but also in constantly keeping the Sabbath day of the Lord holy and sacred, thereby setting an example to the world as a whole.

The Sabbath day is indeed a day of rest and one wherein we express our appreciation to the Lord for the many blessings that we have and do receive.

As the Israelites worshiped the golden calf, in many respects in various areas the golden calf is again being worshiped wherein nations and individuals are interested in the matter of recreation, the earning of money, farming, and different kinds of other businesses on the Sabbath day, all of which is contrary to the mind and will of him who gave us life, even our Father in heaven.

I am positively sure that after the organization of the Church on April 6, 1830, the membership kept the Sabbath day holy. Originally, they were in New York, Ohio, Missouri, and finally Illinois and were driven out of Nauvoo by their enemies. The Prophet had borne his testimony of the existence of God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, for he saw them and lost his life for bearing this testimony; but another new prophet was selected, even Brigham Young, who led the membership of the Church in making the long trip across the plains to the area of these mountains where the Church is now located and where we, its membership, have the privilege of dwelling. The pioneers on Sunday recognized the day of the Lord—the Sabbath. They thanked him for all the blessings that had been bestowed upon them. They partook of the Sacrament and received inspiration and divine guidance from their leadership which included the prophet and members of the twelve. The pioneers not only accepted the Sabbath day as the Holy Day of the Lord as they traveled over the plains, but also after arriving here and in various areas they saw to it that the Sabbath day was a holy day wherein they held Sacrament meeting and gave consideration to the Holy Priesthood which they held. They looked upon one another as brethren and sisters, sons and daughters of God, and Jesus Christ, his Son, as their older Brother. The pioneers have set us a great example with reference to keeping the Sabbath day holy, and therein we have a great responsibility in so teaching the world the holiness of the Sabbath day by the kind of example we set. We have many opportunities not only for ourselves but for others; for example, the great Sunday School organization is available to teach the gospel as it has been revealed through Jesus Christ and the prophets down to the present time. Brigham Young declared upon one occasion, "In some of our Wards and settlements the administering of the Sacrament has been introduced in the Sunday Schools. It is very pleasing and gratifying to the spirit that I possess, for the parents to see that their children attend Sunday school and receive the proper instruction with regard to their faith. After the Sunday school is over, let the parents take the pains to bring their children to meetings." (Journal of Discourses, Vol. 19, page 92.) He recognized the most important meeting of the week—the Sacrament meeting on the day of the Lord, the day when they should come together and partake of the Sacrament and remember exactly what the Christ had done in dying for all men and making it possible for us to have the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ for our salvation, our guidance and our direction. I pray the day will come that all of these men of the Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthood will attend Sunday morning priesthood meeting, Sunday School, and particularly the Sacrament meeting.

There comes to my mind the history of a wonderful man. I knew him at the age of twelve. His name was Jesse Knight. As a boy I lived with my family in Eureka, Utah, until I arrived at the age of fourteen, and during my boyhood days, I knew and came in contact with Jesse Knight. He opened up five of the great mines in the Eureka area and became a very wealthy man, but with all of it, he was an active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He paid his tithing and made contributions to the Church, and particularly to Brigham Young University, but in spite of his wealth and greatness, he did not seek the golden calf. He was one of those individuals who accepted the Sabbath day as the day of the Lord. On the Sabbath day, his mines were closed. His miners had the opportunity of rest and of attending their various meetings. There was erected a mining camp which carried his name, Knightsville, wherein he immediately saw to it that a chapel was erected, a ward was organized, and at the head of this ward as bishop was John Roundy, the general superintendent of all of these mines. I knew him when I was a boy and up until the time he passed away some few years ago. But the thought is this, that to Jesse Knight the Sabbath day was a holy day not only for himself but also for all of those who were employed by him. Upon closing his mines on the Sabbath day there were other individuals who owned mines in the area who complained, indicating that closing the mines on Sunday would create difficulty for them, but, nevertheless, Brother Knight went ahead and closed his mines. In a short time, the owners of these other mines soon followed his example, and in this large mining camp for several years all miners had the privilege of attending their meetings and keeping the day of the Lord holy which unfortunately has since changed wherein the holy day of the Lord is forgotten in many such areas.

Once again, brethren and sisters, I bear testimony to you that if we will keep the Sabbath day holy, the Lord will bless us, guide us, inspire us, and direct us in solving our many problems. The Lord will never forget us if we do not forget him. The Apostle Paul said, "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." (Romans 14:17.) Do you suppose that we can enjoy righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost if we fail to keep the Sabbath day holy? With reference to the statement of the Apostle Paul, "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; . . ." he had in mind of keeping the Sabbath day unholy by participating in recreation and the opening of businesses on the Sabbath day, all of which is contrary to the mind and will of our Father in heaven.

How inspiring it is to thank the Lord in our homes, and not only in our homes, but to have the privilege of coming together on the Sabbath day in Sacrament meeting and expressing our gratitude and thanks for the many blessings that we have and do receive from day to day.

I again draw to your attention the statement of the Prophet Moses over 3,500 years ago when he said, "Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: . . ." (Ex. 20:8-10.) And the statement of the Christ 2,000 years ago wherein he declared, "And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath:

"Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath." (Mark 2:27-28.) And the revelation to the Prophet Joseph, "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day;

"For verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High;" (D&C 59:9-10.)

In conclusion, my brethren and sisters, I bear testimony to you if we will follow and live the words of the Prophet Moses, of Jesus Christ the Son of God, and the Prophet Joseph Smith, a divine prophet, in keeping the Sabbath day holy, the Lord, in turn, will bless us, guide us, direct us, and inspire us, which I pray will be the blessing of all of us, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop of the Church. Our concluding speaker will be Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am very happy, brothers and sisters, to have the privilege of attending this conference with you. I rejoice in my membership in the Church and in the faith of the Latter-day Saints, and the work that they are accomplishing for good in the world.

Last night we were told in our missionary conference meeting here, that during 1958 we had 33,330 convert baptisms into the Church. Now that represents a lot of work, and it represents people who have left the teachings of their youth and joined this Church because the Lord has given them a witness by the power of the Holy Spirit, that this work is truly divine.

I returned a week ago from touring the West Spanish-American Mission, among our Spanish-speaking people. I was impressed as I listened to President Christiansen here today tell of the testimonies he heard while touring the missions of Europe. Such testimonies you hear wherever you go. One little Mexican widow we met while touring the mission, left with six little children, and asked to bear her testimony, thanked the Lord that she had the gospel now to raise her children by. That was typical of many of the testimonies we heard.

Recently at a conference in Arizona, a prominent banker, who had just joined the Church, said, "This Church is not just a religion, it is a way of life." And when you find the joy and the happiness that come to people through accepting the gospel, it makes you feel as if we should put forth every effort in our power to share our message with all of our Father's children.

The Lord indicated when he gave the signs of his second coming, that this gospel of the kingdom, the gospel that he preached, the gospel that he left with his twelve, would be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then should the end come.

It is not that we expect everybody will accept the truth, because their minds are blinded, but if they would, it would greatly enrich their lives. I thought as I listened to these testimonies, that if I could have the desire of my heart above all other things, it would be that all men everywhere, our Father's sons and daughters, might share with us the glorious truths of the restored gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I think I felt like Alma of old. After hearing the testimonies of his brethren of their experiences in the mission field, he made this statement:

"O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart, that I might go forth and speak with the trump of God, with a voice to shake the earth, and cry repentance unto every people!" (Alma 29:1.)

On Wednesday of this week, we spent eight and one-half hours listening to our mission presidents. Thirty-eight of them spoke and bore their witness of the joy they found in their labors, and of the happiness that comes to those who accept the gospel, and of the miraculous manner in which the Lord had led some of the missionaries to the homes of those who have been seeking after truth.

So I feel that the greatest desire of our hearts should be to share this message with all the world.

One of our noted commentators is reported to have said that he was once asked what message could be broadcast to the world that would be considered more important than any other, and he said, after giving it consideration, he decided that to be able to broadcast to the world that a man who had lived upon this earth and had died had returned again with a message from God, would be the greatest message that could be broadcast to the world.

That being true, the Latter-day Saints have the greatest message. You have heard the testimony borne this morning that the Father and the Son appeared to the boy, Joseph Smith. You listened to President Clark tell of the doubt in the hearts of even the followers and the apostles of Jesus when the report came to them from the women that he was not in the tomb but that he was risen, and they thought it was an idle tale.

When we talk today of God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ coming back to this earth and holy messengers visiting this earth in our day, the world thinks that these are idle tales and yet they profess to believe in the Bible, how the Lord appeared to the prophets of old and the Bible bears witness that he is the same yesterday, today, and forever without shadow of changing, and how can they believe in that kind of a God and then believe that the heavens are sealed so that he cannot talk to us today as he did in days of old.

I would like to say to those who are not members of the Church who might be listening in over the air, or those who are here present today, that our witness is true. We know it is true, and someday, if you have listened to our testimonies and you do not go to the trouble to find out whether these testimonies are true or not, you are going to be held accountable; for our message is to be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations.

I have thought that it would not be necessary to study everything and read all the scriptures if one really wanted to know if our message is true. There is no other message like it in all the world; no other people profess an opening of the heavens and the visitation to this earth of holy messengers in our day; for the most tangible evidence of the truth of the story of the Prophet Joseph Smith is the Book of Mormon. The Book of Mormon has been distributed by millions of copies all over the world, and there are many, even not members of the Church, who believe that the Book of Mormon is true.

Just read the testimony of the three witnesses in the front of every book, where they testify that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brought and laid before their eyes, that they beheld and saw the plates and the engravings thereon, and the angel declared unto them that they were translated by the gift and the power of God.

Why cannot the world believe such a testimony as that? And then there is the testimony of the eight witnesses to whom the Prophet was privileged to show the plates. Then there is the testimony that comes from those who accept the gospel.

I attended a conference recently where a young woman, a convert, the mother of two little children, was asked to bear her testimony. She said something like this:

"When the elders came into my home, they read me the promise in the Book of Mormon that when that book came to us, if we would read it, asking God the Eternal Father in sincerity, that the Lord would manifest the truth of it unto us by the power of the Holy Ghost."

She said, "I believed that promise, and I went into my bedroom and got down on my knees and asked God the Eternal Father to let me know whether that book was true or not, and I read it, and my whole soul was illumined, and I knew that it was divine."

We had a man here as a tourist on Temple Square a few years ago, a minister from Texas, and after returning home he wrote a letter back saying that he had purchased a copy of the Book of Mormon. He said, "I have a library of important books that cost me over twelve thousand dollars, but I have one book that is more valuable than them all because it is the word of God and it is the Book of Mormon."

Just recently a letter came in to the headquarters of the Church from a minister in the East. He said he bought a copy of the Book of Mormon years ago from a Mormon elder who called at his home. He said, "I put it in my library. I never read it until recently, and now I have been reading it, and I have been quoting from it in my sermons." In his letter he mentioned the words of Alma and the words of Nephi out of the Book of Mormon which he had used in the preparation of his sermons.

Why cannot the world believe? Why cannot they accept it? Some of you remember a few years ago how Brother Nicholas G. Smith told us of being invited by the dean of religion at the University of Southern California in California to lend him a copy of the Book of Mormon. He gave him a copy used by the missionaries that had passages underlined in red ink, or a lead pencil, and that minister invited Brother Smith and the missionaries to attend his next meeting in his own parish, and he stood before his people and read verse after verse that had been underlined by the missionaries, and then he said something like this:

"Why cannot we fellowship a people who believe in such wonderful things as I have been reading to you here today?" And then he went on to say, "We have here a volume of scripture which has been in our midst a hundred years, and we have not known anything about it."

I see that my time has gone. I love the Book of Mormon. I know that no honest soul searching after God can study that book without knowing that it is divine, that it was not written by Joseph Smith; and when it is evident that it is what it purports to be, a volume of scripture that the Bible promised should come forth in our day, then all of the message of the Prophet Joseph Smith is true, then they will open their hearts and their minds to the messages of Moroni, John the Baptist, Peter, James, and John, Moses, Elijah, Elias, the prophets who have visited this earth in the restitution of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began, which Peter declared and promised would occur in this world before the coming of Christ.

The Book of Mormon was preserved to be a witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations.

In 1934 a questionnaire was sent out to five hundred Protestant ministers by the Northwestern University, and out of 500, 130 of them denied the Deity of Jesus. When the blind lead the blind, Jesus said "... both shall fall into the ditch." (Matt. 15:14.)

We invite all men everywhere to make an investigation, and we promise them as servants of the Living God that they can know that this work is divine and that is my testimony to you, and I give it to you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Redeemer. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now favor us with "Worthy Is the Lamb," conducted by Norman Gulbrandsen. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Frank D. Parry, formerly president of the Uruguayan Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

Brothers and sisters, I believe I will take just a minute and digress from our usual policy. You are thrilled this morning with the presence of these young people from the Brigham Young University. Many of them, perhaps all, I do not know, will be heard in a great musical production based on the history of the Mormon Battalion which the Brigham Young University is presenting in Provo the last of this month and June first, second, and third. They call it, "Sand in Their Shoes." Because of the historic significance of this play and the sacrifice and suffering of the brave men and women who made this trek, I believe that all members of the Church who can possibly attend that will be highly pleased and well paid for their effort. I have heard it said that in many ways this play will be comparable to the Hill Cumorah Pageant.

Success to the Brigham Young University in that great play. We appreciate very much your singing today and your presence.

We shall now hear the Choir sing, "Worthy Is the Lamb," and the benediction by Elder Frank D. Parry.

An anthem, "Worthy Is The Lamb," was sung by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses.

The closing prayer was offered by Elder Frank D. Parry, formerly president of the Uruguayan Mission.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The Conference reconvened at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, April 4.

President David O. McKay, who presided and conducted the meeting, opened the services of this, the second session, by making the following remarks:

President David O. McKay:

Among the educators whom we welcomed this morning, we omitted Dr. Howard S. McDonald of the Los Angeles State College. We welcome him. We also omitted making mention of a group of seminary students. This note was handed to me since our dismissal from this morning's meeting: "In the balcony on your left" (that is, this morning, we hope they are here now) "are forty seminary students from Arimo, Idaho, who boarded a bus at three o'clock this morning in order to be here early." If you happen to doze this afternoon, we shall understand why. We welcome you.

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in the second session of the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. All of the General Authorities are present this afternoon as they were this morning. This session, as the one this morning, will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. These services are also being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall by television.

We are favored again by the presence of the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Professor Ralph Woodward conducting. Elder Roy M. Darley is at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses rendering, "His Yoke Is Easy." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder C. Leland Davey, president of the Cannon Stake.

---

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, conducted by Ralph Woodward, with Roy M. Darley at the organ, sang the selection, "His Yoke Is Easy."

Elder C. Leland Davey, president of the Cannon Stake, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

Elder C. Leland Davey, president of the Cannon Stake, offered the invocation. The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now favor us with, "O Lord, Our God, Vouchsafe Thy Grace," conducted by Professor Ralph Woodward.

Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve, will speak following the singing.

"O Lord, Our God, Vouchsafe Thy Grace," was sung by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses.

President David O. McKay:

President Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve, will be our first speaker, and he will be followed by Elder Alma Sonne.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I need the help of the Spirit of the Lord. Elder Christiansen reported his visit to the various branches of the Church in Europe. I made a promise to the good members of the Church in the far Pacific that when I returned I would remember them to you and express to you their love and fellowship. It is a glorious thing to go into a country, one so far away, and find members of the Church who think and act just as we do here, with the same testimony of the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I am fulfilling my promise in expressing to you their goodwill and fellowship.

First Day

For the few minutes that I have I would like to take a text from the words of our Savior, "... except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:5.)

I am firmly convinced that nowhere else in the world, outside of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is there anyone who has the authority to perform the ordinances that would bring the birth of the water and of the Spirit to mankind. That would have to be from someone who has the authority of the priesthood of God, and that authority was revealed in these latter-days, the Aaronic Priesthood first by John the Baptist to the Prophet Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and then the Melchizedek Priesthood under the hands of Peter, James, and John, also to the Prophet Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.

And from that source we have obtained the priesthood of God by which we act and by which we go forth into the world to preach the gospel to those who sit in darkness. I know this statement is not pleasing to the great majority of people upon the face of the earth, but nevertheless it is true. And I realize that it is impossible for us—all things are possible, of course, to the Lord—but it is impossible for us with all the means that we have at our command and the means at our command have increased wonderfully in the last few years—but we cannot reach every soul living upon the face of the earth. They are dying off every day. They are being born every day into the world.

However, the Word of the Lord being true, the time must come when the message of salvation will reach every soul. How is that to be done? We do the best we can with all the facilities at our command, through the preaching of the gospel, disseminating the truth by word of mouth, by the many facilities that are at our command, through the magazines that are published, through the press and every other means. But it is impossible for us with the facilities such as they are, to reach every soul.

Furthermore, there have been millions upon millions of people who have lived in this world who never had the opportunity to hear of Christ, never heard his name; they lived at a time and in a place where his name was not known, where the gospel did not reach them, not because of any fault on the part of our Father in heaven nor of his servants to reach the peoples of the earth, but because from the beginning of time men have loved Satan more than they loved God, and they have turned away and refused to receive the truth, have raised their children in darkness, and they have died in darkness, so far as the gospel of Jesus Christ is concerned.

Nevertheless, the promises of the Lord must and will be fulfilled. From the very beginning of this dispensation, just a few months after the organization of the Church, the Lord gave a revelation in which he foreshadowed the salvation of the human family, all of those who would repent and believe. I shall read to you this part of the Lord's Preface to the book of his commandments; the words of Jesus Christ, himself.

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together." (D&C 1:1.)

Now, that is to all those who are living. But the Lord goes on to enlarge this thought. And he says:

"For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated." (Idem 2.)

The Lord has not limited that to any dispensation or any age upon the face of the earth. He has made that just as broad as the history of mankind, and he adds:

"And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed." (Idem 3.)

It seems so strange to me that the peoples of this world since the days of the great apostasy, when the apostles of old were removed and those who held the priesthood were destroyed, that the world could fall into the awful condition which today prevails, which denies salvation to every soul born into this world who never heard the name of Jesus Christ or never had an opportunity to repent and be baptized or receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. They have held out no hope for all of these people of the nations, pagan or otherwise, who have dwelt upon the face of the earth without the knowledge of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Lord is just, and he has made it clear that the time will come when every soul shall have an opportunity to hear the truth. That does not mean that every soul has the opportunity or will have that opportunity in this mortal world. Millions have died without that opportunity. It has been no fault of theirs, but the fault lies with their fathers before them, who turned away from the truth which truth was given in the beginning to Adam who was commanded to teach these things to his children. The scriptures say that Adam did teach these things to his children, but that they loved Satan more than they loved God, and Satan came among them and said, "I, too, am a son of God, believe it not, and they believed it not and from that time forth men became carnal, sensual and devilish," (see Moses 5:13) and so darkness spread over the face of the earth.

In his justice, the Lord has revealed to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, just as he revealed it in the days of the apostles, that there is a salvation even for the dead and the time must come when every soul must have an opportunity to hear it. Those who did not get the opportunity to hear it in this world will have that opportunity in the world of spirits, and Peter made that very clear in his Epistles, and it is only fair that those who died without a knowledge of the gospel should have the opportunity to hear it, and the Lord revealed that great truth to the Prophet Joseph Smith, that the time would come when the gospel of the kingdom would be declared to the dead and they who never had the opportunity of hearing it should have that opportunity given to them, and if they would repent in that spirit world then we could go into the temples of the Lord and perform the ordinances for them vicariously, being saviors upon Mount Zion, and thus give unto the dead the opportunity to hear the truth, to repent of their sins, and if they will repent and turn away from evil and accept the truth, we can go into the temples of the Lord and perform the ordinances for them which will be valid unto them just the same as if they were living upon the face of the earth.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is a vicarious work. Christ came into this world and died for mankind. He did not die just for those who repented of their sins and received his gospel. His death upon the cross brought salvation to every living soul, so far as the resurrection from the dead is concerned, and every soul born into this world shall receive the resurrection from the dead because he was not guilty of bringing death into the world, and man is not penalized because death came into the world, but naturally he has to die—that is part of the mortal life—but he will be raised again in the resurrection no matter who he is, no matter when he lived, no matter what he believed or what he failed to believe. That is a universal gift from Jesus Christ to every soul.

It is a different matter, however, so far as the kingdom of God is concerned, and no soul is going to enter into that kingdom until he has received either in this life in person or by proxy because he was not here to do it for himself, baptism for the remission of his sins and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. What a wonderful gift it is the Lord has placed into our hands, to bring salvation to the dead, to those who are willing to repent and receive the truth.

I have no idea in my mind that every soul that has lived upon the face of the earth, who has died and gone to the spirit world, is going to repent and receive the gospel. There will be many that will not do that. Our scriptures point to that fact. They are not going to receive the gospel in the spirit world, when their souls are full of bitterness and hate towards the truth, but they have a right to have it taught to them.

The Lord went into the spirit world, himself, turned the key for the salvation of the dead and our elders when they pass to the next world, go into that world to continue their labors of preaching the gospel, bringing to repentance all who are willing to repent and receive the truth, that they might come into the kingdom of God, or as Paul calls it, "the family of God in heaven and on earth." For it is the family of God. The kingdom of God will be one great family. We call ourselves brothers and sisters. In very deed we become joint heirs with Jesus Christ through the gospel of Jesus Christ, sons and daughters of God, and entitled to the fullness of the blessings of his kingdom if we will repent and keep these commandments.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

In conclusion I want to read to you one or two statements dealing with our responsibilities towards the dead. First from the Prophet Joseph Smith:

"The greatest responsibility in this world that God has laid upon us, is to seek after our dead." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 356.)

"This doctrine was the burden of the scriptures. Those Saints who neglect it, in behalf of their deceased relatives, do it at the peril of their own salvation." (Ibid., p. 193.)

"It is one of the greatest and most important subjects that God has revealed. He should send Elijah to seal the children to the fathers, and the fathers to the children . . . without us, they could not be made perfect, nor we without them; the fathers without the children, nor the children without the fathers . . . I wish you to understand this subject, for it is important." (Ibid., p. 337.)

"We have a work to do just as important in its sphere as the Savior's work was in its sphere. Our fathers cannot be made perfect without us; we cannot be made perfect without them. They have done their work and now sleep. We are now called upon to do ours; which is to be the greatest work man ever performed on the earth." Brigham Young. (Discourses, p. 406.)

"The ordinance of sealing must be performed here man to man, and woman to man, and children to parents, etc., until the chain of generation is made perfect in the sealing ordinances back to Father Adam. . . ." (Ibid., p. 407.)

"Brethren and sisters, lay these things to heart. Let us go on with our records . . . I pray God that as a people our eyes may be opened to see, our ears to hear, and our hearts to understand the great and mighty work that rests upon our shoulders, and that the God of heaven requires at our hand. . . ." President Willford Woodruff. (The Utah Genealogical and Historical Magazine, Vol. 13, p. 152.)

"This is the day in which the Lord expects his Church at least to inaugurate the great work of turning 'the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers.'" President David O. McKay (The Utah Genealogical and Historical Magazine, Vol. 25, p. 59 or Gospel Ideals, p. 19.)

"What about your great great ancestors who never heard the name of Jesus Christ? . . . You may have the opportunity of gathering the names of your ancestors and, by being baptized for by proxy, they may become members of the kingdom of God in the other world as we are members here."—President David O. McKay. (See Instructor, November 1958, p. 322.)

Now, brethren, these are our responsibilities, and the Lord requires this work at our hands. The Church has gone to great expense endeavoring to gather the records of the dead, and I want to say to you, has been very, very successful in that labor to gather in the records of your ancestors so that we could go into the temples of the Lord and perform these labors for them so that all who are willing to repent and receive the gospel of Jesus Christ may be brought into his kingdom and into that great family of God, which is both in heaven and on earth.

And I humbly pray that this spirit will take hold of the members of the Church, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Brother Joseph Fielding Smith, President of the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. We shall now hear from Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, who will be followed by Elder Spencer W. Kimball.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, just as I arose to step up here to the rostrum, my good friend and associate, Elder Christiansen said, "The Lord bless you." I think I have never needed his blessing more than I do at this moment, and I pray for the good Spirit, and pray also for your support and your sympathy.

I was impressed very much with the remarks of President Joseph Fielding Smith. He referred to the comprehensiveness of Mormonism, how this gospel of the kingdom must be preached to every creature—all of God's children—whether they be living or whether they be dead. A few years ago I was over in Norway and visited the little town of Trondheim where a car took us up to an elevated place just back of the Viking Monument in that city. As the car stopped I said to the driver, "Do you know where Brother John A. Widtsoe and his mother lived when their home was in this city?" He said, "Of course. Everyone knows that. Would you like to see it?" Of course, I would.

He drove us down through the city, and we finally stopped in front of a little white dwelling. Everything about that place was immaculate. Even the stones around the walks were painted white. I knocked at the door, and I said to the woman who opened it, "May I go around to the back and see the premises in the rear?" She said, "Of course!" I walked around to the back and as I stood there I saw some lettering on the fence. I walked nearer so I could better see the lettering, and I deciphered the name, Karl Vidtsoe. I wrote the name in my book, and when I came back to Salt Lake City I immediately went up to see Brother Widtsoe. I said to him, "Brother Widtsoe, who is Karl Vidtsoe?" He said, "Oh, that is Uncle Karl. Uncle Karl was a good man, but he never could see the beauty and the strength of the restored gospel. But Sister Widtsoe and I have been over there," he pointed to the temple, "and we have done the work for Karl,—all we can do for him in this life, but when we get over on the other side I will surely find Karl, and I will preach the gospel to him until he is ready to receive it."

Do you see the beauty of the restored gospel? Do you see the anxiety of Brother Widtsoe to proclaim the gospel truths to his relative? It occurs to me as I stand here that our work is probably never done. We will commence on the morrow, or whenever we pass on, just where we left off today. We will search for our relatives and our friends until we will find them, and we will preach to them the self-same gospel which we are teaching the world today, both at home and abroad. It is glorious, brethren and sisters, to contemplate this phase of the restored gospel.

I jotted down here in just a moment, two or three passages of scripture. One reads like this: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all [else] shall be added unto you." (See Matt. 6:33.) Here is another one which has come to us through modern revelation. "... Many are called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen?

"Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men..." (D&C 121:34-35.) Have you seen men depart from the faith because their hearts are centered in the things of this world? And because they aspire to the honors of men?

Another statement made by the Savior: "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God?" (Mark 10:23.) I do not know exactly what the Lord meant when he said that, but I do believe that we have no right as members of the Church to put our first thoughts to the accumulation of worldly things, and I believe he expects us, as stated in that verse I first read, to seek first his kingdom.

He said to the rich young ruler: "If thou wilt be perfect, go sell all thou hast, and give to the poor, and take up thy cross and follow me." (See Matt. 19:21.) The rich young ruler could not comply because he had many possessions, and as a result he went away sorrowing.

Judas Iscariot thought he could get nowhere without money, so he betrayed his Lord for thirty pieces of silver. The sequence to that is that Judas hanged himself. I know a man who gave up his responsibilities in the Church in order to make money. As a result he is wealthy, and has become a power in the business world, but I now observe that he has lost his family and destroyed his chances and his opportunities for a place in God's kingdom. That is tragic, my brethren and sisters.

I know another man who gave up his position in a large business concern rather than give up his calling as a bishop. I loved that man. He died a year ago, but he left his widow enough for her care while she lives, and I have observed that his sons are recognized leaders in the business world. The Lord blesses devotion and faithful performance.

I have been reading just recently the life of Dr. Karl G. Maeser. Brother Maeser was a remarkable man. Somewhere in the book it tells about a group of missionaries who had met together in Meissen, Germany, the birthplace of Dr. Maeser. One of the missionaries made this remark: "Think what Dr. Maeser has done for the Church." Another responded promptly: "Think what the Church has done for Dr. Maeser." That remark offers a real suggestion. Have you ever stopped to think what the Church has done for you individually? How it has enriched your life? How it has given you courage and strength to go forward in your daily pursuits, and how it has brought you comfort in times of sorrow and distress? It is wonderful to belong to the Church.

Many of our leaders, past and present have made great contributions to the Church. I know men who have laid upon the altar every worldly possession they had for the gospel's sake.

They have gone into strange lands, sometimes far away from home and friends, to teach the gospel of the kingdom, and to explain God's revealed plan of salvation to others. Dr. Maeser, as I have read, was reared in an environment of culture and refinement. He associated with the elite in Germany. He had access to libraries. He was familiar with the best books of his day. His education was broad and varied, and included the study of music and art and several languages. God in his own way had prepared Dr. Maeser for his mission in the Church among the Latter-day Saints.

I can well imagine that it was difficult for Dr. Maeser to make the adjustment, yet I am sure that this good and great man did not complain nor compromise. He did not permit difficulties to obscure his vision of the truth. Brother Maeser had heard the voice of the Shepherd. That voice brought conviction to his soul. That conviction transformed his entire life, but whatever happened, confusion and uncertainty disappeared, and he stood for the first time on the solid foundation of faith in the True and Living God.

Brethren and sisters, may we appreciate our membership in this great Church. May we have the courage and the strength to devote ourselves unselfishly for the promotion of God's work among his children. That is our responsibility. It is our obligation, and may we not fail therein, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Twelve. Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Beloved brethren and sisters, it is a joy to be back in this part of Zion. As the other brethren have mentioned their tours in foreign lands, my very recent memories were stirred. I bring to you also the greetings of the thousands of members of the Church of all nationalities in South America.

Last Saturday and Sunday I was in Peru with various gatherings of Saints.

resurrection, an ascension, and now he had returned to the earth again.

As he went into the clouds and was received and absorbed by them after his forty days upon the earth, there were many standing looking up into heaven, and the angels stood by and said, "... Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1:11.)

After his appearance to the Nephites, it was a long time before he returned. He could not well return to a people who did not believe in him. He needed somebody who had a great, consuming faith, who would receive him as Jesus Christ, Redeemer, Savior, Son of God. That happened in a grove in New York State in the early part of the nineteenth century, and the same words were said again by a Loving Father, who had already delegated this particular work to a Glorified Son, and he said again to a young boy, "... This is my Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:17.)

You remember what Peter said when the disciples were asked, "... Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" They spoke up and said men thought him to be Elias or one of the other prophets, and then the Lord said again, and I can imagine his piercing eyes, wondering and expectant eyes, "... But whom say ye that I am?" And the answer was one of the most stirring and glorious of all statements made, "... Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." And the next statement followed which must never be overlooked: "... flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (See Matt. 16:13-17.) In other words, man has not told you this, but my Father has revealed it unto thee, a great revelation has come unto thee, and ye know it.

I asked four hundred missionaries the Lord's question which faces every man, woman, and child on this earth: "Whom do ye say that I the Son of man am?" And I was gratified at the hundreds of replies from your sons and daughters, saying "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

And that is my testimony to you, my brothers and sisters, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. The Congregation will now join in singing, "Redeemer of Israel," conducted by Brother Ralph Woodward. After the singing, Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of the Seventy will speak to us.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses and the congregation joined in singing the hymn, "Redeemer of Israel."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of Seventy will be our next speaker. He will be followed by Bishop Carl W. Buehner.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I am happy to say something to my brethren and sisters on this occasion and I sincerely pray for their faith and prayers. We are all interested in the Christian world today. I have the honor of being a member of the American Christian Palestine Committee with the Reverend Bishop Moulton of the Episcopal Church to work for the redemption of Palestine, and its restoration. A few weeks ago we were asked to write about the Constitution of the United States and what it means as a civic document. To us all, the Constitution of the United States is a very sacred document, and it has never been equaled in the history of the world.

I wish to read a paragraph written ages ago by a famous Greek orator whose name was Isocrates.

"The age in which we live should be distinguished by some glorious enterprise. . . . Let world leaders contrive to put to an end our present troubles. The treaties of peace are insufficient for their purpose; they may retard, but cannot prevent our misfortunes. We stand in need of some more durable plan, which will forever put to an end our hostilities and unite us by the lasting ties of mutual affection and fidelity."

Quoting the words of Herbert L. Willett,

"The divisions of Christendom today are its most conspicuous reproach, and its chief cause of inefficiency. They present a moral affront to the enterprise inaugurated by Jesus Christ, and constitute the outstanding limitation of its progress. The divided state of the Church is an affront to Christianity. We wonder if Christianity can survive; we wonder if the Christian groups can fight the evils of the social order of our times."

Only the true Church can furnish the program and power to meet the emergencies that confront the world today.

The Holy Bible is not only the masterpiece of the world's literature, but it is also the most majestic exposition of religion ever given to man. It contains the writings of the inspired prophets of God, and embodies the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord. It enlightens us on the great themes of revealed religion: man, scripture, salvation, faith, prayer, and immortality. God reigns in heaven and in earth; he is the rightful King of nations, and the Source of supreme good to men. In his image was man created. Great prophets like Moses, Isaiah, Hosea, Jeremiah, Daniel, Ezekiel, and Micah were divinely appointed servants, and they wrote the holy scriptures and inspired the peoples of the ancient world to believe in God and to hope for the Redeemer of the world. They had the highest possible knowledge of moral and religious laws.

How one loves to read the Ten Commandments, one of the greatest lessons of the Bible. They were given to Moses, the prophet, hundreds of years before the birth of the Savior.

Then we have such words from the Jewish Talmud which were written soon after the Ten Commandments. Let me quote to you a few sentences which show the dignity of the teachings of ancient Jewish writings.

"The name of the Lord shall be loved through thy treatment of thy fellow man.

"Do God's will as thy own will, submit thy will to his will.

"Be not like servants who serve their master for the sake of reward.

"Thy neighbor's honor must be as dear to thee as thy own.

"Keep aloof from grumbling.

"Do not hate the one who reproves thee.

"If you humble yourself, the Lord will lift you up.

"Pass not judgment upon thy neighbor, until thou has put thyself in his place."

However highly we may estimate the truths we have today, it is for us to understand the gospel. Rudolph Kittel of Leipzig University wrote some years ago: "Some one has got to rise to give to the world the doctrines of Jesus Christ, our Savior, for the world is in need of them." This calls to my mind an experience that some of the actors of the old Salt Lake Theatre had one evening. A noted American actor had just closed the play of Hamlet, and was about to leave to take the train for San Francisco. Standing in the doorway of the so-called "Green Room," Mr. Clawson, the manager of the old playhouse asked him to say a few words. Mr. Edwin Booth stopped for a minute or two, then said: "It is seldom I speak in public, but I would like to repeat on this occasion the most beautiful words ever uttered. Bowing his head he said:

"Our Father which art in heaven,

Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come.

Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven."

(See Matt. 6:9-10.)

With these words from the Lord's Prayer, Booth turned and said "Good-bye" to the few people and walked from the theater to the sidewalk where he took a carriage to the depot.

The Prophet Joseph Smith has done the mightiest work of all:

We first see Joseph Smith in the woods on the frontier of America praying as a child might pray, and the Lord appearing to him. Using the words of the Psalmist, "Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore, God hath blessed thee forever more." With the Father was Jesus the Savior. Joseph heard the voice of God and the divine words: "This is my Beloved Son." A new day was at hand. From that moment he was heart and mind for the word of the Lord. What a message for our missionaries of today!

He learned that day that the divisions of Christendom are its most conspicuous reproach and the chief cause of its inefficiency. They present a moral affront to the enterprise inaugurated by Jesus Christ, and constitute the outstanding limitation of its progress. Christianity is weakened by its divisions in facing the problems of today, among which are class hatreds, race antagonisms, blindness to social justice, the lure of vicious literature, crime-instigating narcotics, and the spread of military spirit in the world.

The supreme test of religion is revelation. No religion can be persuasive unless it relies on the principle of revelation. The living Church of Jesus Christ must be revelatory. One readily sees that the very lifeblood of the Church is the principle and potency of redemption. Christianity in its pure sense is the religion of redeemed personality. While all true men reveal God, the complete carrier of revelation can be no other than a chosen personality.

By the power of the Holy Priesthood which he received from heaven, Joseph Smith established our true relationship to God. Out of this grows the salvation of man—his true immortal life.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNER

Second Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

My dear brethren and sisters, it is always an honor to greet you at a general conference of the Church and to bear you my testimony of the divinity of this great, ever-growing, latter-day work. What I have read, heard, and observed concerning serious conditions confronting this world in which we live makes me more appreciative than

The nations all bear witness to the need of a light that is not of man. We can give our word to the world that the forces which are to make the world the world it ought to be are now within it.

Thousands, yea millions of people are waiting to hear the voice of our Father in heaven. Millions are turning to God, and we are in these days of world turmoil experiencing a rising tide of understanding and goodwill that is constantly ebbing and flowing among us all. The fact that the movement has been reserved for our day fills us with the deepening sense of our responsibility and duty to make sure that the golden opportunities it offers are not lost.

"It changes everything.

I can see the end of war in this, some day.

I can see the joy of women and little children—some day.

I can see the cities and great spaces of land full of happiness.

I can see love shining in every face.

There shall be no more sin, no pain, no loss, no death—

Only life, only God—some day when the world shall have learned."

—Charles Rann Kennedy

I pray God to bless us all this day.
Amen.

ever before of the testimony I have of things eternal.

I am sure we are all interested in security, and would like to say to all people living that if we are interested in security, we should live close to the teachings of the God of this land, who is Jesus Christ, for he has said, "... and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, . . ." (D&C 1:38.) I think more people than ever before are turning their hearts to religion for an answer to some of the perplexing problems we face.

I find great joy in my work in the Church, and I hope it will always be my desire to have the work of the Church come first. I like people who put "first things" first in the Church.

It is very encouraging to know that progress is being made all along the line. I enjoy my experiences in the stakes with you people.

Recently, a young man speaking at a stake quarterly conference said: "I am a very important person in my ward. I hold the office of a priest. I am the only priest in my priests' quorum. In our quorum, it is either one-hundred percent or nothing." It did not take long for this young man to prove to us that he was a hundred percent. I admire the young men and young women who are achieving to be hundred percenters by the standards with which we measure them. I am sure we cannot measure all of their activities, but many of them are making remarkable progress. This is even carrying over to some of our bishops and some of our other leaders.

I learned not long ago while attending a Fathers' and Sons' banquet in the Summit Stake that one bishop in a ward—and I guess he has been the bishop a long time or else it is the continuous record of two bishops—said they have not lost a boy to inactivity in their ward for thirteen years.

In another stake I attended, I heard a bishop make a similar report, but his was for six years, and still a third bishop in another stake said, "We haven't lost a boy in our ward for five years." Then I began hoping for the day when we could say to the whole Church, "We have not lost a boy or a girl in the Church this year, or for five years, or ten years." I think we are moving forward and accomplishing things that we have never accomplished before.

I was interested in hearing a young Latter-day Saint girl speak on the topic, "When and How Does a Young Woman Make Preparation for Marriage in the Temple." As she developed her subject, she said: "I have come to one conclusion. There is a right way to get married, and there is a wrong way to get married. If some young man does not propose to me who can take me to the temple, I will convert one who can. I have a desire to be married the Lord's way, and I am going to insist that the man whom I marry is one who can take me to the House of the Lord."

I heard another little experience of a man who had recently been asked to supervise a district in ward teaching. He said, "Bishop, I will accept on one basis, that we do one-hundred percent ward teaching, and when I am unable to maintain one-hundred percent, I quit." I got a letter from his bishop the other day, who said, "For forty months, he has had one-hundred percent, and we see no reason why this will not continue indefinitely."

There come to us many experiences of devoted and dedicated ward teachers to the ever-expanding ward teaching program. I learned of a pair of ward teachers who travel 180 miles each month to visit three families, and they always get the three families visited. In another stake—I think in Florida—two ward teachers travel 160 miles each month to visit the families in their district, and they are always doing one-hundred percent teaching. If I remember right, we had a report some time ago of two teachers in one of the Canadian stakes who traveled approximately 4,000 miles a year to visit those in their district, and they faithfully visited every family each month.

I learned of a faithful ward teacher up in the Ogden area who has just completed fifty-six years as a ward teacher with a perfect record of never missing one month in the fifty-six years' time that he has been a teacher, even though for the first ten years or more he had twenty-five families in his district. He underwent a serious operation; he had some other difficult problems, but his perfect record was maintained in spite of these conditions. He is held in high esteem by the families in his district.

I learned of two high priests who impressed me very much. One of them is ninety-two years of age and served as a ward teacher for seventy years. The other at the age of ninety-four had been a ward teacher for eighty-two years, having started when he was twelve years of age. This good brother indicated that he had only missed visiting his district four or five times in this eighty-two year period. In my humble opinion, I think when men, who give this type of service to the responsibilities that come to them, report to the other side, someone is going to stand there with outstretched arms, welcoming them into the kingdom of our Heavenly Father.

The ward teaching program is one of the oldest programs in the Church, having come to the Prophet Joseph Smith by revelation sometime between the first and sixth day of April 1830, in what is known as the twentieth section of the Doctrine and Covenants. The program is designed to reach the fireside of every family in the Church with a spiritual message at least once each month and more often if necessary.

Ward teachers carry a challenging responsibility, that is, to watch over the Church. Residing within a ward teaching district may be families and individuals whose activities represent a commendable peak, while there may be some totally indifferent to things spiritual. You may be interested to know that at the present time there are in excess of 139,000 men and boys serving as ward teachers in the organized stakes of Zion. During the year 1958, 3,386,000 visits were made to the homes of these families, and this represents eighty percent of the families visited every month during the year, which is the highest record we have achieved in the Church.

Ward teachers are expected to promote the spirit of goodwill; be prepared to meet the criticism of those who find fault. They are always to defend the Church, uphold its doctrine, and support its leaders; to strengthen those who are offended or weak in the faith; to comfort those who mourn or have sorrow; to be among the first to offer assistance in cases of emergency and sickness; and to deliver a message of good cheer to the discouraged, the unfortunate, the aged, and the homebound. Their message should be gauged to meet the understanding of both the young and the old in each family.

If ward teachers faithfully perform their duties, each family—and for that matter, each member who is willing—will find themselves enfolded in the arms of the Church. In some instances, faithful ward teachers have been responsible for bringing people into the Church. A member now residing in Arizona made this report to the stake president in my presence. He said: "You do not know who I am. A few years ago, I came here from the East, having been retired because of poor health, and I was told that if I came to Arizona I may have an opportunity to prolong my life. I had a little money, and I invested in some real estate. The city grew out my way, and my property became very valuable. I sold it, bought more, and I have made a lot of money. In short, this is what has happened to me.

"I have recovered my health. I have become a member of your Church, first having been contacted by the ward teachers, who had the stake missionaries sent to me. I have made a lot of money. Now I would like to show my appreciation for the goodness of the Lord to me by having you select a number of young people who might serve as missionaries, but who haven't the finances to take care of their own expenses. You call them and send me the bill." I thought that was a nice way to express his appreciation.

I should like to close with another experience I have heard related in which ward teachers entered a family's home who were rather lukewarm, and even a little bitter, when the ward teachers came to pay a visit.

In a brusque voice, the head of the family said, "I am a very busy man. You can have fifteen minutes to get on with your message." This startled the ward teachers, and because their experience had not been too great, they paused and wondered just how to approach the subject. They learned about some of the children in the family, and discovered among them, a little girl who was going to turn eight years of age in just a few days. While they were talking to the children, the head of the family said, "Five minutes are gone; you have ten minutes left." They inquired a little further into the family, and after a few more minutes, the man reminded them again that they had five minutes left. In desperation, the ward teachers suggested that the family kneel down and have prayer with them before they left. This they did, and during the prayer, the ward teacher prayed that the Lord would protect this little girl who was about to become eight years of age, that nothing harmful would happen to her but that she might be baptized a member of the Church.

The following day, this man was mowing hay in the field behind his home. A number of children were playing in the yard, among whom was his little daughter. While making one of the rounds with his tractor, the wheel of the tractor went over a mound. As he quickly looked around, he observed that his daughter was missing. A sickening feeling overcame him. He went to the mound, pushing aside the hay, and deep below was his little daughter, who looking up said, "Daddy, don't tell them where I am. I am hiding from them." The prayer of the ward teacher had been heard. The little girl's life had been preserved, and needless to say, the family's reaction to the ward teachers was from this time forward, completely reversed.

May we all have a desire to fulfil our assignments faithfully and well, and if possible, be hundred percenters. I cannot help but be reminded of the statement that the Savior made: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matthew 5:48.) To a great degree, we can accomplish this one-hundred percent perfection.

I leave you my testimony of the divinity of this great work, and my blessing, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Carl W. Buehner has just spoken to us. Our closing speaker will be Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

From the inspiration of these two meetings today and after listening to the reports of my brethren from the four corners of the earth, along with my own deep-seated testimony as to the divinity of this great latter-day work, I should like to address my remarks to the subject of nine great latter-day prophets.

I reflect back 130 years last February when the Lord spoke to Joseph Smith saying,

"Now, behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men." (D&C 4:1.)

During this conference we have heard about the prophets in the Old and New Testaments. In the few moments which are mine I should like to speak briefly about the nine great men, modern-day prophets, who have been responsible under the inspiration of the Almighty for directing this latter-day marvelous work.

First, of course, there was Joseph

Smith, the prophet, the seer, the revelator. Yes, he was given the keys of the kingdom in this, the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times. He received a personal visit from God the Father and Jesus Christ, his Divine Son. Reflect upon his accomplishments in the thirty-nine years of his mortal life: organized the Church of Jesus Christ in correct and lawful manner; translated the Book of Mormon; received the revelations from the Lord as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants, also the book of Moses in the Pearl of Great Price; translated some writings of Abraham from one ancient record; wrote a 3200 page history of himself and the Church; and was visited and given instructions and authority by the Savior, John the Baptist, Peter, James, and John, Moses, Elias, and Elijah and then sealed his testimony to the truthfulness of all these things with his life's blood, following the pattern of the Savior himself.

Before Joseph Smith was murdered, he had told the Council of the Twelve on several occasions as reported by Brigham Young:

"I have laid the foundation and you must build thereon, for upon your shoulders the kingdom rests." (History of the Church, VII: 230, August 7, 1844.)

Upon the death of the Prophet Joseph Smith, the keys of the kingdom and mantle of authority were passed on to the second great latter-day prophet, Brigham Young, the leader of modern-day Israel. He was a great colonizer in the face of adversity, crossing the plains under most difficult conditions but with great and simple faith in God and his Son Jesus Christ. Though persecuted and reviled, he knew Joseph Smith was a true prophet.

Upon hearing of the death of Joseph Smith, he declared "The keys of the Kingdom are right here with the Church," for Brigham knew that the Prophet had conferred upon the twelve "keys of the kingdom." How often had Joseph said to the twelve, "I have laid the foundation, and you must build thereon, for upon your shoulders the kingdom rests." (Comprehensive History of the Church, vol. 2, p. 415.) Brigham Young died at the age of seventy-six having built a great empire in the desert.

He was succeeded by John Taylor, a loyal devoted servant of the Lord, who was honest and industrious; loving liberty, truth, and righteous living—sweet-spirited, kind to friend and stranger alike, tolerant, he nevertheless set his face as flint against any form of evil or wrongdoing. (The Presidents of the Church by Preston Nibley, page 87.) He received the appropriate title, "Champion of Liberty."

Upon his death, the keys were then passed to another great leader, Wilford Woodruff. Wilford, the faithful! This title was earned because of "his integrity and unbounded devotion to the worship and purposes of his God." While on a mission in the Southern States in 1834, he and his companion walked sixty miles between sunrise and 10 o'clock at night without a morsel of food to eat. At the end of this journey, he asked himself the question: "For what?" He answered his own question, "To teach the gospel of Jesus Christ!" Wilford had loved to mingle with the Prophet Joseph Smith and had this to say of him:

"There is not so great a man as Joseph standing in this generation. The gentiles look upon him, and he is like a bed of gold, concealed from human view. They know not his principles, his wisdom, his virtue, his calling. His mind is like Enoch's, expands as eternity, and God alone can comprehend his soul." (The Presidents of the Church by Preston Nibley, pp. 138-139.)

One prophet speaking of another prophet of God! Wilford Woodruff lived to be ninety-one.

Lorenzo Snow then received the mantle of authority. Though he was eighty-four when called to this responsible position, he carried on the great work. The people and the Church at the time were heavily indebted, and he promised that they would get out of debt if they would pay their tithes and offerings. That doctrine has not changed. It is just as effective today as it was in the day of President Lorenzo Snow. Tithing became a spiritual gift rather than a material duty.

Then the keys of the kingdom passed on to Joseph F. Smith. He was the first prophet, seer, and revelator with whom it was my privilege to shake hands. Since then I have personally known all the other prophets. I shall ever be grateful for the experience as a boy to feel the tenderness of the Prophet Joseph F. Smith. He was kind; he was lovingly devoted. If you desire to understand the depths of his spirituality, read his messages of inspiration contained in the volume Gospel Doctrine on such subjects as "Priesthood," "First Principles of the Gospel," "The Mission of the Church," "Prayer," "Spiritual Gifts," "Tithing," "Industry," "Many Duties of Man," "Marriage," "Home," "The Family," "Political Government," "Eternal Life and Salvation," and many others. He, like all the others, left his strong testimony to bless the generations to come.

Then the keys of the kingdom passed to President Heber J. Grant, a man who taught all a lesson in persistence, proving what could be accomplished by sheer persistence. He learned to write. He learned to sing. He learned to speak. His example reminds me of the counsel given by my mission president, Samuel O. Bennion, thirty-seven years ago, "You learn to do by doing."

First Day

In 1901 before he was President of the Church and before leaving to fill a mission to Japan, Heber J. Grant addressed a congregation of young people in which he bore this testimony:

"Young men and young ladies, I leave with you my testimony that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph Smith was and is a prophet of God, and that Lorenzo Snow, today is a prophet of God. How do I know it? I know it as well as I know that I stand before you tonight. I know heat. I know cold. I know joy and I know sorrow, and I say to you that in the hour of sorrow, in the hour of affliction, in the hour of death, God has heard and answered my prayers, and I know that He lives, and I leave my testimony with you." (Presidents of the Church, Preston Nibley, p. 298.)

Then at his death, the keys of the kingdom passed to another great leader, President George Albert Smith, an apostle of love. He had a great love in his heart for all men, not only the membership of the Church, but also all men! He desired to share with others the light of the gospel which had come into his life. I have heard him suggest many times to those not of our faith that they do not give up the truths they have, but that they accept further truths from us.

After he had received the keys and the mantle of authority and was sustained by the membership present in this marvelous building, he expressed his great love for his counselors who stood by his side on that occasion, President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., and President David O. McKay.

President Smith held positions of responsibility and was honored by such organizations as the Sons of the American Revolution, International Irrigation Congress, Boy Scouts of America, Utah Pioneer Trails and Land Marks Association. At eighty-one his mortal life came to a close. The keys of the kingdom and the mantle of authority were passed on to President David O. McKay, the missionary prophet! I believe President McKay has visited all the missions of the Church where in each one he has touched the lives of people for good. He has built them in their faith and in their courage and strengthened their testimony in the divinity of this great work.

President McKay has also dedicated four temples: one in Berne, Switzerland, in Los Angeles, California, in Auckland, New Zealand, and in London, England. Also he has dedicated many, many other Church buildings. Not only has he dedicated buildings, but his whole life has also been dedicated to the building of the kingdom of God. I am grateful for his life, for his power and strength. He and his lovely, devoted wife have set the world a high example in the concept of a good marriage—good in all its connotations! He has said so much about the importance of a clean life, of honoring womanhood, of understanding the gospel and of serving the Master. He will leave so many truths for coming generations. I give you one admonition from President McKay which is so timely and most important for all of us, young and old, (I have heard him say this on numerous occasions) "We are here to develop the power of self-mastery." Analyze this statement. Live by it and see what it will do for you!

Truly, as his predecessors passed on the keys of the kingdom, the mantle of authority is now held by our Prophet David O. McKay. Because of this authority, we have been given the right to legitimately administer in the name of our Heavenly Father, the Father of our spirits, and in the name of his Son, Jesus Christ.

And so upon the shoulders of nine great men in our day has fallen the mantle of priesthood leadership. The chain is unbroken. God the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, bestowed upon Joseph Smith the authority to act in their names. There have been nine prophets who have held the keys of the kingdom—nine Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in this generation. None other on the earth has this authority. Each prophet has left behind a monument for good that time cannot efface or obliterate. No individual has ever gone astray by following the counsel of these prophets, but many have experienced tragedy and sorrow by going counter to their counsel.

I should like to suggest to young people as they study their history lessons that they reserve enough time to study the history of the lives of these nine great men and seek a witness of their divine authority.

May we realize the power of these great men. I bear witness that they were and are prophets of God; that David O. McKay is the mouthpiece of our Heavenly Father in the earth today who does hold the keys of the kingdom, and the mantle of authority, and this testimony I bear in humility and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us. The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses will now favor us with, "The Spirit of God," conducted by Professor Ralph Woodward. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Axel J. Andresen, formerly president of the Norwegian Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until 7 o'clock this evening when the general meeting of the Priesthood of the Church will be held in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. Only those holding the Priesthood are invited to be present.

In addition to overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall the proceedings of this Priesthood Meeting will be relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood assembled in 167 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada.

The general sessions tomorrow will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the west. The Tabernacle Choir broadcast will be from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Those desiring to attend this broadcast should be in their seats at 9:15 a.m.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses have furnished the music this day. We thank you in behalf of the vast audience here in the Tabernacle and other buildings. I include all who have listened to your voices over the radio. I am sure you can feel their expression of appreciation of your kindness. God bless you with a safe journey home, and may your future be filled with sweet service such as you have given to us.

We shall now hear the Choir sing, "The Spirit of God," and Elder Axel J. Andresen will offer the benediction, and we shall be adjourned until this evening at 7 o'clock.

The Brigham Young University Combined Choruses sang the hymn, "The Spirit Of God Like A Fire Is Burning."

Elder Axel J. Andresen, formerly President of the Norwegian Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 7 o'clock p.m.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church was held in the Tabernacle at 7:00 p.m., Saturday, April 4.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie as Director, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ, furnished the music for this meeting.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the exercises of this great meeting of the Priesthood. The President made the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

This is the Third Session of the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church. You will be interested to know that these services are being relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and in 167 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada. It would take a long while to read all of them, but I am sure you will be interested in the summary: California, 27; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 7; Pennsylvania, 3; South Carolina, 2; Utah, 34; Idaho, 14; Illinois, 1; Indiana, 1; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 2; Montana, 6; Nevada, 3; Texas, 3; Virginia, 5; Washington, 8; Wisconsin, 1; New Mexico, 2; New York, 3; North Carolina, 1; Ohio, 4; Arizona, 11; Canada, 7; Colorado, 6; Florida, 4; Georgia, 1; Louisiana, 1; Massachusetts, 1; Michigan, 1; Wyoming, 4; Maryland, 1; Connecticut, 1; Total, 167 in 31 states of the Union and in Canada.

Truly, Zion is growing, and what a consciousness we should have just to think that we are sitting here, with groups all over the United States, and with a means of communicating even by voice as well as in the brotherhood of Christ.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder Richard P. Condie as director, and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin these services by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir singing, "O My Father." After the singing Elder Ariel S. Ballif, until recently president of the New Zealand Mission, will offer the opening prayer.

The Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus sang the hymn, "O My Father."

Elder Ariel S. Ballif, formerly president of the New Zealand Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Ariel S. Ballif, formerly president of the New Zealand Mission, has just offered the invocation. The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Seek Thy God," directed by Elder Richard P. Condie.

Selection by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, "Seek Thy God."

President David O. McKay:

We shall now hear from Elder Benjamin L. Bowring, president of the Los Angeles Temple. He will speak on the subject, "Family Responsibility in Genealogy."

PRESIDENT BENJAMIN L. BOWRING

Of the Los Angeles Temple

My beloved brethren, it is with the deepest of humility that I stand before you. I recognize the power in this great body of the Priesthood, and humbly ask an interest in your faith and prayers as I fulfill this assignment. Last Monday, the Los Angeles Temple being closed, my son and I drove to town to do some business, and after we returned we called at the Bureau of Information to pick up the mail and to see if there might be anything of importance to take care of. My son picked up the mail, and as he came out to the car he said, "Dad, there is a telegram here." I said, "Son, read it." And as he finished reading it he said, "Dad, you'd better move over and let me drive. You won't have the strength when you read this."

After reading the telegram from President McKay giving me this assignment, I could think of a hundred excuses. Unfortunately, we had just been discussing the importance of accepting responsibilities given us by the Brethren.

The topic assigned to me, my brethren, is of vital importance, and I sincerely pray that I may be able to express the feelings of my heart in relation to this most important assignment given us of our Heavenly Father. Moroni, in reiterating the prophecy of Malachi as recorded in Section 2 of the Doctrine and Covenants, has said this:

"Behold, I will reveal unto you the Priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

"And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers.

"If it were not so, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming." (D. & C. 2:1-3.)

The Prophet Joseph was so impressed by this that he made the following statement: "The greatest responsibility in this world that God has laid upon us is to seek after our dead. Those Saints who neglect it in behalf of their deceased relatives do it at the peril of their own salvation."

President Joseph Fielding Smith read to us today the statements of the succeeding prophets of our day, impressing upon us, each of them, the importance of this great responsibility given us of the Lord. The responsibility rests upon the Church, upon the family, upon the individual members of the Church. As far as I have been able to determine, the only members of the Church who may be absolved from responsibility in this great work of the Lord are those who do not have any ancestors. Sometimes we brethren of the Priesthood attempt to excuse ourselves because of the responsibilities that we have as bishops, stake presidents, and the many other responsibilities that come with the Priesthood.

May I read these words of President Joseph Fielding Smith: "It matters not what else we have been called to do or what positions we may occupy, or how faithfully in other ways we have labored in the Church. None are exempt from this obligation. It is required of the Apostle as well as the humblest elder. Place or distinction or long service in the Church, in the mission field, the stakes of Zion, or where or how else it may have been, will not entitle one to disregard the salvation of one's dead. Some may feel that if they pay their tithing, attend their regular meetings or other duties, give of their substance to the poor, perchance spend one or two or more years preaching in the world, that they are absolved from further duty. But the greatest and grandest duty of all is to labor for the dead. We may and should do all these other things for which reward will be given, but if we neglect the weightier privilege and commandment, notwithstanding all other good works, we shall find ourselves under severe condemnation."

Now that is pretty strong, isn't it brethren? That is the responsibility with which we are faced. Now what is involved in this responsibility? First, that we obtain and compile an acceptable family record. Second, that we provide all necessary ordinances for the exaltation—truly a big assignment. But the promise given Nephi will apply to us if we approach this responsibility with the faith that Nephi had, wherein he said: "I will go and do the things which the Lord hath commanded, for I know that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which he commandeth them." (1 Nephi 3:7.)

And so the Lord has provided the way for us to fulfill this great responsibility. Just this morning we were told in a meeting at the Genealogical Society that last year in one private collection alone the Genealogical Society procured a German collection of records containing over seven million names, and during the past year there has been the equivalent of 140,000 volumes microfilmed and placed at our disposal in the Genealogical Society.

Non members of the Church have compiled voluminous records available to us that we might do the research required. The nations of the earth have been moved upon to keep vital statistics and records that we might use these vital records. The Brethren have expended millions of dollars that the records from the various countries of the world might be brought here, and we have here in the Genealogical Society of the Church the greatest library on earth. The Lord is providing the way and means for us to fulfill the responsibility that he has given to us.

Now, while the Lord may provide the tools he expects us to use them. I believe I can best illustrate what I am talking about by the experience of our own family. My grandfather was Henry Ebenezer Bowring. He was born in Stratton-Dorsett, England, converted to the Church in 1849. His father, Joseph Bowring, had established a fine business—carriage building and harness making—and Bowring Brothers was a prosperous business. When my grandfather joined the Church in 1849, he was denounced by his family. All he received from his share of a flourishing business was less than five pounds.

He went to London to work, and from there to Ireland, where he worked for six years to accumulate sufficient funds to come to America. Just before coming to America he buried his wife and one child, but he, with the other two came to this land, landing in Boston, according to Tullidge's history, with one cent in his pocket. He worked his way to Iowa, there was outfitted with a handcart, pulled the handcart 1300 miles to Salt Lake Valley. He was so completely disowned by his people that though he tried to correspond with them, they would have nothing to do with him.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

Finally, in his old age, he went to the Logan Temple and there did the work for his father Joseph Bowring, and his grandfather, Thomas Bowring, with approximated dates and places because he did not have definite information. He had worked all his life to try to obtain such information.

Then came my father, who was an ardent temple worker, and who was charged with the responsibility to seek his ancestors, and he had worked many years but to no avail. Then the charge was given to me. In 1943 there appeared in a newspaper in Ripley's column, "Believe It Or Not," a picture with this caption. "Sir John Bowring, linguist, writer, and traveller, knew 200 languages. He spoke and wrote correctly French, Spanish, Italian, German, Russian, Swedish, Danish, Dutch, Greek, Chinese, Siamese, Sanscript, Hawaiian, Singalese, Arabic, Turkish, Finnish, Icelandic, Bohemian, and 80 others, and knew 100 more."

Well, with such an illustrious ancestor you would naturally gain interest, and as this appeared in an eastern newspaper, my cousin whose mother was a Bowring, after seeing this happened to go through a trade magazine where he saw an article which indicated that a Bowring Steamship Company had opened offices in New York City. And so out of curiosity he wrote to Warren Bowring, and when he received a reply to his letter, knowing of my interest in genealogical work, he sent the letter to me, and Mr. Bowring said that he was very much surprised to learn that there were any Bowrings in America; that the family was a prolific one in England. He said: "As a matter of fact we have published a book entitled, 'Benjamin Bowring and His Descendants.'" He enclosed a pedigree chart carrying the Bowring pedigree back to 1303.

On the pedigree we found a Thomas Bowring, whom we hoped would be my second great grandfather. From that day to this, though this printed record made available to us some 3000 names for temple work, we had to prove this connection, and so we have been corresponding with a researcher in England.

Last April Conference, in going to the Society and talking to our researcher he said, "Now, Brother Bowring, if you will raise $500 by July I think we can send a man right into the territory and we can really accomplish something." I said, "We will have the $500." I did not know how we were going to raise it, but then I called upon my family, told them what was required of us, but even then it was rather an uphill job to raise $500 in that much time.

About two weeks before the $500 was due there came into my office a fine Latter-day Saint man, and he said, "Brother Bowring, I have been concerned about your research. You know, the Lord blessed me with more than enough to do what I have to do in research. I have just found that your wife is my wife's cousin, so that makes me a part of your family, and I have a responsibility in this thing. Here is a check for $500 to help you with research work." The money was provided, and so the order was sent to England to establish the necessary connections. Due to so much work being over there, it has taken up until just last month to get the work in the hands of a researcher, and in the meantime this cousin of mine who was in Wichita, Kansas, now presides over the British Mission.

On the 20th of March of this year he wrote: "It is a strange coincidence that I have just met Mr. Colliard to whom the Bowring research has been assigned. He has just completed reading the Book of Mormon. He has a sincere interest in the Church. The missionaries are teaching him the gospel."

In the same mail that contained the telegram giving me this assignment I received another letter from my cousin who said, "I have just talked to our genealogist, Mr. Colliard. In his preliminary search he has found exciting information. He has established a key through Joseph and Thomas Bowring that will likely open an entire field to us. He was so excited he had to come all the way to London to tell me about it, and is confident that he will find many, many of our ancestors through these connections."

My how good the Lord is to us if we will just avail ourselves of the opportunities that he gives us. And so, my brethren, it is of vital importance that we do band together as families, in pooling our knowledge and our resources in gaining these important vital records. What a wonderful thing it would be in our homes if we would undertake as family projects first of all the building of an individual Book of Remembrance, and then as a family working together to seek out our ancestors.

Now in connection with the responsibility that we have to provide the necessary ordinances. In speaking of a fulness of the Priesthood, the Prophet Joseph Smith said this: "There is no exaltation in the Kingdom of God without the fulness of the Priesthood. If a man gets a fulness of the Priesthood of God he has to get it by keeping all the commandments, and obeying all the ordinances of the House of the Lord. The Lord has made it possible for every man in this Church, through his obedience, to receive the fulness of the Priesthood through the ordinances of the temple of the Lord. This cannot be received anywhere else."

Now again, the Lord has provided for this situation. What a thrilling thing it is to know there are temples now not only in this glorious land, but in foreign lands, where members of the Church will have easy access to the House of the Lord, that they might go there, receive their blessings, and fulfill their responsibilities.

One of our leaders has said, "Sacrifice not only develops love, but it is the only real proof of love." I cannot think of any greater sacrifice than made by our folks who give of their time and means to come to the House of the Lord to provide these sacred ordinances for their deceased people. I think of a grand group of folks, 150 in number, who recently came to the Los Angeles Temple, travelling 800 miles each way, spending two or three days coming in buses, and on the train, and before doing so, they had had suppers and had cooked baked goods, to provide the means to come. They came there with such a glorious sweet spirit, quietly, reverently working as families, because their children were brought with them to take care of baptismal ordinances while the parents were doing the endowment and sealing work necessary.

After their return the stake president said, "I am sure the spirit received in the temple will remain with us and improves the quality of our work as we serve the Lord in our individual capacities." And truly it will do that.

Recently we have had an extremity in the Los Angeles Temple, as is true in the other temples. Under the inspiration of the Lord the Brethren have given to us in the Los Angeles Temple an Advisory Committee. As a temple presidency we have no right nor authority to assign quotas or tell the stake presidents what they should do. We found early in our experience in California, however, that all you have to do is suggest to the folks what you want and they go ahead and do it. So we made suggestions to our Advisory Committee, and they in turn carried the suggestions to the stake president, indicating our need for bringing into balance the endowment work as far as the Priesthood was concerned. It was the decision of the stake presidents that we should devote certain Saturdays to Priesthood Sessions.

Well, we started the Priesthood Sessions at 6 o'clock in the morning and went through until 6 o'clock in the evening, a session every hour on the hour. At a quarter after four in the morning when Sister Bowring and I walked over to the temple there were two or three buses from San Francisco there, with a number of cars, already waiting to get into the temple. Before 9 o'clock there were over 1500 brethren in the Los Angeles Temple, and during a single day these fine men did a total of 2946 male names in the Los Angeles Temple. I'll tell you we went home tired, but it was a mighty good tired. Those brethren, busloads of them from the Bay Area, from San Diego, from all over the temple district, among them two busloads of Servicemen from Fort Ord, and what a thrill it was to see those fine young men come to the House of the Lord to provide these sacred ordinances.

It has been a great privilege of mine to work under the direction of President McKay and others in providing situations in the Los Angeles Temple for the blessing and good of our people. With all the responsibility of President McKay I marvel at his knowledge of the detail of temple work. Surely he of all men has made an extensive study, and has great interest in this work and the importance of presenting this important vital message to our people in a way that it can be understood. I am grateful that I belong to a Church that believes in continued revelation, that under the power of God we may, through his servants, be able to utilize modern facilities for the blessing and good of our people. I am grateful for the privilege that is mine to work in the House of the Lord where these sacred ordinances are performed.

The Lord has said, "This is life eternal: to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." In the House of the Lord as individuals, as families, we can receive for ourselves the vital ordinances that will qualify us for exaltation in the celestial kingdom, and provide for our ancestors these like ordinances.

The Prophet Joseph Smith said: "One glimpse into the eternities is worth a life of experience." In the House of the Lord we may gain a glimpse into the eternities. May the Lord help us, my brethren, to appreciate, to realize and accept our family responsibility and individual responsibility in this great work, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Edward L. Clissold, president of the Oahu Stake, will now speak to us. His subject is "The Church and Temple Work."

PRESIDENT EDWARD L. CLISSOLD

Of the Oahu Stake

My dear brethren, you can help me if you are disposed to do so by giving me the traditional greeting which we have in Hawaii. I am going to say "Aloha" and I want you all to say "Aloha" back to me if you will.

"Aloha!" (The Brethren assembled responded with "Aloha!")

Now I feel at home. Thank you very much. Now if you will pray for me that the Lord will bless me that I may give expression to my thoughts pertaining to this most important subject, the Church and temple work.

Some time ago there was a statement had among us to the effect that the German Army and the Mormon Church were the two most perfect organizations in the world. Every successful organization has at least three important elements: a plan, a mission or an objective, and the administration or the execution. The German Army failed. It is quite possible that the plan was good. The relationship of officers to men and strategy to logistics may have been good but the mission was not good. The mission was to subjugate the world. The administration was not good. The men who enforced the rules of the German Army were drunk with power. They exercised unrighteous dominion and because of this the German Army failed.

That leaves the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as the most perfect organization in the world—and it is because it is divine. It was organized by Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world. The mission is also divine. The objective of the Church is the Lord's work, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. The administration of the Church, as someone has said, is human. We are striving for perfection. When we as the servants of God attain perfection in our characters and deeds, in our service to men and to God, then will the Church be perfect in all of its elements.

For the purpose of administration the Church is divided into several organizations. We have just completed the wonderful conference of the Primary organization. Its objective is the teaching of the children of the Church. We have the MIA. Its mission is to teach and train the young people of the Church, to instill in them a testimony of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We have the Relief Society whose duty it is to train the women and supervise their services in the Church. We have the Welfare organization, which has to do with the unfortunate in the Church, and to provide work for those who are unemployed.

Amongst all the organizations there is one that stands out preeminently. We hesitate to use the words best, most or greatest, with regard to any of the organizations in the Church, but if we accept the scripture of the Lord then this work about which Brother Bowring has been talking, and to which I have been assigned to speak, is the greatest and the most important in the Church. When we say temple work we mean genealogical research. We mean the family records. We mean presenting an acceptable record in the House of the Lord. We mean baptism for the dead, endowments for the dead, and endowments for the living.

As we contemplate this work, my brethren, we can begin to understand why it is the greatest work. When we think of the mission of the Savior—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man—we can understand why Joseph Smith said that this is the greatest responsibility that God has laid upon us in the world; that we neglect this temple work at the peril of losing our own salvation; that our dead cannot be made perfect without us, nor we without them. Temple work transcends more space, more time and more people than any other work in the Church. The other organizations—particularly the auxiliaries—have to do with here and now. Temple work has to do with eternity. Through genealogical research we reach back into the dark ages of the past to get our records. Through temple work we enjoy the endowments today for ourselves and for our families. Through temple work we project our hopes and our dreams into the future. We have sealed upon ourselves the promise that we will enjoy glory, immortality, and eternal life. And since the Savior's work is to save all mankind—not only those who live now but all who have lived and will live—surely he needs the help that we can give. He needs our aid and our support in this great and important mission.

New stress is being laid upon genealogical work. I am grateful to know that recently the Genealogical Society has instituted a plan to carry the genealogical program into the Melchizedek Priesthood quorums. Certainly we have that responsibility, and we also have the responsibility of temple work itself, preparing the records, going to the temple to perform the ordinances, and this responsibility rests upon every member at baptism. I think sometimes we believe that we can make it a matter of election, that we can elect to do it or not as we wish as the time presents itself or is available. I believe faithful members of the Church can no more leave to election the work for the dead—temple work and genealogical work—than they can leave to election the keeping of the Word of Wisdom, the payment of tithes and the keeping of the Sabbath Day.

It is not a matter of election. It is our duty and our responsibility, and we must discharge it else we stand in danger of losing our own salvation. There is not a member of the Church who cannot carry on some genealogical research, and that has been true since the very beginning. Unfortunately that has not been true of temple work. Some of the members have lived in areas where they were unable to attend the temple. So we have always been a temple building people as the Lord has commanded, and always shall be, and every President of this Church has either dedicated a temple or built a temple or dedicated the land upon which a temple should be built, and I think we should all be so grateful that the spirit of this great work has rested in such power upon President David O. McKay.

A passage in Proverbs says that the spirit in men is the candle of the Lord. I have thought in that same vein that the temples are the lamps of the Lord, and particularly since they have been lighted, how they glow like lamps in the darkness. I have pictured our great President as a lamplighter, if he will permit the title, striding through the earth lighting the lamps of the Lord—a dedication in Los Angeles, and away off to Switzerland, then to New Zealand, and then way back to England, more than halfway around the world.

They are like cities upon a hill that cannot be hid. They not only remind us of our responsibilities, they become landmarks and symbols to the people outside of the Church. Brother Christensen told us this morning of the response in England and in Europe to the temples built there. We have had similar response in the Pacific to the building of the New Zealand Temple, and it has been a joy to see our people go and come back with a quiet sureness to their faith, with a deeper modesty and a more sober aspect.

When we were on a ship recently traveling through the Coral Islands, I learned that there was a group of Tongan Saints on the ship coming from the temple. After we got underway in a few hours, I heard voices, and following the sounds found people dancing and singing in a boisterous manner. I thought this cannot be our Saints who have been to the temple. I went on and under a canopy at the end of the deck I found a quiet group in sober conversation. These were our Saints.

I asked the mission president, "Have you noticed any difference in our people since going to the temple?" And he said, "Most assuredly. They come back with greater devotion, more peace in their hearts, firmer faith, and an increased desire to serve."

Those of you who know anything about Samoa know that the Matai system rests upon the social and economic life of these Islands like an octopus, and some of our people are caught in the tentacles. One man in particular who is of chief's rank had been debating for some time whether or not he should become a Matai and exercise this authority over his own family and the group who would come under his sway. He was undecided, although he was tempted by the power that is wielded by a Matai. He went to the temple, and when he came back he said, "I learned there that the gospel of Jesus Christ supercedes all customs and all traditions, no matter how ancient and revered, and I learned that the power of the priesthood is greater and more to be desired than the power of men." He made his decision that he would not be a Matai. He told us that many believe the Matai system could only be overcome by revolution, but he thought it would be destroyed by the power of the priesthood. He said: "When the men of our Church rise up in the magnitude of their ordination and exercise their priesthood for the benefit and blessing of the people the Matai system and its power will cease."

Brethren, the lamps are burning. As you leave this hall this night you will see one burning outside these doors. Those lamps remind us of the glorious opportunity and privilege which is ours to share with the Lord salvation of all of his children. They also remind us of our responsibility, and as President Clark said this morning, he likes to dwell upon his responsibility, even though his privileges and blessings are great.

This is a meeting of the priesthood—mostly Melchizedek Priesthood. We know our duty, brethren. Perhaps the inclination or the will to do is the need. In that connection I think of a poem by John Drinkwater called "A Prayer." With a verse or two from the poem I should like to close.

"We know the paths wherein our feet should press

Across our hearts are written thy decrees
But now, O Lord, be merciful and bless
With more than these.

Give us the faith to fashion as we feel
Give us the strength to labor as we know

Give us the courage ribbed and edged with steel

To strike the blow.

Knowledge we ask not—knowledge thou hast lent

But Lord, the will,—

There lies our greatest need Help us to build above the deep intent

The deed, the deed."

May God inspire us to labor diligently for the benefit and blessing of those who have gone beyond, that we may truly be partners with the Savior in his great work, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren: I do not wish to bring a light thought to this very solemn and wonderful occasion, so rich in its spirituality, but I cannot but remember a short story I read recently, where a man got up without any presumed preparation—that is not quite what my position should have been—but as he got up, he said, "I guess you gentlemen are wondering what I am going to say. So am I."

We have pictured in strong language, painted with vivid colors, our duty toward our dead. President Joseph Fielding led off and Brother Bowring and Brother Clissold have supported in a very wonderful way. I think that none of us—perhaps that is not quite the way to say it—but I think that many of us, including myself, have had presented to us this matter not altogether in a new way, but in a way that has brought home a little more clearly than perhaps we have heretofore enjoyed, our duty and responsibility with reference to the caring for our dead.

I should like to say this much in justification for myself. I think I have never, while I have been in the First Presidency, raised any objection to the gathering of the materials necessary to be gathered in order that we might do the work for our deceased ancestors. I have always regarded it as money properly spent, perhaps not always has it been spent in the most wise way—I have no criticism to offer, for I know nothing about it—but I do know this, that in the carrying on of human undertakings, wherever you begin to make great expenditures of money, there is always some lack of wisdom, sometimes lack of foresight, occasionally, oh so occasionally in this Church, a lack of integrity.

Just branching off for a moment—the amount of money that is collected by

Choir, and the congregation, joined in singing the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. will now address us.

you bishops and sent in to the treasury of the Church is enormous. And the percentage of malfeasance in the collection of that money is simply microscopic. This is a great Church in its integrity in the handling of Church funds.

Now, as I sat and listened here, one or two thoughts came into my mind. I do not wish to speak long because I know that you want to hear from President McKay and I am sure he will have a great message for you. But I do want to say this: if we are to go forward in the manner suggested by the two brethren who have spoken to us, we must have a supporting force. It cannot be done merely by words. We, the Priesthood, the Melchizedek Priesthood, must support it, work for it, make it our job. And in making it our job, there is something more than words, more than pretence. There must be living. We must live as we know we should live.

We are endowed with some portion—and pardon my repetition of what I have already said—endowed with some portion of the authority of God himself. He does not live in unclean temples. We must be clean. We must keep his commandments, for if and when he leaves us, as he will if we do not live as we should, we shall for the time being lose our power, lose our usefulness, lose our enthusiasm, lose all that we ought to have in order to go forward, and it will take some time after we have found out our mistakes and our errors to get back into the work.

Repentance is not easy. Repentance, as the Lord has said, is marked by two elements—a confession in the proper way to the proper person, and a forsaking of the sin.

I repeat, if you will pardon, that the authority which you brethren and all of us have who have the Melchizedek Priesthood, is a type of authority that carries with it the greatest power that has ever been revealed to humankind. The mighty forces of which we now talk so glibly, and ignorantly, are subject to the powers which you have, and they are powers which can rest effectively and fully in the humblest, the very humblest. It takes no elaborate equipment, no great funds of wealth, no tremendous political power, in order for the humblest of us to have in us the power which o'ertops everything else of which we know.

Saturday, April 4

First Day

It requires no elaborate equipment, no great institutions, no scholars of years and years and years to direct us. One of the ancient prophets declared, regarding the way of blessings, "the way of holiness," that it is so plain that "the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." (Isaiah 35:8.)

We do not need any expensive equipment in order to live righteously, in order to have within our reach under the inspiration and power of the Lord the greatest force, the greatest authority of which God has ever made us aware.

And so while we must do this missionary work which is so important, we must remember to keep the supporting army, the whole Church, in proper shape, with proper equipment, with righteous living, with a determination to do the right, to the last extremity if necessary.

I do not wish to speak longer. I only ask you, do not forfeit the power and the authority which you have; paraphrasing, do not sell your great spiritual birthright for a mess of pottage of some slight worldly value.

May God bless all of us, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency will now speak to us, and "you must not cut it short." (Laughter.)

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L. RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren, I rejoice with you in this semi-annual reunion of the Priesthood. It is a marvelous reunion, made possible by miracles of the modern day, for it comprehends not only those filling the Tabernacle and the areas round about, but all of the men and boys assembled across the nation. I believe that, while we are not in each other's presence, our hearts are unified, that we share the same sentiments, and that the same resolutions for the advancement of our Father's Kingdom come to all of us.

I like to see the reunion of these great powers—these powers of the Priesthood. I like to see unity in quorums. I believe the Lord expected, when quorums were instituted, that they should provide a unified strength necessary to meet the problems of this great latter-day work.

In the earlier days of the Church there were serious physical problems to meet. Sometimes our Priesthood was required to defend, other times to build, in unison, by cooperative effort. They had to stand together. I remember not long ago when an application came to the Presidency of the Church through a family for the restoration of the father's blessings. We learned that he had been excommunicated from the Church. As I remember he lived in upper Cache Valley. And when we investigated we discovered the cause of his excommunication—trading at the store of a Gentile. Now that would seem trivial and most unjustifiable in this day. Perhaps in that day it meant much to a community of Latter-day Saints engaged in a common enterprise, seeking to establish the necessary industry for that community, and for one of the Priesthood to forsake his brethren, in the eyes of the men was regarded as a serious offense.

We do not have conditions like that today, but we do have tremendous problems to meet in the incursion of the sins of the world in our midst. In our subjection to adverse conditions morally we have to stand together to protect ourselves, and there is great strength in standing together. The fortification that comes to an individual when he knows that his quorum members have a real and abiding interest in him, when he knows that they are watching him, has a salutary effect and it helps him, and is oftentimes a great need.

So I think that we have a necessity confronting us in all parts of the land where the Church is organized to unite our forces, our spiritual forces and strength, to resist everything that tends to prevent men from achieving their highest station in this great work of the Lord.

Now I would not take your minds far away from the temple work which has been spoken of tonight, but it occurs to me that in addition to the great necessity of compiling our genealogy and doing the work for our kindred dead, there are those living whom we should carefully keep in mind. I think of two classes tonight: first, those men among us bearing the Priesthood who have not taken their wives to the temple. I do not know how many may be represented of that class in these great meetings held throughout the land, but I venture that there are some. I ask them to pause and consider what they are depriving their wives and their families of. I know that many a good woman is hoping and praying that her husband will prepare himself to go to the temple, to have her and her children sealed to him and prepare themselves for the exalted blessings which await them through the ordinances of the House of our Lord. Brethren, you love your wives. They love you. You can do nothing more important for them than to prepare yourselves to take them to the House of the Lord.

There is another class, and they are young men, and I imagine there are literally thousands of them scattered throughout our audiences tonight, who are looking forward to life, looking forward to marriage, looking forward to careers, and with life's ambitions looking forward with great hope. I would like to say to these young men, from the very beginning you can do nothing more profitable, more contributive to your happiness, than prepare yourselves for marriage in the temple. I know of nothing that will more strengthen family life, contribute more to its happiness than will this sacred and beautiful ceremony which is provided for us in the House of the Lord.

And how do you prepare yourselves for this beautiful and rewarding experience? Just by good living, keeping all the commandments, doing your duty within the Church, and securing a testimony of the truth which will give to you the power of the Holy Ghost. Remember, it will never profit you anything by deception to win your way into the temple. It is true that we may deceive our bishops, our presidents of stakes. Some may get recommends without revealing what they ought to reveal. It is useless. All the blessings of the temples are predicated upon faithfulness, upon obedience to the commandments. No blessing is effective unless it is based upon the good life of him who receives it. It is a mistake for anyone to think that by concealing or suppressing something that ought to be known he can secure a recommend to go to the temple. That is futile, and even worse than futile, because the suppressing of the fact is itself an additional offense.

I hope all of my young brethren and sisters, young brethren particularly since we speak to them tonight, will prepare themselves to be worthy first of the companionship of a good girl, and then to take her where she would like to go—to the temple of our Lord. Our sisters, even young ones, look forward to that great experience, and if we do not take them where they wish to go we disappoint them.

I pray that our Father will bless our young folk, our young men, that they may prepare themselves for this great and beautiful experience—the most beautiful experience that comes into our lives, the very basis of our hopes for eternal life and happiness—for after all, a home sanctified by the holy sealing in the temple forms the foundation of our eternal happiness in the life to come. And as I have often said, our exaltation is little more than the projection of our home into eternity.

The Lord bless you, brethren. May you not only live such lives yourselves as to be worthy of these transcendent blessings, but may you teach others so to do and help them to understand the great and beautiful blessings that the gospel of our Lord holds out. You remember that wonderful statement of the Savior's: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." (John 14:2.)

I do not claim to have read theological commentaries to any great extent, but I have never heard an explanation of that wonderful statement by any theologian in this world, because I think no one has an explanation except that which has come with the restored gospel, defining the way in which men and women may prepare themselves for that high station in the mansions of our Father. May we reach that station—all of us—I humbly pray in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Associated with the temple work, dwelt upon tonight by the two brethren appointed, and corroborated by the two counselors in the First Presidency, is the little simple ordinance of baptism. Many Christians do not believe that it is essential to salvation. I was but a boy when a minister visiting Huntsville shocked me by saying it was not essential, and especially by immersion. I knew of no other way but by immersion. Baptism is essential to salvation, and Christ gave the first real view of it to a member of the Sanhedrin when Nicodemus called upon him by night. I think that he was not ashamed of calling upon Jesus by day, but he was a busy man. I like to interpret that phrase, "by night," because, Nicodemus, with his work in the Sanhedrin and other ways, could better spend an hour or two with the Savior at night.

A great conversation took place, and they dwelt upon salvation, and Christ's first statement was, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." That is a sentence well worthy of consideration and contemplation. It is easier to see the temporal things, it is easier to see the lascivious things, it is easier to indulge in anything physical and animal-like. It is the animal world. But to be born out of that world into a spiritual world is advancement that the Lord requires of us, and the example that Jesus set for us. Except a man be born again, out of that world, he cannot see that spiritual light where love, kindness, self-denial, self-mastery, self-control—all of the spiritual virtues—contribute to the development of the real man. Nicodemus could not understand that, and he spoke literally.

"How can a man enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born again?" See the physical interpretation? Then the Savior was more explicit. He said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (John 3:5.) There is the essentiality of baptism, whether the world thinks it merely a form or not. In those two sentences we have the purpose of life—the overcoming of the physical, the animal life, the striving and the living in the spiritual realm. There you have the three-fold purpose of baptism.

First, it is an entrance into the kingdom of God. It is the doorway, and it is significant that that doorway is by immersion. Sprinkling will not give it. It spoils the symbol. Pouring will not give it. Only by immersion can that birth mentioned by Jesus be properly carried out. There are three elements in which we are buried—the air, which is our natural element; the earth, in which we can be buried, which takes the physical, and ends it; we can be buried in water and come out, and the typical comparison of birth is complete because it means when you get a glimpse of the spiritual you want to leave off the animal life, with its appetites, indulgences, and to develop the spiritual instead of the physical side of your nature.

So we are buried in that element, burying the old man with his appetites, passions, enticements, and coming forth anew. We are born again, buried with Christ in baptism, said the Apostle, for like as Christ was buried, and came forth in a newness of life, so we also shall come forth in a newness of life with all our bad habits, our enmities, our hatreds, buried in the water.

Christ thought it was so essential that he came to John the Baptist. John protested, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?"

"Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness," said the Savior. And then we are told that John suffered him. Fulfilling all righteousness is a command of God, so there you have the entrance into his kingdom. You have obedience to a command of God, and you have the beautiful, the most applicable figure that can possibly be given in fulfilling all righteousness. You bury yourself, you bury your bad habits, you bury your sins, and you come forth in newness of life, just as Christ came forth in the resurrection.

It is a good thing, bishops, to tell this simply to the little boys who are going to be baptized. They can remember it. You remember when you were eight years of age when you were baptized. If your father did not talk to you properly, or your bishop, they failed in their duty. Of course the sins of an eight-year-old boy will be telling "fibs," probably, or taking what does not belong to him, a lot of little things, but they are important, and the boy or girl can understand that those things now are buried beneath the water, and they are going to start to be a better brother or better sister, etc. That can be explained.

My point tonight is that there is no salvation without that baptism. "Suffer it to be so now to fulfill all righteousness." What about the hundreds of thousands of people who have not had an opportunity for it? And that baptism, that burial and that birth must be done by proper authority. You cannot become a citizen of the United States without complying with certain laws, certain requirements. Christian divines will tell you it does not matter what road you take. They will all lead to Rome just the same. They will lead to the United States, too, so you may enter the country; but if you want to become a citizen of the United States you have to obey certain laws, and so you do in the Church of Christ, and baptism is the one door.

Now, what about those who have never heard of the Gospel—choice people? You travel anywhere in the world and you meet true gentlemen, lovely people everywhere, many honest people. It is surprising how many honest upright people are living in the world. I will illustrate it with an instance that I have quoted before.

A Chinese student was on a ship going from the United States back home, a graduate of one of our universities. On the vessel was a minister who was advancing Christianity. Well, the young student knew a good deal about it. He knew also about the high ideals of the Chinese. During the conversation the necessity of believing in Jesus Christ was emphasized. The Chinese student said, "Well, what about my ancestors who never heard of Jesus?"

The answer was rather flippant, but it is in keeping with the false ideas of Christianity generally. "Oh, they are lost."

Rightly that young student said, "I will have nothing to do with a religion so unjust." If you had been there you would have given them the ideals of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the revealed word, the true Christianity, that the work will be done for them, but they will have to accept baptism, just as Jesus and all others must accept it. They must be born again before they will glimpse even the high spirituality required of a true Christian. They have to be born of the water and of the spirit before they can enter into the kingdom of God.

Brethren, God bless you, you messengers of the gospel, you authorized servants of the Almighty, you true representatives of the Son, the Savior of men! God give you power to live in the spirit, walk in the spirit. How frequently we hear those phrases from the scriptures.

That means that those who make covenants for their loved ones and participate in the highest ideal of marriage ever given to man will walk in the spirit and not indulge in the flesh. You will be true to the covenants you make in the House of God. So will your wives walk in the spirit, resisting temptation, keeping conscience clear, and feeling by so doing that you can go to the Lord in prayer and ask him for strength and guidance just as Jesus did when he was in the flesh. He knew his Father. He could go to him.

Saturday, April 4

He went to him just before he performed the great miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead. He said, "I know that in the past thou hast heard me, and he exercised the power of his Father, the power of his God—creative power. He was always with his Father. He was God himself, and he said to one of the disciples when they said to show them the Father, 'Have I been with you so long and ye ask Show us the Father? If ye have seen me ye have seen the Father.'" Spirituality at its highest.

I was thrilled when we came in here tonight and saw this crowd and realized that hundreds were listening in. To be one with you is one of the greatest blessings of mortality. We all prize a friend and know the value of a friend. Next to wife and loved ones, the sweetest thing in life is a friend, true and loyal. But even more than that is the brotherhood of Christ which makes us partakers of the divine nature. Peter used that phrase. That rough old fisherman realized what it was, and yet he had only a few years' experience. But we have that brotherhood which we feel tonight until it becomes intimate to our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

I pray that the sense of responsibility of Priesthood will increase and make us feel the mission before us—worldwide—and then make us go beyond the veil and realize that in some way we may help the Lord to bring about this great purpose, which has been repeated here tonight, to bring about the immortality and eternal life of man, for all his children, and all of them will have an opportunity some way, somehow, somewhere to say, "Yes, I accept it," or "No, I reject it."

I pray that the blessings of the Priesthood will be ours in our homes, in our business, in our associations with the world, in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

President David O. McKay:

This is from Orlando, Florida: "Dear President McKay: Closed circuit reception of the General Priesthood Meeting is excellent in Orlando, Florida. Please accept our deep and sincere appreciation for making it possible for us to join with the Priesthood of the Church in this inspiring service. Faithfully yours, Orlando Stake Presidency."

In the Salt Lake Tabernacle there are 7730 present; Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall and Temple Grounds, 2869; from 167 groups reporting in, 34,688, or a total of men of the Priesthood, 45,287, the largest ever to attend. In April, 1958 we had 45,154; October, 1958, 38,403. Tonight, I repeat, 45,287.

It is thrilling to be with you. I wish particularly to express appreciation to the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir. They have blessed our lives with dignity, and have appeared here in their best, the whole Choir of men's voices, and how inspirationally they have sung! Brother Condie, we appreciate your efforts, and you men of the Choir, your willingness to go to the trouble that you have to come here to render the service which has been so inspirational. God bless you.

They will now sing for us, "I Need Thee Every Hour." How appropriate. After the singing Elder Clifton G. M. Kerr, formerly president of the British Mission, will offer the benediction, and this Conference will be adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Thank you, Brother Bowring and Brother Clissold, for your inspiring words tonight.

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir Men's Chorus, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

President David O. McKay:

Brother Clifton G. M. Kerr, recently president of the British Mission, will now dismiss us.

---

Elder Clifton G. M. Kerr, formerly president of the British Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until Sunday, April 5, at 10:00 a.m.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

(For a full report of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast, see page 123)

The Sunday morning session of the Conference convened at 10 o'clock a.m., April 5th, immediately following the conclusion of the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir.

President David O. McKay presided at this meeting and conducted the services.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ, will open these services by singing, "Jesus, Our Lord, We Adore Thee." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Henry A. Smith, president of the Central Atlantic States Mission.

---

The Choir sang as an opening number, "Jesus, Our Lord, We Adore Thee."

Elder Henry A. Smith, president of the Central Atlantic States Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The Invocation just offered was by Elder Henry A. Smith, president of the Central Atlantic States Mission. The Choir will now sing, "Behold, God the Lord Pass By."

---

The Tabernacle Choir sang, "Behold, God the Lord Pass By."

President David O. McKay:

You who heard that great broadcast this morning know that it was under the direction of Richard P. Condie with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. So also was this beautiful hymn, "Behold, God the Lord Pass By."

President Stephen L. Richards of the First Presidency will be our first speaker. We are in connection with many of the western states by direct wire this morning, during the first hour especially. Brother Richards will be followed by Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve.

PRESIDENT STEPHEN L RICHARDS

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My dear brethren and sisters and friends, I assure you that I appear before this vast audience without self-assurance, and with deep humility, and with an earnest prayer that the Lord will bless me and you with a bond of sympathetic understanding.

Some time ago I heard over the radio a minister begin his address with the following question: "Can a man be a Christian without belonging to a Christian church?" His discussion of the subject was very interesting. If I correctly interpreted his argument, his answer was, "No—a man cannot truly be a Christian without belonging to a Christian church."

I do not propose on this occasion either to support or oppose the conclusion reached by the reverend gentleman. The reasons he presented seemed plausible to me, and I have no doubt they seemed so to many of his listeners. I should like to use the theme of his arresting address to bring forward some thoughts and concepts I have on the nature and vitality of the Christian religion.

Just what is Christianity, and what does it mean to be a Christian? In assuming to make comment on these important questions, I wish it to be understood that I make no pretention to scholarship or academic learning on the subject matter involved. I believe that academic learning is not itself essential for me or any other man to reach some important conclusions. We are told that things of the Spirit in divine revelation are so plain and simple to those of faith and understanding that he "who runs may read."

Surely most, if not all, Christians will agree that any adequate concept of the Master must involve a spiritual interpretation. When the Savior uttered those great words, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," it is entirely clear that he had no intention of defining merely a moral code of which he was the exemplar, for following these words he declared a great spiritual truth which lies at the basis of the whole Christian faith when he said: "... no man cometh unto the Father but by me." (John 14:6.)

Herein lies the very crux of the question which the minister proposed: Can a man be a Christian without allying himself with a Christian church? Is it sufficient that one adopt the Christian virtues in his life—be unselfish, kind, considerate, long-suffering, patient, gentle, serving his fellow man after the pattern set by the Savior? Is this alone sufficient? There is no question that a man so living commands the utmost respect and esteem of good people. There is no question but that such a life is filled with happiness and satisfactions—satisfactions that endure. Is all this good living of itself enough?

At this point I must introduce to my friends—my fellow members of the Church are well acquainted with it—a scripture from modern revelation, which brings clarity to our thinking. These are the words of the Lord to his Prophet: "And verily, verily, I say unto you, he that receiveth my gospel receiveth me; and he that receiveth not my gospel receiveth not me." (D&C 39:5.)

Now if it is essential to receive the gospel in order to receive the Christ, what follows? To answer this we must understand and define the gospel. Is the gospel itself anything more than the sum total of the Savior's divine attributes and qualities? I think that all who give careful consideration to the scriptures and the works of the Master will agree that it is. Perhaps the most famous of all definitions of the gospel is that given by Paul when he said: "... I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; ..." (Romans 1:16.)

It is certainly not difficult to gather from the words, "power of God unto salvation," a meaning beyond that of a moral code for living based upon the attributes of the Savior. The gospel as a power unto salvation must embrace not only all the Christlike characteristics of living, but also the means essential to salvation. These indispensable means or essentials for salvation have been clearly set forth by the Savior on numerous occasions and in unmistakable terms. He prescribed ordinances and proclaimed their indispensable nature. He declared to John the Baptist who protested his application for baptism that baptism "becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." (Matt. 3:13-16.) Time and again he and his apostles after him exhorted all to repentance and baptism and to faith, firm and abiding faith in him and the holy gospel.

And Paul, his apostle, certified that there was but one authentic gospel. These are his words: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1:8.)

And further he declares: "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man."

"For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." (Idem, 11-12.) And the Christian scriptures are replete with the injunction that the gospel of our Lord is to be preached "... to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." (Rev. 14:6.)

If there should be any uncertainty in the mind of anyone professing to be Christian as to the essentiality of the gospel and its ordinances, it seems to me it should be completely resolved by the final charge to his disciples, given in almost the closing hours of his mortal life, when he uttered these portentous words: "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." (Matthew 28:18-20.)

Now if gospel ordinances are essential they must be administered, and in logical sequence it follows that they must be administered by those having a delegation of authority to do so. So it follows also that the delegation of authority must come from one source only—the Author of the gospel plan, the Christ, who derived his authority from the Eternal Father. Those who held and exercised such authority in ancient Israel, as in the Meridian of Time, were endowed with what is called "priesthood," being a divinely bestowed commission to represent the Father and the Son and perform the ordinances of the gospel.

This divine authority is a special kind of power, differing widely in many respects from other forms of delegated authority. I am indebted for a description of its nature and constituency to a modern revelation, unique so far as I know in the whole field of theological learning. This is the revelation:

"... the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and ... the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness.

"That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man." (D&C 121:36-37.)

Here is a divine endowment, a marvelous gift to man, which may be lost by failure to exercise the power in its true meaning and spirit. It has been lost, my brothers and sisters and friends, to men of old as in modern times by failure both to understand its true nature and to exercise its functions in a manner compatible with the spirit and essence of the power itself.

Listen to these lovely words further defining the nature of this holy power. "No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—

"Let thy bowels also be full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and let virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly; then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God; and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven." (Idem, 41-42, 45.)

The priesthood which the revelations so define was lost to those following his apostles when they failed to preserve the spirit and essentials of this divine power, just as the Lord said in the revelation it would be: "Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man," (Idem, 37) are the words of the Lord. When it was lost, it had to be restored, and it had to be restored authentically.

The powers of the priesthood may never be assumed. They must always be conferred, and of course by someone having the power to confer. My friends, I wish you to know—and I hope you will not regard it as presumptuous in me to inform you—that the powers of the Holy Priesthood have been conferred authentically in modern times. Time will not permit me to detail all the circumstances attendant upon this bestowal of divine power, but I give it to you as my considered judgment and my firm conviction that there is evidence—credible and reliable evidence—to support and verify the account of such bestowal as contained in the records of the Restored Church of our Lord. And in addition to such credible evidence I believe that an open-minded investigator will discover from the operations of this divine power results, benefits, and blessings corroborative of the divine authenticity of the Holy Priesthood as it exists today in this sorry world which so much needs it.

Now we return to the specific theme with which we began—the relationship of a Christian to a church. Perhaps I had better begin with a few statements which may seem rather trite. The kingdom of God is a kingdom, not a democracy. The king is the author and source of the law, the judge, and the omnipotent administrator. He and he only prescribes the rules governing eligibility for membership in his kingdom. I grant that this may sound arbitrary and dogmatic. In organizations formed by men no such autocratic power would be tolerated. But the kingdom of our Lord is not an organization formed by men. Liberty loving men can accept such omnipotent power only because they have faith and complete confidence in the beneficence of such power.

What then is the standing of a so-called Christian with reference to the kingdom of God? Is he rightly classified as Christian unless he has taken the steps necessary to receive the gospel of our Lord and enter into his kingdom? I believe, my friends, that a careful survey of all pertinent scriptures, as well as the whole history of Christ's work among men, will demonstrate that only by the complete acceptance of the Christ as our Lord, and subscribing to all the conditions and requirements of his holy gospel, including its sacred ordinances governing induction into his kingdom, can a man fully justify a claim to the honorable distinction of being a Christian. So it seems to me that the crucial question is not so much whether a man must belong to a church to be a Christian, but whether he has prepared himself and taken the necessary steps to enter into the kingdom of God.

It would seem beyond question that there could not be more than one kingdom of the Lord. So the concern of all who seek Christian salvation must be: Where is that kingdom? Where is it set up in the earth that men may come to it and receive its transcendent blessings? This is a delicate question because the feelings of people about religion are deep and sensitive. No one likes to offend. I assure you I do not, but I would be untrue to my calling if I did not undertake to the best of my ability to give to all men the revelations of the Lord about this question: Where is the kingdom of God set up in the earth?

First I must take you back to an ancient prophecy with which many are familiar. You will remember that when Daniel was asked to interpret the king's dream of the great image whose head was of gold, whose breast and arms were of silver, whose belly and thighs were of brass, with legs of iron and feet of clay, he uttered these portentous words:

"Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

"Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away. . . ." (Dan. 2:34-35.)

Then follows a description of the kingdoms represented by parts of the image which the king saw, and finally, following a description of the kingdoms of the world, these words:

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." (Idem 44.)

This and other prophecies of ancient days predict with certainty the setting up of a kingdom of God in the earth. In the mind and heart of the prophets no mere mystical kingdom is predicted, but an actual institutional power which shall not only have sway among men, but among the kingdoms and establishments of the world.

In a later day, after the Savior had completed his ministry on the earth, to his beloved apostle, John, came the following revelation:

"And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

"Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:6-7.)

It is true that times are not set in these revelations for the fulfilment of the prophecies therein contained, but all will agree that they contemplated a time of fulfilment. That time came, my friends, more than a century ago in the free land of America with guarantees of liberty sufficient to protect men in the free expression of religious convictions. I think in no other land at the time of fulfilment could the great spiritual experiences lying at the foundation of a great cause have been tolerated sufficiently to come to fruition.

In this land of liberty fulfilment came. The predictions of old came to pass. The prophets were vindicated. Through the instrumentality of an intelligent, unsophisticated young man of great faith, through men of humility, the Lord's kingdom was set up in the earth, his own true Church established with the power of the Holy Priesthood to administer the ordinances of the gospel, and with the same organization that the Christ himself gave to men when he ministered in flesh among them.

I hope you will realize, my friends, that it is impossible in this short period of time to present in any detail and with any sufficient measure of adequacy the circumstances which justify the statement which I have made in your hearing. All I can do in these few minutes is to give you assurance that proof is available, proof not only for mental assurance but soul conviction as well, which in my humble judgment is sufficient to satisfy the searcher after the truth.

Therefore, if you would be truly Christian, if you would be classified as a disciple of our dear Savior, I hold out to you the one sure way of achieving that great distinction. Come into his kingdom through the door which is open to all who will abide his law and his gospel. Come to participate in blessings and high privileges which surpass even the vision of your highest hopes and ambitions.

I have one more thought to give you, fearing that some may appraise my remarks as too fanatical and visionary. I remember years ago reading a book written by Walter Lippman, who I think has the reputation of being a rather keen analyst of human affairs. Writing of man and religion, he said in substance that they who give serious thought to religion are of two classes—the humanists and the authoritarians. Either one must interpret the spiritual and religious in terms of human origin, attributes, and characteristics, or in terms of a God of revelation, power, and authority.

Well, I am of the latter class. I believe in God implicitly. I believe in the divinity of our Lord and Savior as the Son of God. I believe that the Lord has revealed himself to men in days past, and that he has not denied to his children of later generations the blessing and benefit of his revelations. I am convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that his gospel has been restored in its fulness with all its ordinances, and the powers authentically to administer them in these last days. I give you my solemn witness that his kingdom is set up in the earth, and that it is established forever; that they whom he has chosen to be his special representatives from period to period have not been pretenders. I have lived long enough to have known personally four, and two more at a distance, of the nine Presidents who have presided over the Church since its beginning, and I have had intimate association with our leader who guides the Church today for more than fifty years. Of my own knowledge I testify that these revered leaders and their associates in the Presiding Councils of the Church, acting under the authority of the Holy Priesthood, have administered the affairs of the kingdom with the fear of God in their hearts, fearing to offend him in any degree, and seeking to serve him and his children with humility and complete dedication.

And I must ask all of you, my friends, not to forget that truth is not determined by numbers, nor the number of its adherents. Christ began alone. Then as always, as the old saying goes, "God and one man are a majority." With him we are safe.

I pray for spiritual understanding to come to all our dear brethren and sisters in this world, that men may know in their hearts what it truly means to be a Christian, a disciple of Christ. The Lord bless us all, I ask humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Stephen L Richards of the First Presidency of the Church has just spoken to us. We hope that all the television sets and radios that were tuned in along the West Coast, in the Northwest and throughout the nation, heard this wonderful address.

And now while we are all in connection one with another, we shall hear Elder Henry D. Taylor, who presided over the California Mission until recently, and is now one of the Assistants to the Twelve.

ELDER HENRY D. TAYLORAssistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles*

My dear brethren and sisters, conference time is always a thrilling time as the Saints assemble from all over the world here at Church headquarters. Friends warmly greet each other as friendships are renewed. Former missionaries meet in reunion and recall the soul-satisfying experiences they enjoyed while in the service of the Lord.

I always approach this historic Tabernacle with a feeling of reverence and awe when I consider that the Saints have been coming here for ninety-one and one-half years to hear the word of the Lord and receive inspiration from their appointed leaders. The building of the Tabernacle being completed, the first conference was held here in October of the year 1867.

We gain strength from each other, brethren and sisters, and I am confident that the Brethren who stand in this pulpit feel the strength of your prayers and the inspiration that you bring with you.

Many years ago I copied an inscription appearing above one of the entrances to the Union Depot in Washington, D.C., which reads:

"He that would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him; so it is in traveling, a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge."

That same principle is true today. If we would carry spirituality from this conference, we must have brought a spirit of spirituality with us.

Springtime is a glorious time of the year as new life begins to stir and the earth seems to awaken from its long winter nap. An ancient biblical prophet has exclaimed:

"For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

"The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle [meaning the turtle dove] is heard in our land." (Song of Sol. 2:11-12.)

This awakening is reminiscent of the death and the resurrection of the Savior, and we can appropriately dwell on the great debt of gratitude that we owe him for his atoning sacrifice.

It has been said that, "while gratitude may be one of the least of the virtues, ingratitude is one of the greatest of the vices."

Selfishness, greed, and indifference are by-products of ingratitude. A classic example of ingratitude occurred during the ministry of the Savior while here upon the earth. Luke records the event in these words:

"And it came to pass, as he [Jesus] went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

"And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:

"And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

"And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

"And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God,

"And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

"And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

"There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. "And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole." (Luke 17:11-19.)

Gratitude, brethren and sisters, results in love, unselfishness, and consideration for others. It has a refining influence, and when expressed, can be a beautiful thing. A recent newspaper account carried an interesting incident:

"The District of Columbia police auctioned off about 100 unclaimed bicycles Friday. 'One dollar,' said an eleven year-old boy as the bidding opened on the first bike. The bidding, however, went much higher. 'One dollar,' the boy repeated hopefully each time another bike came up.

"The auctioneer, who has been auctioning stolen or lost bikes for 43 years, noticed that the boy's hopes seemed to soar highest whenever a racer was put up.

"There was one racer left. Then the bidding mounted to $8.00. 'Sold to that boy over there for $9.00,' said the auctioneer. He took $8.00 from his own pocket and asked the boy for his dollar. The youngster turned it over—in pennies, nickles, dimes, and quarters—took his bike and started to leave. But he went only a few feet. Carefully parking his new possession, he went back, gratefully threw his arms around the auctioneer's neck, and cried."

President Richards, in a recent talk at Brigham Young University, quoted this beautiful thought expressed by Sir Isaac Walton:

"God has two dwelling places; one in heaven, the other in a thankful heart, which O Lord grant to me."

The Lord expects us to receive our blessings with a grateful heart. Through a modern prophet he has made this promise:

"And he who receiveth all things with thankfulness shall be made glorious; and the things of this earth shall be added unto him, even an hundred fold, yea, more." (D&C 78:19.)

Many opportunities are constantly afforded us for expressing appreciation and gratitude for our numerous blessings.

Daily, we should gather our families about us as we kneel in family prayer.

Many times during each day we can profitably pause and in secret prayer give grateful acknowledgment for the multitudinous bounties of which we are recipients.

On the first Sunday of each month a fast and testimony meeting is held in each one of the wards and branches. Members of the Church are encouraged to rise and give public utterance of their gratitude for the countless blessings that the Lord has showered upon them.

An excellent way of showing our love for our Heavenly Father and our appreciation for his blessings is through our righteous actions and righteous living.

"If ye love me, keep my commandments," said the Savior, in emphasizing this principle. (John 14:15.)

We have many things for which to be grateful. Among them is the privilege of being born in this dispensation, when the gospel has been restored to earth in its fulness through heavenly messengers. And this gospel is a plan, a plan of salvation, and it can be a guide and a blueprint which, if followed, can lead us back once again into God's presence.

Certainly we should recall with gratitude the mission of our Lord and Savior, Jesus the Christ, and his willingness to give his life that we might have salvation and the opportunity of obtaining exaltation.

We can be properly grateful for the life of the first prophet in these latter days, Joseph Smith, and give praise to this "man who communed with Jehovah," for it was through the Prophet Joseph that the gospel was restored and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints established.

We can give thanks for the Presidents who have succeeded Joseph Smith, and especially for our present-day President. As we consider President McKay's kindness, goodness, and greatness, we can sing with all our hearts, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet to guide us in these latter days."

Finally, I am deeply grateful for the knowledge that I am truly a spiritual son of our Heavenly Father, created in his image and after his own likeness, and although temporarily deprived of the privilege of dwelling in his presence,

Second Day

I can still communicate with him through the medium of prayer and can receive strength, comfort, and guidance.

May the Lord bless us all that we may have grateful hearts, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Those who have the arrangement of the radio and television connections this morning have sent me a note here "that the speaker succeeding Brother Richards should close at 10:57." It is 10:55, Brother Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us.

The Choir and Congregation will now sing, "We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet," after which Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy, will speak to us. Elder Condie will lead us.

The congregation and the Tabernacle Choir joined in singing the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For A Prophet."

President David O. McKay:

Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Sterling W. Sill.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I presume that listening in are a large number of those of us who are of an age where they can say "teen" after the number of years since they have been born, and I would direct what I have to say to them—thirteen, fourteen, sixteen, eighteen.

I should like to read briefly two stories. The first is told by Luke.

"And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth,

"To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

"And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

"And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

"And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God.

"And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

"He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

"And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

"Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

"And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." (Luke 1:26-35.)

I should like also to state that in the account given in Matthew, Joseph was minded to put her away privily when he discovered she was expecting, and an angel came to him and told him not to do it, whereupon he assumed the place that you know about in history.

The second story is one told by Joseph Smith:

"After I had retired to the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me, and finding myself alone, I knelt down and began to offer up the desire of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so, when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction.

"But, exerting all my powers to call upon God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction—not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world, who had such marvelous power as I had never before felt in any being—just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun, which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

"It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (Joseph Smith 2:15-17.)

These two accounts have two things in common—both are of supernatural events; both are true. One tells of a miraculous conception, the other of a miraculous restoration. The one confirms the fact that Jesus Christ is literally the Son of God; the other that the Father and the Son are indeed one in purpose, although separate individual Personages.

Now, young folks, in the course of your growing up you will associate with teachers who will try to persuade you that the first account could not have happened, and that the second was an hallucination of an epileptic. But you will also be surprised at the wide range of people of all classes of learning who not only take comfort from these stories but also declare them to be true. During the 129 years of the Church on earth, many educated people have branded its teachings as the rantings of an ignoramus. Scientists have laughed to scorn its explanations, and evil people have declared it to be deceitful and adulterous. Yet educated men have found its claims to be true and have been enlarged by them. Scientists have accepted it without explaining it and have found comfort in it, and evil men have repented and have found peace within its fold.

Any young person can take his choice as to which kind of belief he wants to accept. You will be exposed to both kinds. You may have a sure way of knowing. President Richards briefly referred to it. You can know by the whispering of the Spirit that the statements I have read to you this morning are true, and that all of the things which have happened supernaturally in this Church have actually happened.

Some of you may have had great adventures in the hills, and some of you may have had them on the water and the sea, some have had them or will have them in the air, but I can testify to you that there will be none of you have any adventure greater, more thrilling, and more joyful than finding out how to interpret the Spirit which comes into you bearing testimony of the truth. Young folks have to learn how, so do we older folks. We have to find out the technique by which the Spirit whispers in our hearts. We have to learn to hear it and to understand it and to know when we have it, and that sometimes takes a long time.

But no matter what your age, you do not need to wait until you are old to know. Any child, age eight, having been baptized and having received the gift of the Holy Ghost, is a fit candidate to have the Holy Ghost bear its imprint upon him as to the truth of the teachings of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. As he grows and has that imprint upon him, he will have joy and satisfaction and peace and happiness beyond anything that can be described with words.

So I would say to the young folks of the Church, some of whom come to me confused, if you will ask, not doubting that you can have an answer, the answer will come in the whispering. Then you must learn to interpret the whispering. At first it likely will come as something akin to a feeling, although not a feeling. There will finally come into your minds the words expressive of the feeling, and those words properly interpreted will be the whispering of the Spirit. You may know as I know that Jesus is the Christ, that he was born of a virgin, that his Father was the Eternal God, and that he was chosen in this last day to re-establish his work, after having his prophets prophesy of it, through the Prophet Joseph Smith. The account of its beginnings I have read to you, and that testimony is true, and this Church now, with its million and a half people, stands as a witness. Each one of us in this audience knows for himself, not because of what somebody says, but in his own way and for himself, by the whispering of the Spirit, that indeed it is true.

Second Day

I bear you that testimony and add to it that I know that President McKay is a prophet of the Living God, a seer, and a revelator, as are his counselors, and the twelve, and the patriarch, and I uphold them as such. I commend them to you as being what I have witnessed. I ask a blessing upon us all, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER STERLING W. SILL

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

After the Last Supper, Jesus was giving some final instructions to his disciples. He was trying to prepare them for the heavy load of responsibility which would soon rest upon them. He talked with them a great deal about his own mission, his association with his Father and what their relationship with God ought to be. During the discussion Philip said to Jesus, "... Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us." (John 14:8.)

This question points out what is probably the greatest responsibility of our lives—not only to know God but also to understand the plan of the gospel and to live in harmony therewith. The proper relationship between men and God gives life its purpose. It doesn't matter very much whether we ride in an oxcart or on an interplanetary missile if our journey is purposeless.

Think how important it is that we understand that Jesus is the Redeemer of the world, that he expressed the divine will to men, that he was literally begotten of the Father. Jesus tried to help his disciples to understand the Father by understanding the Son who was in the express image of his Father's person. (Heb. 1:3.) To Philip he said, "... he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; ..." (John 14:9.) As it was with the disciples, so it is with us. Our relationship to God involves the greatest rewards and the most important responsibilities that ever come to men and women in mortal life, and it is perfectly natural and proper that we should join Philip in his request to "... shew us the Father." (Idem, 8.)

That is, the greatest need of man is for God. God created us. It is his Spirit that "... giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; ..." (D&C 84:46.) Every day he sends us food, energy and vitality from the sun. That is, our world is not an independent world. If the sun's rays were shut off for a very short time no life could survive upon this earth. Not only does God literally give us each day our daily bread, but he is also responsible for our mental and spiritual vitality. (Ibid., 88.)

It is because our greatest need is for God that the first and most important commandment centers in our maintaining a proper relationship to him. And the most serious sins are our abuses of that relationship, wherein we turn away from God. Satan sinned in the presence of God, which sets the high water mark for sin.

Occasionally we ought to ask ourselves, how effective we are—individually and collectively—in this all-important relationship. We may be able to get a clue from some interesting statistics recently broadcast over the radio. A survey indicated that ninety-five percent of all of the people in America claim to believe in God. Eighty percent of those surveyed said they accepted the Bible as the authoritative word of God. Each year in America we spend over a hundred million dollars for Bibles. A bigger percentage of Americans presently claim membership in some Christian church than ever before in our history. Yet paralleling this great upsurge in religion is a corresponding upsurge in crime, delinquency, and actual spiritual illiteracy. This survey indicated that only thirty-five percent of all of those questioned even knew the names of the four Gospels. And over one-half said that religion played no significant part in their business or political affairs.

Last summer in Madison Square Garden, Billy Graham indicated one of our problems when he said, "For all of our talk about religion there is tragically little actual personal Christian commitment in America today." It is very easy for us to get disturbed when we hear about the Russians closing up their churches or trying to banish God from their country and the lives of their people. But what Russia has done officially millions of people are doing privately and individually. That is, what does it profit that our churches are open if we are not in them, or even if we spend a billion dollars for Bibles that we do not read? One thing is sure, and that is that not one of us can afford to fail to observe properly the first and most important commandment. Our eternal lives depend upon it.

It should stimulate us to remember that when Jesus was born in Bethlehem there was no room found for him in the inn. But there is a strange foreboding in this thought. "No room" was the Master's experience throughout his life. There was "no room" for his doctrines, "no room" for the spirit of his mission. We must not allow history to repeat itself because we make no room in our country or our lives for the Savior of the world. Nor have we discharged our obligation to God and our own souls by thoughtlessly saying, "We believe in God," and then let it go at that, without understanding either God or the specific nature of our responsibility to him.

Teachers of religion who "call themselves" to the ministry and then "teach their own doctrines" must bear an awful share of the responsibility for our unfortunate world situation. Even Jesus did not teach his own doctrine. He said, "... My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." (John 7:16.) How much confusion and actual harm would be avoided if every religious teacher would follow the example of "the great Teacher."

Recently I read a book written by a popular minister, in which he attempted to analyze the great Christian doctrines as taught in the Bible, and then he made comparisons with some of the doctrines currently being taught.

For example, he said that the God of the Bible is a personal God—there can be no question about that. But he said, "We don't believe that any more." And then to substantiate his statement he quoted answers to direct questions about what some prominent ministers had said about their conception of God. One minister said, "No one can possibly know about God. He is absolutely immeasurable, undiscoverable and indiscernible. He is not limited to boundaries and we can be sure that he has no body or shape." Another minister said that "God is an eternal principle." Another said that God is "a giant electronic brain." Another said that God is "a mobile, cosmic ether." This minister pointed out how completely contrary these concepts were to those of the scriptures. He said, "Imagine Jesus praying to a mobile, cosmic ether. Jesus prayed—'. . . Our Father which art in heaven. . . .' (Matt. 6:9.) He said to Mary, '. . . go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and to your God.'" (John 20:17.) That statement must be perfectly clear to everyone. And yet this great minister said, "We don't believe that any more."

Then he discussed the resurrection. He said that those who wrote the Bible believed in a literal bodily resurrection. There could be no question about that. The body of Jesus came out of the tomb and ministered among men for forty days. He said to Thomas, "... Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing." (Idem, 27.) Then he read the paragraph in which Matthew said, "... And the graves were opened; and many of the bodies of the saints which slept arose,

"And came out of their graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." (Matt. 27:52-53.) But this great minister also disposed of this particular doctrine by saying, "We don't believe that any more."

There are those who through their teachings would deprive God of his body, deny his personality, take away his senses, faculties, and feelings. They would leave him sexless, thoughtless, and helpless, without boundaries, shape, identity, or location. Some indulge the hopeless absurdity of merging three into one, and then in some mysterious, incredible way, expanding the result to fill the immensity of space.

These false doctrines have contributed greatly to the indifference and unbelief of our day. That is, much of the current disbelief in God is not a denial of God but a denial of the false and unbelievable ideas about God. In the light of this tragic situation the importance of Philip's plea for understanding God takes on an urgent and compelling significance. What more important request could our generation make than a united, sincere, wholehearted prayer saying, "Show us the Father."

The work and message of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is centered in the literal physical fulfillment of Philip's request in our own day. In the early spring of 1820, in answer to this important need, God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ reappeared upon this earth to re-establish among men a belief in the God of Genesis, a belief in the God taught by Jesus, a belief in the God of the Bible, a belief in the Father of spirits whose will is that not one of his children should perish. (Matt. 18:14.) The voice of the Father was heard at the baptism of Jesus; (ibid., 3:17) and again at the transfiguration. (Ibid., 17:5.) But in our own day he has manifest himself with a complete literalness which cannot be mistaken, misunderstood, or disregarded. In speaking about this important manifestation the Prophet Joseph said:

"... I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head above the brightness of the sun which descended gradually until it fell upon me.

"... When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages whose brightness and glory defy all description standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other, 'This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!'" (Joseph Smith 2:16-17.)

In the midst of the persecution which followed, the Prophet said:

"... I had actually seen a light, and in the midst of the light I saw two Personages and they did in reality speak to me. And though I was hated and persecuted for saying that I had seen a vision, yet it was true. And while they were persecuting me, reviling me, and speaking all manner of evil against me falsely for so saying, I was led in my heart to say: Why persecute me for telling the truth? I have actually seen a vision; and who am I that I can withstand God? Or why does the world think to make me deny that which I have actually seen? For I had seen a vision. I knew it, and I knew that God knew it, and I could not deny it; neither dared I do it." (Idem, 2:25.)

What a thrilling message! What a tremendous testimony! How eagerly it should be welcomed by every child of God as a solid basis for his faith. During the long dark night brought upon the world by apostasy, there may have been room for many doubts. But now these doubts could be dispelled. There was now someone in the world who had actually seen God and who knew for a certainty, not only that he lives, but the kind of Personage that he is. It was now possible to know that above the dictators and above chance and above circumstance, there is God our Heavenly Father to whom all mankind is responsible, and from whom all of our blessings come. How important that everyone should investigate and learn the truth. If one should err in believing the gospel of Jesus Christ to be true, he could not possibly be the loser by the mistake. But how irreparable is his loss who should err in supposing the gospel of Jesus Christ to be false.

Benjamin Disraeli once said, "The secret of success in life is to be ready for success when it comes." How unfortunate when one is not ready, especially when the matters involved are so tremendously all-important. The worst tragedy of the last two thousand years is that the testimony of Jesus concerning the Father and himself has largely gone unheeded. That tragedy is being repeated in our day in that so many are still not ready. We are so much involved in ourselves that we tend to crowd God out of our lives.

Life in this world is not man centered—it is God centered. As so many are doing in our day, the prodigal son squandered his inheritance because his world was centered in himself rather than in God. The greatest possible accomplishment of our world is to know God, and to believe in God, and to obey God.

Philip said, "... shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us." The overwhelming importance of that plea was emphasized by the Master himself when on that last fateful night as he prayed to his Father he said, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

How tremendously important it is, therefore, that both of these great Personages have reappeared to men upon the earth in our own day, that we may know for ourselves.

I would like to close with a quotation of one of the most important utterances ever made in the world. After Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon had received an informative and glorious heavenly manifestation at Hiram, Ohio, on February 16, 1832, an account of which is recorded in the seventy-sixth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, they wrote these thrilling lines:

"And now, after the many testimonies that have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: that he lives!

"For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—

"That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God." (D&C 76:22-24.)

To this I would like to add my own personal testimony, that I know that God lives and that his priesthood and his Church, teaching his doctrines, are now upon the earth, that we may in very deed be his disciples. May God help us to avail ourselves of this tremendous opportunity I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve. Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric will now speak to us. Our concluding speaker will be Elder Harold B. Lee.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

President McKay, President Richards, President Clark, my beloved brothers and sisters:

I always need the blessings of the Lord when I am called to this position. I could hardly proceed without the assurance of those blessings. I shall be grateful for your prayers, your patience, and your understanding. After much fasting and much praying, I trust that the Lord will sustain me. We do believe in praying, and we believe in fasting, and I testify to you that therefrom comes great strength to us.

I am sure we were deeply touched this morning by this wonderful choir, both at the broadcast and at this session. They are a great credit to us, a great credit to themselves and to the Church. Truly, they are regarded as wonderful servants, and they are not alone wonderful singers, but they are wonderful people.

Regarding the divinely appointed responsibility of parents, the sobering counsel is given to us that "... they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord."

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

(D&C 68:28.) These and many other scriptures make it crystal-clear the heaven-imposed responsibilities of teaching our children properly. If we fail in our duty toward them, we are weakening the foundation of our own influence.

Marriage is the gateway through which a man or woman obtains personal experience in human relationships. Parenthood is the opportunity for putting that experience to heavenly and practical use. It is a God-given right for parents to have children so that they can give them intelligent, mental, moral, and spiritual training. Parent love is beautiful, but parent love combined with intelligent discipline is the force that turns children into great characters. Misdirected and misguided offspring result in one of civilization's appalling wastes and present-day problems. Good citizens are necessary to civilization, but good parents are obligatory if civilization is to continue.

We hear very little nowadays about the strength of character that our forefathers drilled into their children. In those days, a boy grew up with the understanding that he could get somewhere in this world through hard work, rather than looking for short-cuts. Promotion was considered on performance, results, ability, and talent. Parents implanted in their children a desire for sound knowledge and a yearning for excellence and a willingness for hard work. The sense of personal responsibility was as basic as love itself.

Somewhere in our recent past, many of us have adopted the idea that a father's firm influence is not essential in the raising of children. All too often father's role in family discipline has been dismissed to, "You ask your mother." This may be all right with daughters, but with a son, it is an invitation to disaster. A boy who grows up unable to look to his father for guidance and decision and help will not have much respect for authority whatever its source.

Ninety percent of the youngsters who have had troubles are the products of homes where the father's influence was lacking. As unattractive as the task may seem, a father is the guiding director of the family, and when he fails in his job, there can be only chaos and trouble.

Should a father surrender to his wife his own position as head of the household, then the results may be the same.

Faithful parents are entitled to the inspiration of the Lord. What would we do as parents without that inspiration? But sometimes parents do not have the courage to follow that inspiration, and they yield, when they should stand firm.

There should be well-established rules of behavior for growing boys and girls. The word "no" is now practically obsolete. Is it wrong for youngsters to have to toe the line? Discipline—why, we all need discipline! Someone has said that respect is no longer a part of the everyday living. The lack of discipline will bring a lack of respect. Are parents smart to give in? Would we not be better parents if we put our "foot down"? Youngsters are still youngsters, perhaps immature. They need so much help and so much counsel. They have a lot to learn, but as parents we should not be afraid to teach them.

Perhaps we should let our youngsters know that they are supposed to achieve—they will be required to work, and that celebration comes only after victory, accomplishment, and achievement. A sensible youngster does not necessarily want his freedom. All he wants and needs is love, and he knows deep down in his heart that the people who love him the most are the ones who will have the courage to say "no." Discipline—yes, it is necessary to save our youngsters from themselves!

There is no strength comparable to the strength of a nation whose people know the meaning of sacrifice. Some parents say, "We do not want our youngsters to sacrifice." Young people should be taught the meaning and the law of sacrifice. They will have to pay a price for success. The price of success is high, but it is not nearly so high as the price of failure!

There are so many unwholesome outside influences working against us today, that it is a challenge to all parents to teach their children properly and watch over them carefully.

During the last year, many of us have become increasingly alarmed by the fact that prolonged exposure to television is having a disastrous effect on our children. Many times, parents use television as a built-in substitute for parental guidance.

According to Edward R. Murrow, and I quote:

"As a child's mind and character is shaped by what he sees and hears and as TV trends continue, the nation faces the danger of mass imbecility."

Television has taken the place of reading, studying, and true family life in many homes. If this continues for another generation, we may be shocked at the results.

During the past year, the greatest wave of crime and horror shows of all time has deluged this nation.

Last fall, a prominent magazine stated that networks were devoting twenty-four hours a week to violence. Of the thirty-one new programs introduced (and that number has now increased), half are devoted to violence. It also states that one week's television programs showed 160 murders, 500 percent more than five years ago; 60 justifiable homicides; 192 attempted murders; 83 robberies; 15 kidnappings; 24 conspiracies to commit murder; 21 jail breaks; 7 attempted lynchings; 6 dynamitings; 11 extortions; 2 cases of arson; and 2 cases of torture; plus an unaccountable number of fights, sluggings, maulings, etc.

I wonder if we realize what effect this is going to have. It seems a shame that children should be subjected to such atrocities. What we need are more producers and sponsors who are interested in educational programs and character building.

Judge Frank J. Kronenburg of New York says that "television is an instrument of undue pressure that convinces the immature mind that violence is an accepted way of life. . . . The results will best be known by posterity. . . ."

James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, states: "The increasing number of prisoners young and old whose crime closely parallels what they have seen on television is a matter of great concern to me. The impressionable maladjusted or emotional young person sees these crimes and re-enacts them."

Since all of us are so deeply concerned, it is up to us to encourage and suggest to sponsors, stations, public officials, radio commissioners, newspapers, and magazines, new and different programs; and patronize good programs. Television is a great modern invention. It can be so educational, it can be such a help in character building. Many programs are already very excellent, and we should support them.

The proper use of leisure time is very important, and the proper use of it has been the means of helping many young men and women to greatness.

I recently heard someone say, talking about television, that it was a good way to kill time. Then I thought at that time of what Thoreau once said: "As if you could kill time without injuring eternity."

Of course, we as parents cannot blame all juvenile delinquency on television. We must take the responsibility in the home. Make no mistake about that. Most parents love their children and want them to have as much freedom as is necessary, but as Sam Levenson says, "We don't want the Bill of Rights to turn into the rights of Billy."

"It is a fulltime job to be decent"—to be decent to everybody all the time. To be decent is to cease bitterness, jealousy, and hate, to refrain from gossip, refrain from backbiting, and from passing on untrue comments and unreliable stories about another, to be considerate, thoughtful, and sympathetic. After all, everyone that I know of already has a very heavy load to carry.

Referring to the life of Jesus, there was no hate in him, but only gentleness and patience. Through him, it was not just a religion that was born. It was man reaching out for something clean and good, yearning for something decent and dignified. Men had known for centuries that happiness did not evolve from violence and injustice, not even from power. They knew cruelty always defeated itself.

Jesus taught that respect and love should be the primary guides of human behavior and human decency. There is an eternal hope that this can be a good world, that nations can live in harmony, that people can produce and trade and serve, each for the profit of the other. It is a beautiful thing that man after all his tragic experience with war, brutality and despair, can hold to this wonderful belief.

Remember, young people, there is a price for success, but the price of success is not nearly so high as the price of failure. Remember, young people, that you are holding our hearts and your future in your hands.

I want to bear my testimony to the Lord for his kindness and mercies to me, for his blessings, for his help and his guidance. I know that this is the true Church of Jesus Christ. I know that God lives, that he is our Father. I know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, our beloved Savior and Redeemer.

I wonder how near we can get to our Heavenly Father and to our Savior. I know from my own experience that when I can become humble, it is possible for me to get very close to the Lord. I know that there is divine inspiration and revelation in the Church today. I know that our beloved President David O. McKay, a prophet of God, is at the head of the Church. I know he is inspired of the Lord. I know that the priesthood is in the Church today, and that inspiration and revelation in the Church today is as strong or stronger than we have ever known it before.

May God bless us that we may live up to the standards of this beautiful gospel, to this Church which is our life, which makes our life as it is, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Persiding Bishopric has just addressed us. Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker.

ELDER HAROLD B. LEE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I am prompted in the subject of my few remarks by a recent saddening experience, which I had with some young people of Latter-day Saint parentage who have allowed their faith to dwindle while they have sought for higher education in the so-called secular fields, and I am encouraged in discussing some of these matters by what has appeared to be the theme of this session of our conference. I therefore seek for the sustaining of your faith and prayers for these next few minutes.

Some two years ago I came across a report in the New York Times of a statement made by Dr. O. H. Mowrer of the University of Illinois, psychologist and former president of the American Psychological Association. This statement came out of a symposium on the relationship between religion and mental health at the sixty-fifth annual meeting of the American Psychological Association held in the Statler Hotel in New York City. This is what Dr. Mowrer says:

"Psychology does not know enough about religion, psychology does not have all the answers. In fact," he observed, "it has not even asked all the right questions—the great soul-shaking questions of life and death which lie at the very heart of human experience and existence." Dr. Mowrer further said: "It is striking how many psychologists are themselves going back to church, or at least carefully sending their children to Sunday School." He concluded then by saying: "This symposium is far from an occasion for celebration, but rather a call to labor in a vineyard which we psychologists have rather systematically neglected and despised."

It has been a source of great satisfaction for me to have observed in my contacts with men in various fields that other great men in other fields are likewise seeking for the answers to the soul-shaking questions, as he put it, which lie at the heart of human experience and existence.

Some time ago I was privileged to have a telephone conversation with one of the religion editors for a great national news chain. He was preparing an article that was to precede the showing of the great Hill Cumorah Pageant. He said he wanted to talk with me about what he called—I think he called it the “intricate” teachings of the Church. When I asked him to explain what he meant, he said, “Well, this baptism for the dead.” So, as I explained to him the teachings of the Church, he said, “Well, your teaching regarding baptism for the dead is like praying souls out of purgatory.” I said, “Well, I suppose the intent may be said to be the same, but there is one distinctive difference. One is scriptural and true, and the other is not.” Then he challenged me to prove from the scriptures—this over the telephone—how we could take this stand.

I called his attention to what the Lord said to the evilly intended Jews who sought his life: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.” (John 5:25.) That hour that he spoke of was explained, undoubtedly, by the Master to his disciples—at least Peter understood it so well that in his epistles he wrote very clearly about it. After the resurrection he said: “. . . being put to death in the flesh [Jesus], quickened by the Spirit, . . . went and preached to the spirits in prison, which had been disobedient in the days of Noah.” (See I Peter 3:18-20.)

And he further said: “For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh but live according to God in the spirit.” (Ibid., 4:6.)

Then I called his attention to the fact that the method or practice of this gospel ordinance was used by the Apostle Paul as an argument for the resurrection, when he asked the question as he wrote to the Corinthians: “Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?” (I Cor. 15:29.)

Some while later, after his article had been written, I had occasion to visit this man again in a hospital where he was convalescing from a major operation. This time his wife was present, and after the necessary introduction, he said: “I wish you would explain to my wife here what you told me about the intricate teachings of your Church.” And so, with the realization that I was in a man’s hospital room and he was convalescing, I proceeded to explain what I had previously said to him, at the conclusion of which he said to her: “I told you that the teachings of the Mormon Church are like bricks in a wall of a house, put together with no gaps in them. They have an answer for everything.”

Then I said to him, “Of course, you realize that your comment is to us but another testimony of the divine origin of this Church and the gospel principles which do supply an answer for everything affecting life and death.”

The principles of the gospel are unchangeable, and they are fixed according to the gospel plan. I came to that conclusion in a rather startling way. Brother Kimball and I had an experience with one of Brother Moyle’s friends, a great industrialist, to whom Brother Moyle had presented a Book of Mormon, and with whom he had had many gospel conversations. In our presence, and before the Brigham Young University student body, this man declared that he accepted the Book of Mormon as a true record of his ancestors, he being of Cherokee Indian descent. When we questioned him about that, then if he accepted the Book of Mormon as a true record what did that make of Joseph Smith, and he said he accepted Joseph Smith as a prophet, and he accepted the Church as divine, but he could not believe the principle of baptism for the dead. He said, “I believe God could save those who have died in any way he wanted to.”

I made, what I came to realize a little later, a loose remark that I have repented of many times, when I said to him, “Yes, I suppose God could have said, ‘Throw your hat over a cliff, and you will be saved.’ But he did not say that. He said, ‘. . . Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, only then could he be saved.’” (See John 3:5.)

I told that to a friend of mine, and when I repeated that last, “He could have said, ‘Throw your hat over a cliff,’”

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

he said, "Brother Lee, I am surprised to hear you say that. Could there have been any other way than the way he said?" Then, too late, I remembered what the Master said: "... strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it," (Matt. 7:14) and in the controversy that followed the healing of the blind at the pool of Siloam, "... He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." (John 10:1.)

The Lord has summed up the gospel in these words: "And this is my gospel—repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom." (D&C 39:6.)

What is the gospel then? What a glorious definition we have listened to this morning in President Richards' address. So often I hear my brethren saying something that I wish we would not say quite that way—that the gospel is a way of life. It is not a way of life—it is the way to eternal life. It is the science of salvation. I quote from something that our late beloved brother, Orson F. Whitney, wrote some years ago when he said:

"The principles which compose the gospel—and not merely the first principles, but all that have been or will ever be revealed are self-existent and everlasting in their nature. They have existed from all eternity, and will endure through all eternities to come, for they are absolute, essential, uncreated truths, without beginning of day or end of years, the same yesterday, today, and forever. Concerning the time, place, and method of their compilation . . . it is not man's present province to enquire." (Elder's Journal 4:26.)

Yes, our religion editor of the national newspaper chain, you are right. Gospel truths are as brick upon brick, in a solid wall. There are no gaps. Will you choice young Latter-day Saints, and our friends in the fields of science and psychology and philosophy—will you heed the call of Dr. Mowrer, one of the most brilliant leaders in your secular world, and as he said, heed his call to labor in the vineyard, which all too often you have systematically neglected and despised.

Our beloved late Dr. James E. Talmage, an eminent scholar, has set forth in clearness the essential relationship between scientific theory and truth in an article entitled: "Prophecy as the Forerunner of Science." It was written many years ago, and this is what he said:

"The man of truly scientific spirit regards a theory in its real character—as a provisional and tentative explanation of phenomena not otherwise easy to comprehend. Theory is but the scaffolding necessary to the work of rightly placing the building blocks of truth in the wall of the rising edifice of science. These building blocks are demonstrated facts, truths made plain, and when they are in place, their proper relation to each other duly established, the scaffolding, which is inadequate and unsightly at best, is torn down. Theory becomes unnecessary as our knowledge of facts increases. . . ." (Improvement Era 7:487.)

Nearly twenty years ago because of, shall I say, some immature observations at that time I wrote something that I read again the other day to see if I could now say the same thing. The testimony of those nearly twenty years that have intervened convinced me all the more that these facts are true. That person who thinks he has outgrown his Church and his religion has in reality proved himself too small to bear the responsibilities his membership entails and has shut himself up in his small intellectual world, and the vast treasures in the unseen world of spiritual truths are closed to his understanding. "And if your eye be single to my glory, your whole bodies shall be filled with light, and there shall be no darkness in you; and that body which is filled with light comprehendeth all things." (D&C 88:67.)

The gospel of Jesus Christ does have the right answers to the great soul-shaking questions which lie at the heart of human experience and existence, for it is indeed the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. And I bear humble testimony that I know it is true, the science of salvation, the power of God unto salvation, and I bear that testimony humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Harold B. Lee of the Council of the Twelve has been our concluding speaker. The Choir will now sing, "Still, Still With Thee," conducted by Elder Richard P. Condie.

The Choir sang the number, "Still, Still With Thee," Richard P. Condie conducting.

President David O. McKay:

As many of you know, and all who have been listening in should know, these services this morning have been on the air by radio and television all throughout these western states. Many of these stations will go off promptly at 12 o'clock, and we wanted them to hear the strains of music by the Tabernacle Choir, and I hope they have all enjoyed it. Thank you Brethren who have been so considerate to enable this program to be completed by the time that these stations turn off. We are glad our listening audience heard that wonderful anthem, so inspirationally and artistically rendered. We have all listened to it.

Brethren and sisters, in bringing to a conclusion this fourth session of the 129th Annual Conference of the Church, we express our sincere appreciation to the owners and managers of the many television and radio stations who have offered their facilities to us during this and previous sessions. The names of these stations were announced prior to the opening of our meeting. This morning this broadcast appeared on 27 television stations and has been heard over 11 radio stations. We are grateful for the attendance of all who are present in the Tabernacle, in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and other gatherings where this Conference is seen and heard.

We acknowledge the presence this morning of prominent persons. I am sure all will be pleased to know who many of these are, and we appreciate their interest, not in just attending, but also their interest in the welfare and advancement of the Church. We have them listed. These we have seen: Brother Wallace F. Bennett, United States Senator; Brother Frank E. Moss, United States Senator; Brother Arthur Watkins, who has been with us for these many years, formerly United States Senator; Brother David S. King, United States Congressman; Sherman B. Christensen, Judge of the Federal Court; Governor George Dewey Clyde of our own State; Lamont Toronto, Secretary of State; Mayor Adiel F. Stewart of Salt Lake City; Brother H. Aldous Dixon, United States Congressman; Educators, A. Ray Olpin, president of University of Utah; Ernest L. Wilkinson, Brigham Young University president; Daryl Chase, president of Utah State University; John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College; William P. Miller, president of Weber College; Floyd S. Holm, director of Snow College; Royden C. Braithwaite, president of the College of Southern Utah; M. Lynn Bennion, superintendent of Salt Lake City Schools; E. Allen Bateman, state superintendent of Public Instruction; Howard McDonald, president of Los Angeles State College; Brother Ezra Taft Benson, as you know, of the Council of the Twelve and Secretary of Agriculture; Arthur Bruhn of the Dixie College; and others; also bishops of wards, presidents of stakes, general officers of auxiliary organizations, and other Church officers. We are happy indeed to have you with us. You are welcome, and I know you have been thrilled with this great Conference.

This would be a good time, too, to make acknowledgement in the presence of all those listening in this morning of the gift of these beautiful flowers. Fifteen thousand sweet peas have come from the Indian Sunday School at Fort McDowell, Arizona, grown and picked by the Indian children. Think what that means! With all our hearts we express appreciation and thanks for these flowers bearing sweet messages of affectionate greeting and loyal support.

There are 5000 daffodils from the Puyallup Valley Daffodil Festival of Tacoma, Washington sent in cooperation with the presidency of the Tacoma Stake;

1200 calla lilies from the high priests of the Oakland-Berkeley Stake; 40 dozen gladiolas from the Ft. Myers Branch of the Southern States Mission, grown by Brother and Sister William Nychyk, who have 200 acres of gladiolas in Ft. Myers, Florida. The beautiful stocks have come from Arizona from the Phoenix, the East Phoenix, and the Phoenix North Stakes. Seventy-eight beautiful Easter plants have come from Paul Flint of the Kaysville Second Ward. Each plant contains several blossoms. Mary A. Persson of Woodland, California sent three dozen beautiful calla lilies.

We express appreciation of the effort put forth by members of these wards, branches, stakes and missions. Our thoughts and best wishes will be with them as we enjoy the beauty of their flowers during this annual Conference of the Church. We wish also to mention Brother and Sister Mart Jorgensen of the Granite Ward of this city, who have worked early and late in arranging and placing these thousands of flowers in vases. We thank the Tabernacle Ushers who have rendered service early and late in seating the great audiences, and we appreciate the cooperation of City officials—Chief W. Cleon Skousen, traffic officers, etc.—in handling increased traffic, the Fire Department, the Red Cross.

You will note that the ladies of the Tabernacle Choir are wearing blue blouses this morning, and the men blue shirts. This is necessary to obtain a better television picture, so this whole program has been arranged for the hundreds of thousands of listeners in this morning. The singing, so inspirational to us all, is from our own Tabernacle Choir, Richard P. Condie conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. To all the members of the Choir we express appreciation for their time, talent, and particularly the spirit with which they sang these beautiful anthems.

We shall now be dismissed by Elder Harold I. Bowman, formerly president of the Spanish-American Mission, after which this Conference will stand adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Elder Harold I. Bowman, formerly president of the Spanish-American Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The Sunday afternoon session of the great Conference convened at 2:00 p.m., Sunday, April 5, with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the meeting.

The Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir furnished the choral music for this meeting.

President David O. McKay:

We shall begin this service by the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Thanks Be To God," with Elder Jay E. Welch conducting. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Asael T. Sorensen, formerly president of the Brazilian Mission.

The Choir sang "Thanks Be To God," Jay E. Welch conducting.

Elder Asael T. Sorensen, formerly president of the Brazilian Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "The King of Glory," Sister Jessie Evans Smith as soloist, conducted by Richard P. Condie.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

Frequent reference has been made throughout this conference by previous speakers to the importance of training youth. Several messages have been directed specifically to the young people of the Church. I should like to say a few words on this important theme.

Our children are our most precious possessions. They are treasures of eternity. None of them should be lost. Our Father's glory is in their salvation. As a Church we have great opportunity to reach these young people; and as individuals—teachers and officers—we have a great responsibility in teaching them correct principles.

Emphasizing the opportunities of the Church in this regard, Paul wrote to the branch at Corinth: "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors, and teachers;

"For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ;

"Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." (Ephesians 4:11-13.)

Fitness of American Youth

On November 21, 1957, the President of the United States appointed the President's Council on Youth Fitness, composed of the Secretary of the Interior as Chairman, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson, who sits here with us this afternoon, the Secretary of Labor, and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

He said it was the duty of this council to promote the efficacy of existing programs and the launching of additional programs which will enhance the fitness of American youth. He also established at that time the President's Citizens Advisory Committee on the Fitness of American Youth. That was in 1957.

On the thirty-first day of January of this year, the President issued another proclamation:

"Whereas the ongoing strength of our Nation depends upon the health of our young people; and

"Whereas we must always strive to improve the fitness of our youth by determined and coordinated efforts; and

"Whereas, in this challenging world, it is essential that our young people recognize their obligation to themselves, to their families, and to the Nation, to endeavor to keep themselves mentally, emotionally, spiritually, socially, and physically fit; and

"Whereas the President's Council on Youth Fitness has recommended that a National Youth Fitness Week be designated:

"Now, therefore, I, Dwight D. Eisenhower, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim the week beginning May 3, 1959, as National Youth Fitness Week.

"I request officials of the Government, and I urge parents, young people, and interested local and national organizations, to use all appropriate means during that week to promote programs and activities demonstrating the importance of youth fitness to the end that we may assure the continuing strength and well being of our people."

Over a quarter of a century ago another President of the United States made the following significant reference to the importance of training childhood and youth (I quote from President Hoover's address to the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, November 1, 1931, Washington, D. C.)

"These questions of child health and protection are a complicated problem requiring much learning and much action. And we need have great concern over this matter. Let no one believe that these are questions which should not stir a nation; that they are below the dignity of statesmen or governments. If we could have but one generation of properly born, trained, educated, and healthy children, a thousand other problems of government would vanish. We would assure ourselves of healthier minds in more vigorous bodies, to direct the energies of our Nation to yet greater heights of achievement."

President Eisenhower's council has as its scope not only "muscle making"

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

and "tendon stretching," as set forth by Shane McCarthy, Executive Director, but also the mental, moral, emotional, and spiritual development of youth. This youth program is most timely and fitting. I am glad that two of our General Authorities are connected with it—Elder Ezra Taft Benson, of the Council of the Twelve, and Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of the Seventy.

Recently one of my sons called attention to an address delivered by Major Mayer of the Brook Army Medical Center, Department of Psychiatry, San Antonio, Texas. It was delivered to the officers and supervisors of the San Francisco Naval Shipyard, and the Naval Radiological Defense Laboratory on the fourth of October, 1956. The major pointed out that the communists have gained control over many people in this world by the well-known devices of wars, purges, Siberian war camps, mass executions, etc. But he says more significant is the fact that for every person brought under the Russian banner by violence, many hundreds have been controlled without violence, and yet such control has been absolute.

Then he gives the result of his study of 4000 returning prisoners of war from Korea, and he finds a technique which has been termed "brainwashing." Before the communists could put their plan into effect they had to segregate these prisoners, which they did very simply by putting them into what was called "reactionary" camps. Note whom they put into these "reactionary" camps.

First, people who tried to be leaders or who showed what the communists called "poisonous individualism." If the soldier had the temerity to try to organize anything, off he went to the "reactionary" camp. He was obviously hopeless.

Second, those "reactionaries" or people with a higher education, who were considered automatically pretty reactionary unless they volunteered to cooperate, and some of these did.

Third, overtly religious people. The communists felt that they could not do much with them.

Out of these 4000 prisoners, what percent do you think they put in the "reactionary" camp? Five percent, and after getting rid of those, they began the process of "brainwashing." It is surprising how many soldiers knew so little about our way of life—the American way of life.

Once they had the leaders segregated, they invoked the techniques which have become universal throughout the communist world.

Youth's Responsibility

We are living in an age of gadgetry which threatens to produce a future generation of softness. Flabbiness of character more than flabbiness of muscles lies at the root of most of the problems facing American youth.

The youth of yesterday are carrying the responsibilities and directing the affairs of the world today. The youth of today will contribute to the destiny of the world tomorrow.

Never a day passes but gives some reminder of the fleetness of time and the brevity of life—childhood—youth—maturity—old age. In childhood there is no past—no future—happy in the present—heaven lies about him, and it is all for him.

Youth—beautiful—sweet—rash—inexperienced! In the words of Longfellow:

"How beautiful is Youth! How bright it gleams
With its illusions, aspirations, dreams!
Book of Beginnings, Story without End,
Each maid a heroine, and each man a friend!"

Then comes manhood with all its responsibilities, duties, failures, successes, each spending his time and worry on how much he can get, instead of how much he can give to this world and make it better. Before he knows it old age is upon him. "The easiest thing for our friends to discover in us, and the hardest thing for us to discover in ourselves is that we are growing old." But of one thing we are keenly aware—that

"Years rush by us like the wind
We see not whence the eddy comes,
Nor whitherward it is tending,
And we seem, ourselves, to witness their flight
Without a sense that we are changed.

Yet time is beguiling man of his strength
As the winds rob the trees of their foliage."

(Sir Walter Scott's "Woodstock")

The President's Council on Youth Fitness should be commended in recommending that a National Youth Fitness Week be designated. By so doing they recognize that in this challenging world it is essential that our young people be aware of their obligations to themselves, to their families, and to the nation. In this recognition they endeavor to keep themselves mentally, emotionally, spiritually, socially, and physically fit.

I. Responsibility of Parents

Parents have a responsibility in this education. Youth needs guidance, direction, and proper restraint. "Let thy child's first lesson be obedience, and the second will be what thou wilt," said Benjamin Franklin. A child learns this lesson early at his mother's knee—sometimes across his mother's knee. The child should learn early that the world is not created for him alone; that he has an obligation to others; that he owes his parents, particularly, a debt unpayable except in only one way—in living a life that will honor his name and bring joy to them in their old age. He should learn that "He ought to be true for the sake of the folks who think he is true.

He should never stoop to a deed that his folks think he would not do.

If he is false to himself, be the blemish but small,

He has injured his folks, he has been false to them all."

(Paraphrased from Edgar A. Guest.)

It was old King Lear who cried in his anguish, "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child." He is recreant, indeed, who for selfish indulgence would bring disgrace upon his parents, and upon the good name he bears.

Parents, too, have a responsibility in this training not to provoke children to wrath. They should be considerate not to irritate by vexatious commands or place unreasonable blame. Whenever possible they should give encouragement rather than remonstrance or reproof.

II. The Obligation of the Church

The obligation of the Church is to spend not just one week this coming month on Youth Fitness, but fifty-two weeks every year. Quorums and organizations have been set up in the Church, as our text says, for the "perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ;

"Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." (Ephesians 4:12-13.)

Now, let us just take a glimpse of the completeness of the Church organizations, and we shall find it discloses the fact that in the auxiliary organizations, quorums, and other groups, there is an army of officers and teachers ready to guide and direct youth in the proper way.

In the Sunday School for example, there are 82,449 officers and teachers, having under their charge 664,750 people. Primary: 51,053 officers and teachers, having under their charge 290,789 children. YMMIA: 24,754 officers and teachers, and 178,766 youth under their direction. YWMA: 32,988 officers and teachers, and 194,094 girls under them. Aaronic Priesthood: 28,837 officers and teachers, having 86,176 youth. Foreign missionaries: 5,512, and stake missionaries, 5,934, or 11,446 missionaries. Or a total of 231,527 officers and teachers in the Church who first of all should be exemplars. "Children have more need of models than of critics." No officer or teacher should be continued in office who persists in the obnoxious use of tobacco. The elder who hesitates to teach the Word of Wisdom is shirking his duty. He who fails to live it robs himself of strength of body and strength of character to which he is entitled.

Resisting Temptation

Truth is loyalty to the right as we see it; it is courageous living of our lives in harmony with our ideals; it is always power. With the ideals of right living before him, no member of the Church can continually violate the Word of Wisdom with impunity.

In this old world, the easiest way

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

seems to be the indulgent way. If a person has the least desire or inclination to drink tea and coffee or to smoke cigars, temptations to indulge the appetite are on every hand. At parties, during social calls, at chance introductions or friendly visits, in restaurants or trains, indulgence in these stimulants and narcotics is not only encouraged but also too often urged. Under such influence and environment, the easy way is to yield and become one of the crowd. But not one of these officers, 231,527 of them, should ever yield to that easy way. One never develops character by yielding to wrong. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life. . . ." (Rev. 2:7.) Strength comes by resisting!

We are living not only in a commercial age, but also in a nicotine age, and viciously the cigaret habit is fastening itself upon the human race. Government, medical, and other statistics are constantly warning us of the enormous strides that this insidious enemy to health and morals is making; but we little realize how active and potent are the forces at work to foster this and kindred vices, and all for commercial gain.

In "Habits that Handicap," Charles B. Towne, a quarter of a century ago, explains how "salesmen and demonstrators a few years ago were employed by manufacturers to go throughout China 'to show the people how to smoke cigarettes.' It is estimated that as a result of this campaign, one half of the cigaret consumption in the world is in China. It is little wonder, when we learn that because of cheap labor twenty cigars could be sold for a penny!" The author also makes this remarkable statement: "I consider that cigarette smoking is the greatest vice devastating humanity today because it is doing more than any other vice to deteriorate the race."

Think of the effect of an army of officers and teachers, with hundreds of thousands of youth under their care, not one of whom should ever put a cigaret in his or her mouth! What a potent example! The voice of the Church will ever be raised against the increasing tendency among men and women to stain their lives with nicot-tine. Especially does it deplore this growing evil among women. Heretofore, virtuous Anglo-Saxon womanhood has been above this indulgence, and has therefore been a restraining and uplifting influence on men. Now, this influence is being subjected to the insidious lure of the cigaret; and mothers of men, around whom center the sweetest, purest, noblest sentiments of our lives, are contaminating their sweetness and purity by indulgence in one of man's vices. The more woman becomes like man, the less he will respect her; civilization weakens as man's estimate of woman lessens.

That it is woman's right to indulge in this habit, we do not question; yet, we lose some of that sweet respect and admiration for women when we see them walk deliberately into mire holes that have heretofore besmeared only men. It is difficult to conceive that any mother would arrogate to herself the thought that staining her lips with tobacco would add to her dignity as mother, or increase the admiration and pride that children hold for true motherhood.

The mission of the Church is to proclaim the truth of the restored gospel, to uplift society that people may mingle more amicably one with another; to create in our communities a wholesome environment in which our children may find strength to resist temptation and encouragement to strive for cultural and spiritual attainment. It is the binding duty of leaders of youth, and particularly mothers, by example to make ineffective the influence of designing men who would make profit out of their fellows who have fallen so low as to be slaves to vice and passions.

The restored gospel is a rational philosophy that teaches men how to get happiness in this life and exaltation in the life to come. The mission of the Church is to establish the kingdom of God upon the earth, "which is not a mythical but a real kingdom," says a prominent writer not of the Church. "It is a body of people dominated by ideals of productivity, which is mutual service. We do not strive for the things which satisfy but for the moment and then leave a bad taste. We strive for the things which build us up, and enable us and our children to be strong, to flourish, and to conquer. We strive to make ourselves worthy to receive the world by fitting ourselves to use the world more productively than others. We believe that obedience to God means obedience to the laws of nature, which are but the manifestations of his will; and we try by painstaking study to acquire the most complete and exact knowledge of that will in order that we may conform ourselves to it." (Thomas Nixon Carver.)

III. Power of Example

To live an upright life, to conform to high ethical standards, is the responsibility and duty of every teacher of the land. Greater than this is the responsibility of the religious teacher, for in addition to his belief in the efficacy of ethical and moral precepts, the religious teacher assumes the responsibility of leading the youth into the realm of spirituality.

Example is the best and most effective way of teaching. Let us be exemplary in our speech. No true leader of the Church will ever profane the name of God or his Beloved Son, especially in the presence of his sons, or in the presence of any other young people. Profanity is a vice. We can set a proper example also by speaking well of others. The Lord has admonished us not to engage in backbiting. Another worthy example is exercising self-control, controlling our temper by not speaking angrily in the home. Let calmness be characteristic of our home life.

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord:" said Paul, "for this is right.

"Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

"That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

"And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." (Ephesians 6:1-4. Italics added.)

To this admonition of Paul, we add the word of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph as follows:

"And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

"For this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized. . . .

"And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord." (D&C 68:25-28.)

The training of youth is an obligation, first, upon the parents; next, upon teachers in the Church, in auxiliaries and quorums, in the missionary field, proclaiming the gospel wherever they may be called, and upon all the citizens whether in the Church or out of the Church. It is one of the obligations to which our attention is now called by the President of the United States who has placed the responsibility upon his cabinet, who have appointed a citizens' committee, and asking the entire nation to combine in this great educational campaign.

Fellow workers, may inspiration from on High be given each of us to discharge our responsibilities throughout this Church in training the youth, not only during Youth Training Week throughout this land but always, having in mind God's saying found only in this revealed Church: "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

God help us to be true instruments in his hands in accomplishing this divine ideal, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Hanks, will you come forward please. Elder Marion D. Hanks will now speak to us and he will be followed by Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER MARION D. HANKS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

With you I rejoice in this forthright and impressive statement by President David O. McKay of our interest and our position in a great national program. My earnest and humble prayer is that we who have influence with the young may proceed from this conference throughout the Church to give adequate emphasis to the great responsibility of developing fitness in our young. I think, if we do we may expect three great results: that, first, much good will come to the nation, and the nations, of which we are citizens; second, that the missionary work of the Church will receive great impetus through the marvelous example of the influence of the program of the Church in the lives of its young; and third, that the Church itself and its people may profit measurably by a renewed dedication to following the direction of the Lord and the leadership of the brethren in providing opportunities for development in every aspect of the personality in our young.

Early this week our seven-year-old daughter, leading our family in prayer, thanked God for her and our eyes and our ears and our mouths, and asked the Lord to bless us that we could say good things through our mouths, and because she knew her daddy had to talk that morning to some people not of the Church, she prayed that he would be able to explain the gospel understandably to them. I echo her great appreciation for God's gifts and her earnest petitions also.

A time ago I had the privilege of going to a university campus to participate in what they called "Religion in Life Week." Their theme, which I was to treat at the beginning of the week, was "Something Missing." I walked about the campus and into some of the buildings in the period preceding the appointed hour, and in a certain building where there were advertisements placed by students, I saw this written, line by line as I shall repeat the words:

For Sale
1929 Ford
Good body and fenders

See _____

And I had the idea which permitted me to treat the theme, "Something Missing." The car looked all right, I suppose. It may have seemed adequate from the exterior appearance to fulfil its purposes, but in fact, it was not. Something was missing, and that something was the chief element, the motivating power.

As President McKay spoke to the missionaries of the Church Friday night, I thanked God in my heart that over a large part of my life I have been blessed to serve on that interesting frontier where the Church meets the world—in the missionary cause. I rejoiced last evening as he talked of the wonderfully fine, loyal, intelligent people of integrity in the world, because though I seek premier position in few things in this world, I would not want to be second in my appreciation of the wonderful people there are who are not of us and not like us, but who are good and decent and honest and live to the light they have received. But I confess that much as I have learned to love them, and as honest as is my respect for them and their integrity, I have recognized . . . that in them there is something missing, and time and again I have had the blessing, with many of you, of attempting to bear witness to them of what that something is.

Why do they miss it? Why do they not enjoy it? Perhaps because they have not been taught. Perhaps because they have a seemingly satisfactory circumstance in life. Perhaps because though they may sense they miss something, the pressures and problems and influences of their lives keep them from responding, from being willing to pay the price.

I read with some of you some time ago in an eastern newspaper a little article which had no prominent place, but which represented something meaningful. It was the story of a fire in one of the clothing districts in New York City. It told of the death in this fire of more than a dozen people—fifteen, as I recall, and one sentence from the latter part of the short article was impressive and important to me. It said that these people had perished within easy access of an escape door, but had not used it, rather had huddled together and had died in the middle of the floor because of “smoke and fear.” I have wondered if some one of the fifteen or so who died had been conscious enough of the door, if he had known of it and realized its importance he might have led the others through it to life.

And I have thought a good deal more, as perhaps you will in contemplation, about what may have happened in that clothing factory. Apparently they had been sitting within easy access of that door, some of them, at least, for years, yet had paid no heed to it. It had not apparently meant much to them, and in their hour of extremity they were not able to find it.

There are many wonderful people in the world for whom I have personal respect and love, and whose intelligence and integrity I consider at least equal to our own, in terms of what they are willing to do for what they believe. Yet I testify with all my heart that there is something here for the finest of them, but it requires a consciousness that not all is well, that there is something to be had in the world besides social competence or other of the earthly pursuits which satisfy the ambitions of men.

“Smoke and fear” are everywhere about us. I read again this morning, at an early hour, out of the eighth chapter of First Nephi, and then in the subsequent explanatory chapter, the vision of Lehi. You remember the chief symbols—the tree representing the tree of life, or the love of God; the path to it; the rod by which one holding fast could reach it, and the chasm; the large and spacious building on the other side; the mists of darkness, of vapor, rising from the river of filth to overcome those who would try to reach the tree. Do you remember these words? An exceeding great mist of darkness came up and obscured the path, while across it the great spacious building was filled with people, old and young, male and female, their manner of dress exceeding fine, and who were in the attitude of mocking and pointing their fingers toward those who had come and were partaking of the fruit. Some of those who had tasted it were ashamed because of those who were scoffing at them, and they fell away into forbidden paths and were lost. Note these words in the twelfth chapter of First Nephi: “. . . the mists of darkness are the temptations of the devil, which blindeth the eyes, and hardeneth the hearts of the children of men, and leadeth them away into broad roads, that they perish and are lost.

“And the large and spacious building, which thy father saw, [said the angel to Nephi], is vain imaginations and the pride of the children of men.” (1 Nephi 12:17-18.)

My testimony and witness and the assurances of my heart are that though there are wonderfully fine people all about us, with whom I have the occasional privilege of association, some of whom I have the blessing of attempting to teach, and to many of whom I have the privilege of bearing witness, and while I have great respect for what they represent and are, yet there is something missing in them if they have not found willingness to realize that within easy access is a door leading to life, and that the Savior stands there and knocks, but they must open and walk through.

I have been deeply blessed by the great strong statements of the brethren this conference reaffirming that there is something in the gospel and Church of Jesus Christ which will bless the lives of the very finest of men who do not have it, and who therefore have something missing.

To conclude, I mention that such a sermon as President Richards delivered this morning is sometimes greeted by some of the people of whom I have spoken, with murmurings as to arrogance and smugness, with some objection on the basis of lack of goodwill, even sometimes, they say, lack of Christianity, in such a statement. I say, and humbly, that though the prophets were good and compassionate men who loved brotherhood and goodwill, yet in every instance they testified that there is a way, that men must follow that way and obey the commandments of God. We could proceed from the beginning to the end of the sacred records, but I choose just one as the example, and this, section 52 of the Doctrine and Covenants, where the Prophet, under the inspiration of God, encouraging and suggesting compassion and love and brotherliness, and prayer and humility and every other virtue, also had something else to say:

"Wherefore he that prayeth, whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me if he obey mine ordinances.

"He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek and edifieth, the same is of God if he obey mine ordinances." (D&C 52:15-16.)

I thank God for the blessing of the gospel, of some understanding of it, and of certain witness that it is the very plan of God, and that they who speak for God are his servants in this day, as anciently, which I say, and which witness I bear, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of Seventy has just addressed us. We shall now hear from Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brethren and sisters and friends: Humbly, gratefully, and prayerfully I approach this assignment and face this great audience and the unseen audience of thousands more. Since listening to the inspiring address of President McKay I have felt impressed to leave in my pocket a manuscript which I had intended to present as my small part of this conference.

I would like to say just a word about youth, if I may, the theme which the President has so impressively emphasized in our hearing by his inspiring address. With all my heart I respond to this great message of the president, prophet, seer, and revelator of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. And I hope and pray that leaders of youth everywhere who were fortunate enough to hear his message, or will be fortunate enough to read it, will heed the counsel given therein.

I love the youth of the Church and of this great country. I know that our future as a nation, as a people, and our future as a Church depends very largely upon our young people.

I rejoice as I look into the faces of the leaders of youth who have been called to represent the Church. I was thrilled as we met at Camp David in the mountains north of Washington and found that Elder Marion D. Hanks had been appointed a member of the Citizens' Advisory Committee of the President's Council on Youth Fitness, already referred to by President McKay. We have a group of great leaders in the Church who have been assigned to work with young people, and I think nowhere in all the world will you find a finer youth program than we have right here in the Church.

Everywhere I go I hear praise of the youth program of the Mormon Church, and I am sure that the praise is well merited. I have thrilled with the recent series of articles, cards, and displays on the general subject, "Be Honest with Yourself." It is our appeal to the young people of the Church to adhere strictly to the basic, eternal concepts which make for the good life. It is an appeal for them to live clean, upright lives, to adhere to those basic principles which their parents and their grandparents and their great-grandparents adhered to, and upon which they build in this western land.

It is my hope and prayer, my brethren and sisters, that those of us who have responsibility for leadership, among the youth of Zion particularly, will have the courage and the good common sense to speak frankly and honestly with our young people, that they might know what the Church expects of them, that they might know what is best for them as citizens of this great land, and citizens of the kingdom of God.

Now, what is it that we seek for our young people? It has been said that they are the greatest group of young people in all the world. I am sure they are the greatest in opportunity of any group of young people anywhere. No group of youth has ever had richer opportunities than our young people have today. What do we seek for them? I have concluded that there are four essential things that we seek for them.

First of all, we want them to be happy. "Men are, that they might have joy." There is no happiness in sin. Wickedness never was happiness. There are no shortcuts to happiness. It pays to live the good life. It pays to heed the counsel of one's faithful parents and the teachers of youth. It pays to heed the counsel and the instruction given by the General Authorities of the Church. If our young people would be happy then they must adhere to the eternal, basic principles and concepts of our belief and follow the advice given them by the leadership of the Church.

Secondly, we want them to be successful in their chosen field of life's work, whatever that field may be so long as it is honorable. We would like to see them excel. The Lord wants them to excel, and he will help them. I am convinced, my young brethren and sisters, that while the world may not live our standards, I am confident in my own heart from observation, experience, and broad contact with the world, that the world is willing to pay for the services of young Latter-day Saint men and women who are willing to adhere strictly to the standards and ideals of the Church. If a young man and woman were thinking only of getting ahead materially or financially in their chosen field, it still pays to live the standards of Mormonism. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose by adhering strictly to the standards which you have been taught from childhood, and which the Church emphasizes today.

Thirdly, we hope that our youth will develop a love for freedom and become good citizens of this great Christian nation. We hope that our youth will develop in their hearts a conviction, a testimony, that this is not just another nation, not just one of a family of nations, but a nation with the responsibility of a great mission to perform for liberty-loving people everywhere. We hope they will realize that the Constitution of this land was established by men whom the God of heaven raised up unto that very purpose. Our young people have a responsibility as citizens of this land to see to it that the basic concepts, and principles, and ideals, upon which this great Christian nation has been established are preserved, and strengthened, and safeguarded.

Fourthly, and most important of all and really all-inclusive, we hope that the youth of the Church will live so that eventually they will be able to go to the house of the Lord with a choice companion, and receive the priceless blessings which are in store for the faithful there. And we hope that they will then continue to live worthily so as to eventually be exalted in the celestial kingdom of our Heavenly Father.

Yes, we want them to have a good time. We want them to be happy. We want them to succeed in their chosen fields. We want them to become good citizens. We want them to become good fathers and mothers. We want them to establish happy homes, and in order to do that they must live good lives. They must keep themselves clean and pure.

I thrilled as I listened to Sister Jessie Evans Smith sing the solo part of that lovely song this afternoon: "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." Our young people must lead clean lives—clean in their actions, clean in their thoughts. This means that they cannot indulge promiscuously in so-called petting and necking. It means that they should look very carefully at a common practice which we find on American dance floors today of close bodily contact—cheek to cheek dancing—which I think, my brethren and sisters, has in it real danger.

I think our young people want to know this. My advice to them would be not to engage in these promiscuous relationships, these close and intimate contacts, including cheek to cheek dancing on the ballroom floor, whether it be at a Church dance, a public dance, or wherever it might be. I urge that they never do anything, on the dance floor or off the dance floor, that they would be ashamed to have their own fathers and mothers witness.

If they are wise, our young people will reserve for the marriage covenant those sweet and intimate associations. They will reserve such intimacies for their companions for eternity. Such a course is pleasing to our Heavenly Father and will bring peace and happiness—eternal happiness.

I know this may seem strong doctrine for some. I stress it because I believe that the young people of the Church want to know. I believe they are entitled to know. I believe it is best for them.

In all your relationships, my young friends, when in doubt then do not enter into the act or practice. In fact, our young people should not enter into any activity if there is any doubt as to its propriety. If you are living right, my young brethren and sisters, you will have the prompting of the Spirit which will tell you whether it is right or wrong. Do not fail to heed that prompting, as I hope you will heed the counsel of your own parents and your leaders in the auxiliaries.

Just one thought in closing: As you resolve in your hearts to live the standards of the Church—and you cannot afford to do otherwise, from a material standpoint, from a spiritual standpoint, from the standpoint of getting ahead in the world—I hope you will remember that your prescribed standards are a part of a great body of truth—the gospel of Jesus Christ—revealed truth from heaven. Please remember that no discovery of the future, in the laboratory or anywhere else, no other truth will ever be in conflict with the teachings of the gospel. Truth is always consistent. It is never in conflict. The gospel encompasses all truth. When doubts come to your mind because of instructions you may receive in the classroom, I urge you to remember that time is always on the side of truth, and Mormonism is truth.

God bless you and protect you and guide you, and give you the courage to live the gospel, to maintain the standards of the Church, so that the blessings which have been promised to the faithful may be yours eternally, and here in mortality also, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve has just concluded speaking to us. The Choir and Congregation will now sing, "O Say, What Is Truth?" conducted by Assistant Chorister, Jay E. Welch. After the singing, Elder William J. Critchlow, Jr. will speak to us.

---

The Tabernacle Choir and the congregation sang the hymn, "O Say, What Is Truth?"

President David O. McKay:

Elder William J. Critchlow, Jr., Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder A. Theodore Tuttle.

ELDER WILLIAM J. CRITCHLOW, JR.

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

"The man that hath no music in himself, nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils. The motions of his spirit are dull as night, and his affections dark as Erebus." (Merchant of Venice, Act V, Sc. 1.) Certainly some of the loveliest, and I am sure the sweetest, sermons that we have heard in this conference have been rendered by this choir, and the choir we heard yesterday.

Six months ago I was the president of a large Ogden stake which, I was told, would be divided at our next stake conference, and that I would be retired as its president. Before that conference arrived, I came to general conference, and there I found myself suddenly and unexpectedly retreated instead of retired, and I have traveled several thousand miles on those treads to the stakes of Zion to keep stake conference appointments. I thought the people in my stake were the best and the happiest people in the world. I still think so, but in my travels I have found thousands of people just like them. I found them in Phoenix, in Denver, in Salt Lake, and in the Big Horn. Wherever I have gone I have found these people, so I will have to revise my thinking and say that the South Ogden Stake people are just some of the finest people in the world.

These people have certain characteristics in common. Friendliness is one of them; humility is surely another; the hospitality of their leaders is another which I have greatly enjoyed. But the outstanding characteristic, it seems to me, is happiness. Their countenances literally radiate happiness. They seem to have left all of their worries and troubles at home. They obviously came to conference to feast, spiritually, of course, and they seem to delight in paying their devotions.

They should be happy. They should be the happiest people in the world. I believe they are the happiest people in the world because they observe our Father's laws of happiness.

Our Heavenly Father loves us. I love my children dearly, but his love for us, his spirit children, is infinite, divine.

His announcement of our coming to this earth made his children extremely happy. "... the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy," (Job 38:7) so we are told, and we soon learned that, "Adam felt that man might be; and men are, that they might have joy." (2 Nephi 2:25.) He provided for our happiness here on earth by giving us a plan for happiness. We call it the "gospel plan." It comprises a number of laws, some ordinances, and a few principles which if obeyed will bring a state of blessedness to his children. And blessedness, my brothers and sisters, is a deep, refined joy or happiness.

An example of his laws of happiness is his law of health which we call the "Word of Wisdom."

"And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall have health in their naval, and marrow to their bones; . . .

"And shall run and not be weary, . . ." (D&C 89:18-20.)

A young man came to a bishop in my stake and said, "Bishop, I have observed the Word of Wisdom all the days of my life, yet I do not enjoy good health. Why doesn't the Lord respect his promise?"

This wise bishop replied, "Sit down, we'll read the law together." Then as he turned the pages to find the law, he said, "I haven't seen you in priesthood meeting this year, nor have I observed you in Sacrament meeting for a long, long time, nor have I had your name on the tithing list for several years."

"I know, Bishop," the young man replied, "I'm not faithful in all things, but I have faithfully kept the Word of Wisdom, and I have not received the promised blessing."

"Here," said the bishop, "is the law." He read it slowly.

"And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, . . ." (Idem, 18.)

No need to read farther! In kindness he explained, "Our Heavenly Father has commanded us to pay tithing, to go to Sacrament and to priesthood meetings. You apparently have not understood the law and, therefore, have not fully complied."

Like this young man, others may not understand these laws of happiness. Ignorance is no excuse for violating civil laws; perhaps our Heavenly Father may not accept it as an excuse for violating his laws.

Another law, apparently misunderstood by some is the Sabbath day law.

"Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

"Six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work:

"But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: . . ." (Ex. 20:8-10.)

"... thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day"; (D&C 59:9.)

I have seen our members, along with other people, in stores purchasing supplies and food on Sunday. May I ask, with what consistency can one go to a store on Sunday in violation of this law, purchase food, and then place it on a table, and ask Heavenly Father to bless it?

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

Another example is his financial law—the law of the tithe.

“... prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it” (Mal. 3:10.)

“... for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming.” (D&C 64:23.)

Another is his priesthood law.

“And also all they who receive this priesthood receiveth me, . . .

“For he that receiveth my servants receiveth me;

“And he that receiveth me receiveth my Father;

“And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father’s kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.” (Ibid., 84: 35-38.)

Still another example is his marriage law—celestial marriage law.

“Therefore, if a man marry him a wife in the world, and he marry her not by me nor by my word, and he covenant with her so long as he is in the world and she with him, their covenant and marriage are not of force when they are dead, and when they are out of the world; . . .” (Ibid., 132:15.)

There is another law, which I heard President McKay quote this afternoon. I call it the “law for the parents.”

“... inasmuch as parents have children . . . that teach them not . . . repentance, faith in Christ, . . . baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost . . . when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

“For this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion. . . .” (Ibid., 68:25-26.)

There are other laws designed for our happiness, obedience to which will bring that deep-refined joy which we might call blessedness. But underlying all of these laws is one master law, “... irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated—

“And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated.” (Ibid., 130:20-21.)

My son told me about a man who declined to join our Church because, he said, “Observance of the laws (recited above) would deprive me of my happiness. I like,” he continued, “a cup of coffee at breakfast, another cup mid-morning to pick me up. After dinner in the evening I like to relax with my pipe and newspaper. On Sunday I like to get out under blue skies with my fishing pole in summer, and in winter I enjoy a late, lazy breakfast with the Sunday paper. If I paid a tithe of my earnings on top of my income tax, doctor bills, instalments on my home and car—well, I’m afraid I’d be jailed for writing checks with insufficient funds.”

What this man implied, and implied quite effectively, was this: I have no faith, no assurance that God will reward me with anything better than a pipe or cup of coffee for keeping his laws.

“... O ye of little faith?” (Luke 12:28.)

“And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments.” (D&C 59:21.)

“... according to men’s faith, it shall be done unto them.” (Ibid., 52:20.)

“... without faith it is impossible to please him: . . .” (Heb. 11:6.)

Faith is the first principle of our gospel. If this man could have seen the happy countenances of thousands of members in the stakes which I have visited and could he have heard, as I have heard, the testimonies of those men and wives who have come into Church activity, he surely would have paused before he spoke so facetiously.

In contrast to this man’s lack of faith, let me tell you about a man who came one evening to a stake president and asked for baptism. I see that president in this congregation. This man stood in the president’s home, dressed in an army officer’s uniform of high rank. In answer to the president’s question, “What missionaries have been instructing you?” he replied, “None.” Then he explained that he supervised LDS men and women at Hill Air Force Base and found these people to be honest, industrious and happy. “My wife and I are religiously inclined, and we would like to be not only one with them but also one of them. We would like to be baptized."

I had an opportunity to interview this officer, and when I asked him if he understood the principles of the gospel, he replied, "I understand the tithing law, and I will observe it. Other laws I do not understand, but we (wife and I) will conform. We want to be happy with you and one of you." He had faith. I think he found real happiness.

Now let me tell about another man who lectured brilliantly in Salt Lake City a dozen or so years ago. He was a silver-tongued orator who reportedly had lectured in nations around the globe and had more degrees behind his name than many of us could interpret.

The following day he visited in Ogden and was taken sightseeing up Ogden Canyon. Returning, he relaxed in the office of the president of the Ogden Chamber of Commerce where he remarked, "You Mormons are certainly a friendly, hospitable, and happy people. Will one of you tell me something of your philosophy of life?" His finger pointed to me, so I told him about our concept of God, why we were here, where we come from, and what we expected hereafter. I also quoted our Articles of Faith. When I had finished, he said in substance:

"My father was a minister. I, too, am a graduate of a school of divinity. But what I learned in that school, or rather what I did not learn, and what you have told me today confuses me. As a result I am what you would call an agnostic."

"Now," he continued, (and this is significant) "if what you believe—this philosophy of yours—makes you happy, then stick to it and live it. I tell you there is no happiness in unbelief. Your philosophy is interesting. It could be taught in colleges along with other philosophies and people would read it—if you would disassociate and leave Joseph Smith out of it."

My brothers and sisters this gospel plan which he called "our philosophy" is not a philosophy. It is truth. And Joseph Smith can no more be "disassociated" than can this earth be taken out of the solar system. He was fore-ordained before the foundations of this earth to head this the greatest of all dispensations, the Dispensation of the Fullness of Times.

I wish I could talk to that doctor again. I would tell him as I tell you that in my book I have added another Article of Faith which I call my 14th Article of Faith. This is it: (I'll put it in the singular, but if you accept it, you can make it plural).

"I believe that Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God; that he was visited by heavenly messengers, among them Peter, James, John, Elijah, Moses, and one Moroni who directed him to some hidden plates from which he translated the Book of Mormon. I also believe the Father and the Son appeared to him and that the Son instructed him."

Let me add another Article of Faith. Call it the 15th if you like.

"I believe that David O. McKay is a prophet of God; that he holds all of the keys, priesthood, and powers formerly held by all of the ancient prophets, which were later conferred upon Joseph Smith and through him to his successors down to President David O. McKay."

When Joseph Smith wrote the thirteen Articles of Faith, he might well have added another. This one would sum up nicely for me what I have hurriedly tried to say and would account for the happiness that I have discovered in the countenances of our people. I quote the Prophet:

"Happiness is the object and design of our existence; and will be the end thereof, if we pursue the path that leads to it; . . ." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 255.)

I have tried to outline that path—obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel. Let the Prophet continue, ". . . he never has—He never will institute an ordinance or give a commandment to His people that is not calculated in its nature to promote that happiness which He has designed, . . ." (Ibid., p. 256.)

My brothers and sisters, I think the ultimate in happiness will be ours if and when we attain exaltation in his celestial kingdom.

I hope that I and I hope that you, as we travel life's highway, may enjoy the happiness, even the blessedness that will be ours if we obey these laws, and may we later earn and enjoy the ultimate in blessedness—exaltation in his kingdom, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder William J. Critchlow, Jr., Assistant to the Twelve, has just addressed us. We shall now hear from Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER A. THEODORE TUTTLE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

Once upon a time, so the fable goes, there was a wise monarch who wanted to teach his subjects an important and vital lesson. He said: "Make me a man." They acquired the finest artist in the kingdom who painted the picture of a man on canvas. They took it to the king, but he was displeased and repeated: "Make me a man." They tried other media, sculpture in wood and stone, but to each the king said: "Make me a man." Finally they caught the vision of the king's instructions. They found a man, tattered, degraded. They bathed him, shaved him, dressed him, taught him, and presented him to the king. The king was pleased that they had learned this lesson and said these words: "Next to the God who creates is the individual who saves another."

Brothers and sisters, you and I are engaged in and dedicated to the work of saving men's souls. In view of what President McKay has said about youth fitness, I would like to address my remarks to that vast corps of teachers in the Church who are saving men's souls, in the hope that instruction might improve in the Church. For if one teacher increases the level of his competence and ability, that class will improve; and if many teachers improve, all classes in the ward will. And if each of us improves the instruction, the whole Church will grow in strength and power and will be blessed. Remember that no class can rise higher than its teacher.

The second reason is, that I would like to lead all of us to the source of unfailing inspiration, the Lord Jesus Christ. In the Savior's teachings, we find the finest methods used that are known today. We see his objective of changing man's behavior clearly set forth. We find the Savior being acclaimed an authority, because he knew his subject, and likewise we find a knowledge of students put to use in a beautiful way.

Teachers, if you would improve your teaching, use and adapt illustrations and examples to fit the present knowledge and experience of your students. May I illustrate:

We find in the teachings of the Savior such words as camels, sheep, salt, light, candles, fish, leaven, hens and chickens, lilies, sparrows, things that people knew about and had experience with. He likened the abstract ideas of his teaching to these concrete things that people knew about. His new ideas were related to known facts.

Secondly, if you would become a better teacher, learn to answer questions the way the Savior did. He gave direct answers, but equally as often he would ask another question of his hearers. You recall this instance: "Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? . . .

"But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?"

"Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny.

"And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?

"They say unto him, Caesar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." (Matt. 22:17-21.)

I would like to give another example which shows many things about teaching. You recall this instance: "And behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

"He said unto him, [note the technique] What is written in the law? how readest thou?"

"And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

"And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

"But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

"And Jesus answering said: A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves . . ." and then related the story of the Good Samaritan. (Luke 10:25 ff.)

Now, notice the teaching technique. Teachers, you who make up this vast corps of 231,000, and others, for we are all teachers regardless of our position, whether it be president or other officer—notice what the Savior said.

" . . . love thy neighbour as thyself." (Matt. 22:39. Italics added.)

He might just as well have said, "Love thy neighbor as thy wife or husband or son or daughter or uncle or aunt," but he gave it universal application, when he said "thyself," for each man loves himself. Each man, however, does not have a wife, a son or a daughter, and thus would not have been included in the Master's teaching.

Here we find in the teachings of the Master, a blending of all of the techniques, methods, ideas, that will help us to be effective in teaching the gospel and in achieving the lofty ideals that President McKay has outlined for us to achieve.

Thirdly, if you would be a better teacher, teach by the Spirit. You recall that in the Doctrine and Covenants, the Savior said:

"And ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endowed with power, that ye may give even as I have spoken." (D&C 43:16.)

That is the thing that gives strength and power, meaning and life, to our otherwise weak efforts.

The fourth thing, (and I will mention it only briefly, because President McKay dealt with this) is to live your teachings. William E. Berrett, who is vice-president of Brigham Young University, once remarked that many years ago there was a Danish immigrant who taught his class. Though he spoke in broken English his life was such that you could warm your hands by the flame of his testimony.

Remember, teachers, you cannot give away that which you do not possess.

Study the life of the Master. You do not have to have a college degree to be an efficient teacher. But you do have to become acquainted with the life and teachings of the Master to be an effective teacher in the Church.

Teachers of the Church, there is an eternal extension of the power and influence of a good teacher. May we live so that we may teach by the Spirit, so that the youth of the Church might pattern their lives after the life of the Master.

I am grateful for his life and mission. He lives. He directs the brethren who direct this Church. This is my humble witness, and I bear it in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy. Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve will be our concluding speaker, and he need not notice the clock.

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The President is a very generous, wonderful man.

I never listen to the President of the Church except my mind goes back to section 21 of the Doctrine and Covenants. I would like to talk about that section for the moments that are given to me.

You remember that this section was given by revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith on the day of the organization of the Church. The people who were there assembled had come out of the various religions of the day, and were not accustomed to the procedures and principles that once had been known to the Saints and now were being restored. It, therefore, became necessary that the Lord announce anew the significance of having at the head of the Church a prophet, seer, and revelator.

Sunday, April 5

Second Day

For that reason, as the Lord gave this revelation, he made it known to those who were assembled that Joseph Smith as President of the Church was also prophet, seer, and revelator. It was a great lesson to the Church that now again the leadership of the Church should be vested in an inspired prophet of God and that this prophet should be the President of the Church.

Then he spoke directly to the membership of the Church and he said this:

"Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments [that is, the President of the Church] which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;

"For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, . . ." (D&C 21:4-5.)

Is not that a remarkable thing? That is the manner in which the Lord designated the President of the Church as his mouthpiece in these, the last days.

He gave us this commandment with a marvelous promise, and this is the promise:

"For by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory." (Idem, 6.)

We are living in perilous times. We are face to face with every kind of difficulty. In the midst of these times, would you like to have the assurance that the gates of hell will never prevail against you? In these perilous times, would you like to have the confidence that the very heavens will shake for your good? You may have these blessings by keeping this commandment.

"Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments, [the President of the Church], which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them walking in all holiness before me;

"For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth; . . ." (Idem, 4-5.)

This is my testimony to you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve has been our concluding speaker. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Phileon B. Robinson, formerly President of the Finnish Mission.

The singing, as you know, for this afternoon has been furnished by the members of the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ. We again express our deep appreciation to the members and officers of this world-famous organization. Truly, their music has been an inspiration to us this day, as always. They are practicing two or three times every week—no wonder their singing is so inspirational! Whenever anybody gives his or her time with a desire to bless others, the Lord will magnify his or her efforts and a whole body is blessed thereby.

The Deseret Sunday School Union Conference will convene in this building at seven o'clock tonight.

The Choir will sing, "Beautiful Savior," the benediction will be offered by Elder Phileon B. Robinson, and this Conference will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Tabernacle Choir sang "Beautiful Savior," after which the benediction was offered by Elder Phileon B. Robinson, formerly president of the Finnish Mission.

Conference adjourned until 10:00 a.m., Monday, April 6th.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

The Conference reconvened Monday Morning, April 6, at 10:00 o'clock a.m., with President David O. McKay presiding and conducting the services.

The choral music for this session was furnished by the Ricks College Choir, Chester W. Hill, Director. Frank W. Asper was at the organ console.

President David O. McKay:

At this, the beginning of the sixth session of the General Conference of the Church, at the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference, the Tabernacle is filled to overflowing and so also, we are informed, there are large-attendance, over-flow meetings in the Assembly Hall and the other adjoining buildings. We welcome all who are listening in and who are present at these meetings, and express appreciation for the presence of officials and educational leaders who are here, many of them, occupying the front seats.

The singing for this session and for the session this afternoon will be furnished by the Ricks College Choir, with Chester W. Hill conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ. We appreciate the presence of this large attendance of young people from the College at Rexburg, Idaho.

We shall begin these services by the Ricks College Choir rendering, "O Brother Man," conducted by Chester W. Hill. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Thomas S. Bingham, formerly president of the South Australian Mission.

The Ricks College Choir sang as the opening number, "O Brother Man."

Elder Thomas S. Bingham, formerly president of the South Australian Mission offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The opening prayer was just offered by Elder Thomas S. Bingham, recently released as president of the South Australian Mission.

The Ricks College Choir will now favor us with, "The Morning Breaks," conducted by Chester W. Hill.

"The Morning Breaks; The Shadows Flee" was sung by the Ricks College Choir.

President David O. McKay:

Before Joseph Anderson, clerk of the conference, presents some vital statistics and a brief report of conditions, I think it would be well for us to have in mind the fact that one hundred and twenty-nine years ago this morning in the house of Peter Whitmer, Sen., in Fayette, Seneca County, New York, six men bowed in solemn prayer to their Heavenly Father and proceeded in accordance with the previous commandment to organize the Church.

Each individual present was confirmed a member of the Church of Jesus Christ. Joseph Smith, Jun., was appointed prophet, seer, and revelator of the Church.

They administered the Sacrament. They reported that the Spirit of the Lord was manifest in a very great degree. Some of the brethren prophesied. All praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly.

There were others present on that occasion who became convinced of the truth and came forward shortly afterwards and were received into the Church. Among these were the Prophet's own father and mother, who were baptized and confirmed members. Also, Martin Harris came forward later. He had been a witness to the plates of the Book of Mormon and mortgaged his farm to pay for the printing of the Book of Mormon. The Book of Mormon had already been published in 1830.

Last Saturday evening the third session of this conference was held in this tabernacle, and in 167 Church buildings from coast to coast and in Canada. In attendance at the meeting there were 45,287 men and boys holding the priesthood. Brother Benjamin L. Bowring, president of the Los Angeles Temple, and President Edward L. Clissold, president of Oahu (Hawaii) Stake, spoke upon the great obligation of the Church to give opportunity to spread the gospel and give the millions who have passed beyond the opportunity to join the Church of Jesus Christ.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

We shall now listen to the vital statistical data and financial expenditures of the Church.

It will be well to have in mind while listening to this report that only a little over a century has passed since those six men by revelation organized the Church.

Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, then read statistical and financial data:

Elder Orval W. Adams of the Church Auditing Committee read the following report:

Salt Lake City, Utah,
April 3, 1959

President David O. McKay and Counselors,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Brethren:

We have reviewed the report of income and expenditures of the Corporation of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for the year 1958. Expenditures are well within the income of the Church. Expenses have been held below the figures budgeted and we have been assured that the Church is free from debt. We commend the personnel for the expert and careful manner in which the financial records are maintained, summarized, and audited.

Respectfully submitted,

Church Auditing Committee
Orval W. Adams and Harold H. Bennett

President David O. McKay:

Elder Joseph Anderson has just read the statistical data, financial expenditures, etc., relating to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Elder Orval W. Adams has reported for the Church Auditing Committee.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency will now present the General Authorities, the General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of the General Conference.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

My brothers and sisters:

A hundred and twenty-nine years ago, as President McKay has explained to us, six men performed in part the duties and exercised the powers and authority which we who are here today are called upon to exercise. As I have always said on such occasions, and there have been several, this is not a pro forma matter. You members of the Church who are here not only represent the Church but are, for the purpose of the sustaining of these officers, the Church. This is a constituent assembly. I urge each and every man and woman who votes on this occasion to have a full realization of the importance of the ordinance, if I may so term it, which we are now called upon to perform. May the Lord be with us.

ELDER HENRY D. MOYLE

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

We have already had quoted the passage of scripture with which I desire to start. "But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear." (Matthew 13:16.) And Matthew further tells us that "The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

"But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" (Ibid., 6:22-23.)

Matthew further says: "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." (Ibid., 5:19.)

To us the prophecy of Daniel has great significance, as was pointed out by President McKay in his inspired message to the world yesterday. Daniel says, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

"... and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." (Daniel 2:44-45.)

The world needs the restored Church and kingdom of Jesus Christ, of which David spoke. The world needs the help of those who have recognized and received the gospel of the kingdom. The world needs their inspiration and active participation in the affairs of life. We are an inspired people. That I know as well as I know that I live. We are responsible for the proper use of this inspiration. This inspiration is not confined to our spiritual lives but carries over into all temporal responsibilities, and included therein is our moral, our civic, our political, our social, our financial responsibilities. We stand ready to exercise this divine guidance together with the power of our priesthood in behalf of a neighbor, as well as in our own behalf. We look upon the children of our Heavenly Father as our brothers and sisters, no matter where they live, or what they believe, or what their ancestry may be. We cannot expect to do our full duty as we are inspired to do unless we can live and work in an environment of love, of peace, of freedom—freedom at home and throughout the world.

Plato has put into words that the spirit of freedom is not a matter of laws and constitutions. "Only he is free," Plato says, "who realizes the divine order within himself, the true standard by which a man can steer himself." And I say true standards, ideals that lift life up, mark the way of true progress. Such ideals followed will never permit our light to be extinguished.

Pericles said: "But we regard him who holds aloof from public affairs as useless." They called the useless man a "private" citizen, idiotes from which our word idiot comes. The citizens of the kingdom of God should set the pattern for the citizens of the kingdoms of men.

A reflective Roman traveling in Greece in the second century, A.D. said, "None ever thrived under democracy save the Athenians. They had self-control and were law-abiding." That is what Athenian education aimed at, to produce men who would be able to maintain a self-governed state because they were themselves self-governed, self-controlled, self-reliant. It is said of the Athenians, "We yield to none in independence of spirit and complete self-reliance."

This is not much different from conditions found in the Church in the Meridian of Time. Brother James L. Barker, in his history of the early Church, which is soon to be printed, writes: "In the Church organized by the Savior two important principles were reconciled—divine authority and individual liberty."

The Father sent his Son, Jesus Christ, into the world; the Son chose his apostles, gave them authority, and they chose the presiding elders, bishops, and other local officers, always seeking the guidance and approval of the Holy Spirit. In the Church of Jesus Christ there must always be this divine leadership. Any church without his leadership is not his, as President Stephen L. Richards so beautifully demonstrated yesterday. However, the Lord has always safeguarded human liberty. There can be no progress without liberty. The great purpose of this life is that man shall gain experience and strength in freely making his own choices. Divine guidance will be given, but man must be free to choose obedience or disobedience, otherwise his actions have no ethical or religious value. "God has always preserved freedom and the powers of self-government in man," wrote Irenaeus when he wrote against heresies in the third century.

"The Church organization carefully safeguarded this freedom," Brother Barker continues. "Nominations were made by authority," just as they have been made here this morning in our presence, and in which we have participated, "but the members of the Church were given the right to accept or reject those nominated. The Lord has never forced the acceptance of his prophets. If the Lord sends a prophet, he will be a prophet, even if no one accepts his message, but the Lord has at no time forced the acceptance of a prophet's message on the people; nor has he forced a prophet on the people as president of his Church, nor a bishop on his congregation."

"In the Church he organized, the members were an important part of the organization: they were free and responsible, because the Holy Ghost was not given to their leaders, the apostles, bishops, and elders, alone, but to every worthy member of the Church. Both leaders and members were free to obey or disobey the inspiration of the Spirit, and both were equally responsible for their individual choices and the consequences entailed by their choices. Thus each member of the Church was made, in part, responsible for the government and conduct of the Church," says Brother Barker.

We read in Acts of the council of Jerusalem: "Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch . . ." and the next verse is again repeated, "And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles and elders and brethren. . . ." (Acts 15:22-23.)

What is our position today? Take, for example, public affairs. I read recently a comment of one of our national statesmen, Adlai Stevenson, "Our condition has nothing to do with any de-iciency of technology or resources. It is a matter of people forgetting that political freedom can be sustained only by continuing individual commitment." As he continues: "The great German poet Goethe, who also lived through a crisis of freedom, said to his generation, 'What you have inherited from your fathers, earn over again for yourselves or it will not be yours.' We inherited freedom. We seem unaware that it has to be remade and re-earned in each generation of man."

Monday, April 6

Third Day

Stevenson says, "The natural government of man is servitude. Tyranny is the natural pattern of government." If that be true, it is in direct opposition to the government of God. "We do not slip into freedom or happiness. It is strenuously sought and earned."

When will we realize that the very power and success of US society demand more not less individual dedication for its citizenship. It is interesting to note that the concern of our leaders today is not expressed in terms of security but in terms of survival. What else but individual dedication can stay the Soviet assault on free civilization?

In an oft-quoted passage from Shakespeare there is a warning given which we might well heed:

"There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries."
(Julius Caesar, Act. IV, Sc. 3.)

When in the course of life one arrives at a fork in the way, a decision must be made and a course selected often results in a choice that later becomes completely irrevocable. President Mc-

Kay told us yesterday of the 231,000 teachers in the Church. I say they stand as watchmen at the crossroads to direct us aright in the course we pursue. Our decisions, once executed, can never be erased. This is because such selections introduce a new series of conditions, setting in motion events which cannot later be recalled. The good done, the evil accomplished, are all there. It is a faithful axiom that he who would not when he might, shall not when he would.

Happy is he who profits by the experiences of the past, like those of the Athenians in ancient times so that he may make right decisions in the present and face the future with confidence, divinely assured that his hope concerning things to come will have full and lasting realizations. Faith in Jesus Christ our Lord, and obedience to his restored gospel assures inevitably this glorious result—the enjoyment of that peace which passeth understanding now as in all prior time.

Let us all live in all that we do, guided and directed by the inspiration which comes to the faithful as a gift of the Holy Ghost. "But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear." (Matthew 13:16.)

May the Lord bless us all, I pray humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Henry D. Moyle of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Eldred G. Smith, Patriarch to the Church, will now speak to us.

ELDER ELDRED G. SMITH

Patriarch to the Church

I pray for an interest in your faith and prayers while I fulfil this assignment. Many of the brethren have already given my talk several times, nevertheless I feel that it is an important subject and can stand repetition.

In the beginning of this dispensation, on September 21, 1823, Moroni appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith. In that visit he quoted the prophecies of Malachi:

"For behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble; for they that come shall burn them, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. . . .

"... Behold, I will reveal unto you the Priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. . . .

"... And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers. If it were not so, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming." (Joseph Smith 2:37-39.)

Thus renewing this ancient promise which even the Jews at the time of Christ were looking forward to receive, this promise was fulfilled 123 years ago on April 3, 1836. Following a Sacrament service in the Kirtland Temple, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery retired behind the veil of the temple and after fervent prayer, there appeared to them the Lord Jesus Christ who accepted the Kirtland Temple and gave his approval. This temple had just previously been dedicated. (March 27, 1836.) Moses appeared and gave unto them the keys of the gathering of Israel. Elijah the prophet appeared to them and bestowed upon them the keys of the sealing power of the priesthood.

The Prophet Joseph Smith said this about the mission of Elijah:

"The spirit, power and calling of Elijah is, that ye have power to hold the key of the revelations, ordinances, oracles, powers and endowments of the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood and of the kingdom of God on the earth; and to receive, obtain, and perform all the ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God, even unto the turning of the hearts of the fathers unto the children, and the hearts of the children unto the fathers, even those who are in heaven." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 337.)

Again the Prophet Joseph Smith said: "What is this office and work of Elijah? It is one of the greatest and most important subjects that God has revealed. He should send Elijah to seal the children to the fathers, and the fathers to the children." (Idem.)

The mission of Elijah is to restore to earth the power, that whatsoever is sealed on earth will be sealed in heaven. This sealing power is not alone for the dead. The dead cannot receive these blessings unless there are those living who have performed these same sealing ordinances for themselves, first—that is, a wife to a husband and children to parents.

Without the coming of Elijah there would be no need for temples, there would be no sealing in marriage for time and eternity, no sealing of children to parents, no need for genealogy. There would be no sealing for the living or the dead. This is not for the dead alone, it is for the living first.

I testify that Elijah did come, and others have testified also, and we have heard other testimonies in this conference. In addition to the testimony of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and others currently, we have factual evidence that Elijah came. One year after Elijah's coming, in 1837, laws were passed in Great Britain compelling the preservation of duplicate records of the dead. In the 400 years preceding the coming of Elijah, there were catalogued by Mr. T. B. Thompson 192 British family histories. In just one hundred years after the coming of Elijah in 1836, there were 1,879 British family histories published.

In addition to the published family histories, about the only family record was one made in the old family Bible, such as the one I have here. This happens to be the family Bible of Hyrum Smith, my great-great-grandfather, the brother of Joseph Smith who was martyred in Carthage. In the middle of these old Bibles that we are all familiar with is a page for births, a page for deaths, a page for marriages; and that was about the extent of the family records which were kept at that time.

In 1844, just eight years after the coming of Elijah, the year of the martyrdom of Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith, the first organization for the purpose of the gathering together records of the dead, and compiling genealogical records, was formed in the city of Boston, Massachusetts—The New England Historical and Genealogical Society.

In 1869 The New York Genealogical and Biographical Society was organized. Since then literally hundreds of genealogical organizations have been organized all through the Atlantic Coast states and spreading all over Europe and the United States.

Instead of gathering the records in the old-time family Bibles, we now have special charts. Most of you are familiar with the pedigree charts which we now use. In the old family Bible, the records that were given were, first, a record of themselves and then of their posterity. Today we make a record of ourselves and then our ancestors, going back in the other direction. The living come first in this work. Many have said to me, and I hear the expression often, "My genealogy is all done. My mother did our genealogy," or "An aunt did our genealogy," or "Our father did our genealogy." But I do not think that very many of such people, if they will investigate and fill the charts similar to this one I have here, will find that all of their genealogy is done. If you go back five generations, you have thirty-two different lines, and in the chart I just showed, going back seven generations, you will have 128 different lines to follow. You only need to go ten generations back, and you get 1024 different lines to follow.

Genealogy is not just a chain line. I have a record of a chain line that starts with the Smith family and goes back, branching off from the Smith family when they could not go farther with that line. It goes back to 443 B.C. Yet this is not all of the Smith genealogy.

This is your responsibility, brothers and sisters, to make sure that your genealogy is gathered. I see the effects of this spirit of Elijah becoming stronger all the time. Often it is just one member of the family who joins the Church. I have many husbands and wives come to me, each one being the only member of the Church in his immediate family. I believe the Lord deliberately designates and sends a valiant spirit into a special family in a special location, even in far-off missions, for the explicit purpose of having a spirit who will accept of the gospel of Jesus Christ, hear the voice when it comes to him, and recognize it as true. Then, after becoming a member of the Church, he will gather the records that the promises to the fathers may be fulfilled.

Many people who join the Church are the only ones in their family in the Church and are especially assigned and their special mission is to gather their genealogy and perform the sealing blessings that the fathers may receive the blessings promised in the promise of Elijah. I am reminded of a Japanese boy, a convert to the Church here in the States, who, in fulfilling his obligation in the military service, was taken to Japan. During his leaves of absence, on his furloughs, he went to Hiroshima where he found relatives who were more than willing to give him records of his genealogy, pictures of family members, and records. Some were insulted to think that they had not been thought of sooner, and they are continuing to send records to him. He unrolled on the floor of my office a pedigree chart he had made up which stretched clear across the room and was still not all unrolled—one member of a family bringing the blessings to the fathers, which is the promise of Elijah. This is typical of many families.

Do not leave this for others to do. Each has his own responsibility. Are you back in the horse and buggy days, in the days of the old family Bible where you just gather your own posterity records? Or, are you gathering together pedigree charts wherein for each couple on the pedigree chart you have a family record sheet? Most of you are familiar with these sheets. And if you are, you will soon have a book built up of those loose sheets as thick as this old family Bible with just genealogy, instead of just one or two sheets in the middle of a book.

I believe it was worth all of the efforts, and the costs, and the sacrifices, to build the Kirtland Temple, just to have a place where the keys could be restored, if for no other reason, if we avail ourselves of these blessings. However, if we do not avail ourselves of these blessings, they will not be of much value to us. We have heard the record of the microfilms that are available to us, and we have temples available. President Bowring reported the other night that there were 2946 endowments in one day in the Los Angeles Temple; over three million endowments in a year in the Church, it was reported.

These temples are here, and these records are here for us to use, brethren and sisters. Put them to use that they may be of value to us and that we may receive the blessings and that our ancestors too may receive these grand and glorious sealing blessings for all eternity, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I sincerely pray for the Spirit of the Lord to direct me and for your faith to assist to that end.

I have been impressed with the emphasis placed upon the principles of the gospel in this conference. And I have been impressed with the emphasis that has been laid upon the prophecy of Daniel which foretold the setting up of the kingdom of God, the overcoming of all other kingdoms, and that this kingdom was to stand forever.

There is a striking and interesting difference between this dispensation and all other dispensations. All other dispensations have faded away in a comparatively short time into apostasy. This is the only dispensation from the beginning that is not to follow that pattern.

When the Lord Jesus Christ came to perform his glorious mission in the world and established his Church, he established it among an apostate people who, if they had believed the teachings of their prophets, would have received him as their Messiah. But they crucified him, so it makes a great difference with us in our attitude and in our objectives and in our mission in the world.

The statistics given this morning were interesting. We now number over a million and a half people. Some experts have estimated the future growth of the Church, and they estimate upon recognized principles of such estimations, that in the year 2000, forty-one years from now, the population of the Church will be (I must refer to the figures because I could hardly believe them) six million people, and I see no reason why we should not expect that to be so.

So we see with regard to our mission to the world and with regard to our relation to the world, not a fading out gospel dispensation, but a gospel dispensation that is to build and build until the Lord Jesus Christ shall come. He shall not come to an apostate group of Israel, but he shall come to the millions and millions of Israel who shall be gathered into his Church and kingdom. This Church and kingdom has already been established in the earth, and this is that kingdom. And testimonies of God's servants have been borne to that fact for one hundred and twenty-nine years and will continue to be borne to that fact to the end.

We say that in love and consideration for our fellow men, but it is our duty to declare that fact, that this is the kingdom of God established by the Lord Jesus Christ and that its mission is to fill the earth until the Lord Jesus Christ shall come. And we must bear that testimony, and we must bear the responsibilities that attach to that testimony. Our lives and all that we have and are should be devoted to the upbuilding of this great kingdom preparatory for our Lord and Savior to come and reign in the earth.

Another striking thing that is different in this dispensation from any other dispensation, is that there is involved

Monday, April 6

Third Day

the overcoming of the powers of evil in the earth; there is involved the overcoming and the ending of all nations in the earth; and the Lord has declared that the time will soon come when peace will be taken from the earth, and the devil will reign in his dominion and that the Lord Jesus Christ will reign among his Saints. (D&C 1:35.)

So we are living in that great dispensation when the culmination of all the history of the world and the work of God among the children of men, up to the time of the millennium, will be brought to pass.

These great changes in nations cannot be brought to pass without great political upheaval, without wars and calamities that the scriptures make very plain will come.

But bear in mind that the Lord is directing this world. We are frequently reminded that conditions have been so developed in the powers of warfare that an accident or a rash move could set in operation those powers which might destroy our civilization. But let us bear in mind that this world is in the hands of God. All these things will happen only so far as they are in accordance with his plans and his purposes. And let us not waste our time and our energy and get into a nervous condition about what is going to happen to the world. That is not our sphere of responsibility. The Lord will take care of that. It remains for us to be devoted to the upbuilding of his kingdom and facing whatever conditions may come to us.

I should like to read what the Lord has said about that in just a few words, for he has promised that this land that he established in the beginning for a special purpose—that Israel should accomplish its destiny in the world—bringing gospel truth to the world—is a special land, not only a promised land but also a protected land, and the Lord will protect this land against the enemies of righteousness. It is for us to be faithful and for all the people of this land, not just the members of this Church, to be true to its Constitution and to be true to Jesus Christ, the God of this land. (Ether 2:12.) Those are the things that we need to worry about. Those are the things that we need to center our hearts upon. The Lord has said that he planned this land to be choice above all other lands for the blessings to come to Israel. He also said in exact words: "I established the Constitution of this land," saying that it was done to preserve our liberties. (D&C 101:80.)

And the Lord brought about the discovery of this land as a preliminary arrangement for the establishment of his kingdom. This land has been occupied by the blood of Israel from the beginning, hidden by thousands of miles of ocean from any other group and has produced its scriptures and its prophets and has borne witness to the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ. Now, this land will be protected, and the cause of God will be protected. It is for us to devote ourselves with all our hearts to the building up of this kingdom and preserve peace in our hearts and not give way to the weakening influences that would come from any other attitude. The Lord says:

"I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked; I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth.

"I have sworn in my wrath, and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man;

"And the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire." (Ibid., 63:32-34.)

The Lord has also declared that any powers and forces that fight against Israel and against Zion shall be destroyed.

"For I, the Lord, have put forth my hand to exert the powers of heaven; ye cannot see it now, yet a little while and ye shall see it, and know that I am, and that I will come and reign with my people." (Ibid., 84:119.)

"Therefore, let your hearts be comforted concerning Zion; for all flesh is in mine hands; be still and know that I am God.

"Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered." (Ibid., 101:16-17.)

"For I, the Lord, rule in the heavens above, and among the armies of the earth. . . ." (Ibid., 60:4.)

Let us with all our hearts build up the kingdom of God, for the time is coming when gross wickedness and corruption will be swept from the earth. God has restored his gospel. It is being preached to all the world, so that as many as possible will forsake wickedness and join the people of God and become the seed of Israel, the sons of Abraham, the followers of and believers in Jesus Christ the Redeemer of the world. After that, those others who will not do that may have to be swept away as they war one with another and fall into the pits that they dig for others.

I bear my humble witness that this Church is the Church of Jesus Christ, the Creator and Redeemer of the world, that he has set it up through the Prophet Joseph Smith, a prophet of the Living God, and that it is being conducted by the servant of God, David O. McKay, our beloved prophet and leader. And I call the attention of the people of the world and the Saints to the first section of the Doctrine and Covenants which is a formal proclamation to all peoples by the Lord God himself, declaring that he has restored the gospel to the world and set up his kingdom and that his voice calls out to all the world to repent and enter into that kingdom and listen to the voice of his servants and disciples whom he has raised up in these last days.

This work is the work of God. I bear this humble witness in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Elder George Q. Morris of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy will be our next speaker.

ELDER MILTON R. HUNTER

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My dear brethren and sisters, I humbly pray that the Spirit of God will direct me that I may bear my testimony this morning along with the testimonies borne by the other brethren.

During the past year I have had several most unusual experiences. I desire this morning to recount one of them. I had the opportunity to go to the Holy Land last July, a privilege which I had desired for many years. My son was released from the Swiss-Austrian Mission, having completed two and one-half years' service. I joined him and three other outstanding elders, and the five of us went to the places made famous and sacred through the life of the Master.

We were met at the airport at Tel Aviv by a very outstanding man named Joseph, a Jew who had fled from Germany at the time that Hitler killed four or five million of those unfortunate people. Joseph spoke several languages fluently. He was a very cultured person, a historian by profession before he left Germany. He was familiar with the history of Palestine, both the ecclesiastical and the profane, and of course he told us about numerous historical events in a very pleasing and faith-promoting way.

When we entered the Holy City, we were psychologically and spiritually prepared for the wonderful experiences that we were to have that day and the following few days while in Israel. I said to my traveling companions, "I have a feeling of peace and contentment such as I have experienced only a few times in my life. It is a feeling similar to one that I had the first time I entered the Sacred Grove or when I go into the house of the Lord."

Each of these young men said, "We are experiencing a similar feeling."

Joseph, our guide, took us from place to place in Jerusalem and described many of the important events that had taken place in ancient times, especially those that pertained to the life of Jesus. My traveling companions hummed the tune, "I walked today where Jesus walked." We were thrilled when we were shown the traditional place where Christ was born in Bethlehem, the place in Jerusalem where he was crucified, the spot where he was buried and where he later rose from the grave. We were reminded that he met Mary Magdalene near the tomb before he ascended to heaven. All of these events as well as numerous other important events which had occurred in the Holy City were explained to us in a masterful way.

We went northward to Galilee. There we saw many marvelous things which recalled to our memories important events connected with the life of Christ. One outstanding experience that comes to my mind vividly at this moment occurred in Nazareth. We were standing in front of what is known as "Mary's Well," the place, according to our guide, where Mary, when a girl went to get water just as the girls do in that part of the world today. During the past few days we had eagerly listened to Joseph's accounts of the events that had occurred during the life of Jesus of Nazareth. He had told these stories with great faith.

I said to him, "Joseph, I would like to ask you a question." As I think about it, it appears, I realize, that I perhaps was a little unfair in taking advantage of him as I did.

He replied, "If I can answer your question, I will be very happy to do so."

I then said, "You have told us about the miraculous things that took place at the birth of John the Baptist and explained these things with much faith. You have told about the Angel Gabriel's appearance to Mary, announcing the birth of Christ and declaring that he would be the Son of God. You have told about the birth of Jesus, and have showed us the place where the shepherds were feeding their flocks, as well as the place where Christ was born in a manger. You have told us about the new star that appeared at his birth and about the wise men who came to see him soon thereafter. You have told us about Christ's various visits to the temple from the time he was twelve years old until his last visit there shortly before his crucifixion. You have taken us to the room which is claimed to be the one in which Jesus and his apostles ate the Last Supper. You maintained that that was the place where Christ had appeared to the apostles the day of his resurrection. You reminded us that the doors and windows were shut and locked, and yet he suddenly stood in their midst. Jesus observed that the apostles thought that he was a spirit. Perceiving their thoughts, he said, '... handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.' (Luke 24:39.) You showed us Golgotha, the Place of the Skulls, and said, 'There is where Christ was crucified.' And then you told us that Jesus had been taken down from the cross and buried in Joseph of Arimathea's tomb. You pointed out a spot in a swale to the south of Golgotha where it is claimed that Christ was buried. Then you said that an angel came to the tomb and rolled the stone away from the door and that Christ was resurrected from the dead and appeared first to Mary Magdalene. You have repeated to us many passages of scripture related to the importance of Christ's ministry. For example, 'Jesus saith unto her [Mary], Touch me not for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go tell my brethren and say unto them, I ascend to my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.'" (John 20:17.) This famous statement declares the universal brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God.

"You said that Jesus did ascend into heaven, and then you declared that later he descended to earth to visit his apostles. You pointed out that he appeared to several groups of people following his resurrection. And you have shown us the place of his final ascension.

"You have said that Christ healed the sick and raised the dead, and you have shown us various places where he did those miraculous things. You have claimed that Christ cast out devils, restored sight to the blind, and performed all sorts of miracles. You showed us where he stilled the waves on the Sea of Galilee, and where he walked on the waters of that same sea."

Joseph replied, "Yes, I have explained these things to you."

I then remarked, "This is my question: Do you actually believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the universal Messiah, your Savior, my Savior, and the Savior of the entire human family?"

He looked very perplexed, a little dumbfounded. When he regained his composure he replied, "I suppose that since I am an orthodox Jew that in giving an answer to that question I am forced to say that I do not accept Jesus to be the Christ, the Savior of the world, your Savior and my Savior. The Jews regard Christ as a great prophet, one of the greatest that has ever lived, but they do not accept him as the real Messiah. We are looking for the Messiah to come."

Then I said, "Joseph, I want to bear witness to you that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the only true and living Messiah. All the things you have told us are true—those things recorded in the New Testament which you have accounted with much faith. Jesus Christ broke the bands of death; he not only rose from the grave, being the first fruits of the resurrection, but he also made it possible for all human beings, regardless of how righteously or how wickedly they live, to rise from the grave. And furthermore, he gave us the gospel of Jesus Christ, a plan of salvation, promising that if we render obedience to it and remain faithful to the end, we shall come back into his presence and dwell with the Father and the Son forever. Jesus did ascend into heaven. He now sits on the right hand of the Father, where he reigns as our Lord, our God, our Judge, and our Savior."

Curiously he asked: "How do you know that all of these things are true?"

I replied, "First, I know these things are true through the power of the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost has borne witness to my heart that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world; and so I am as certain that he is as I am sure that I am alive. It is only through the power of the Holy Ghost that any person can declare Jesus to be the Christ, and that we can know that he is the Only Begotten of the Father."

"Second, following Christ's death and resurrection, he appeared to another branch of Israel over in America. These people were called the Nephites. Their ancestors had come from Jerusalem."

And then I described the great storm, the earthquakes, the intense darkness, and terrific destruction that took place on the western hemisphere at the time of Christ's crucifixion. I then told him about the Resurrected Lord's appearance to the inhabitants of ancient America, explaining that he taught them the gospel and established his Church among the Nephites. I also explained that for nearly two hundred years they were a righteous people, developing one of the most perfect societies that the world has ever known. Finally, those people dropped into wickedness, and then the Nephites as a nation were destroyed by the Lamanites.

And I further explained: "My third reason for my positive conviction that Jesus is the Christ, the Messiah, and Savior, lies in the fact that in the spring of 1820 he appeared to the Prophet Joseph Smith, a boy in the state of New York, at a place known today as the Sacred Grove. He was accompanied on this glorious visitation by the Eternal Father. There he told the boy not to join any existing church, but that he would be the instrument in the hands of God through which the true Church would be established in due time. During the following several years, Joseph Smith was taught the true gospel of Jesus Christ through the ministration of angels and through visitations from Jesus Christ. Acting in accordance with divine command, this prophet organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on the 6th day of April, 1830. The Church was declared by the Lord to be 'the only true and living church in the world with which he was well pleased.' That Church was endowed with all the powers, priesthood, authority, doctrines, and ordinances that have been held by any and all dispensations from Adam's day down to the present time. It possesses all that is necessary and requisite for the salvation and eternal exaltation of the human family."

"Furthermore," I said, "some day members of the Church of Jesus Christ will bring the gospel to your people, and then God's covenants with your ancient prophets will all be fulfilled."

Also, I told him that when the Jews repent and accept the gospel of Jesus

Monday, April 6

Third Day

Christ, which, according to the ancient prophets, will take place at the time of the fulness of the Gentiles, and when they look not for another Messiah to come but accept him who has come as their Messiah, then God will remember the covenants made with their ancestors. At that time missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, having the true gospel, will take that gospel to the Jews. Many of them will believe and accept Jesus as the Christ, the Messiah, the Savior of the world.

In all sincerity, Joseph remarked: "These are the most marvelous things I have ever listened to in my life. I would like to learn more." He asked for a copy of Orson Hyde's prayer when he dedicated the Holy Land for the return of the Jews, and also for a copy of the Book of Mormon.

May God bless us.

I know that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, that he is our Redeemer, our Lord and our God. May we keep his commandments and remain faithful unto the end, that we may come back into his holy presence I pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy has just addressed us. The singing for this session has been furnished by the Ricks College Choir, under the direction of Chester

W. Hill, with Frank W. Asper at the organ. I wish you who are listening in on the radio could see this beautiful Choir. They occupy all the seats usually occupied by the Tabernacle Choir, the girls all dressed in white, the boys neatly dressed in their best. They make a very pleasing appearance. They have traveled a long distance to attend the sessions of this Conference. I am sure if you could see them, as the Tabernacle audience now views them, you would exclaim with the poet, "How beautiful is youth, How bright it gleams, With its illusions, aspirations, dreams. Book of beginnings, story without end. Every maid a heroine, Every man a friend."

We do appreciate their presence, and in your behalf express gratitude for their inspirational singing. They will now sing, in conclusion, "Greater Love Hath No Man," conducted by Chester W. Hill, and after the benediction by Elder Ellis Vard Christensen, formerly president of the Tahitian Mission, the general session of this Conference will be adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Singing by the Ricks College Choir, "Greater Love Hath No Man."

Elder Ellis Vard Christensen, formerly president of the Tahitian Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2:00 p.m.

THIRD DAY AFTERNOON MEETING

The concluding session of the Conference was held in the Tabernacle at 2:00 p.m., Monday, April 6th.

President David O. McKay presided and conducted the meeting.

The Ricks College Choir was present again this afternoon and furnished the choral music for this session.

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City in the concluding and seventh session of the One Hundred Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church.

These services are also being broadcast as a public service by television and radio stations throughout the West. The names of these have already been announced.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Ricks College Choir, with Chester W. Hill conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin this service by the Choir singing, "Lost in the Night," with Chester W. Hill conducting. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Moroni M. Larson, formerly president of the Western Canadian Mission. The Choir will sing.

The opening number by the Ricks College Choir was "Lost In The Night."

Elder Moroni M. Larson, formerly president of the Western Canadian Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was just pronounced by Elder Moroni M. Larson, formerly president of the Western Canadian Mission. The Ricks College Choir will now sing, "Joseph, the Seer." Elder Delbert L. Stapley will speak following the singing.

The Ricks College Choir sang "Joseph, The Seer."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Hugh B. Brown.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brothers and sisters, I am indeed grateful for your fellowship as we assemble in worship in this great conference of the Church today. I am grateful for my brethren of the General Authorities, for the messages which they have given, so stimulating to our faith and, I hope, encouraging to all of us to keep more faithfully the commandments of our Lord.

In the midst of today's worldly enticements which are glamorous but deceptive, it is so easy to become careless and digress from the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal. The Savior recognized the weakness of men to transgress and sin even though they possess the truth and knowledge of all gospel ordinances with their requirements for salvation.

His parable of the Ten Virgins teaches a profound lesson of great value to his disciples, present and future. Its application reaches into the homes of the Saints and forewarns of possible unpreparedness on the part of some for the great day of his coming. In this parable the Savior likened the kingdom of heaven unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. As members of the Lord's kingdom, they were entitled to the wedding invitation. However, only five were wise and by greater vision and good works had prepared themselves acceptably for this joyful privilege and were permitted entrance to the wedding. The five foolish virgins were unprepared and unready, having procrastinated obtaining oil for their lamps, and when they belatedly sought admittance to the wedding, the Lord replied, ". . . I know you not."

"Watch therefore," he admonished, "for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." (Matt. 25:1-13.)

I wonder, my brothers and sisters, which of the two categories we as members of the Church fall into? Do we and our families belong with the wise virgins or the foolish? Will we heed the Savior's warning given in this parable and make honest and wise preparation for entrance into his kingdom? Preparation for eternal glory must go progressively forward every day of our lives if we are not to be caught unprepared when earth life is finished or the great day of the Lord comes.

As descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob we are heirs to all the promises pledged to them and their posterity throughout their generations. We are bound by covenants and obligations to God even as our forefathers were.

Perhaps we should define the meaning and significance of a covenant. In a spiritual application a covenant is a solemn, binding compact between God and man whereby man agrees to keep God's commandments and serve him in righteousness and in truth unto the end. The gospel covenants and obligations bind Church members to obedience to laws and principles given of God which lead to happiness, love, and eternal joy. A covenant then is an agreement which includes obligations and is given as a principle with promise of blessings for obedience.

The Lord revealed to Moses that if the Children of Israel would obey his voice and keep his covenant, they should be a peculiar treasure unto him above all people. (Ex. 19:5.)

Belonging to the house of Israel, we today are also a covenant people to whom the choice promises of God apply. Blessings, however, are predicated upon faithfulness in keeping the commandments of God. Israel was bound by covenants and obligations which they were required to keep by sacrifice.

Perhaps in Church assemblies today we do not stress sufficiently the importance of gospel covenants and the Saints' obligation to them. It is our duty to learn and understand the sacred and binding nature of the covenants we accept at baptism and the covenants and obligations associated with all other ordinances of the gospel found along that narrow path which leads to life eternal.

During the ministry of Moses, the Lord gave the Sabbath as a perpetual covenant to Israel throughout their generations. (Ibid., 31:16.) Faithful observance of the Sabbath, freeing it for a day of worship and meditation, is as binding upon the people of the world now as it was at the time given. The Ten Commandments also were given by way of a covenant and have always been in force upon the peoples of the world.

When the Savior came among men, he established a new covenant and gave a new testament, even the sacrifice of his own life for the great cause of truth, of which he was the author. The new covenant established by our Lord, with its obligations, was maintained for a brief time only. Shortly after the death of the apostles, spiritual darkness covered the earth. It was not intended that this spiritual darkness should continue always upon the earth. The Lord promised that in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times all things were to be gathered together in Christ in preparation for his glorious second coming. Today is the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times spoken of.

Through revelation all the ordinances and covenants belonging to the gospel of our Lord have been restored in this time for the salvation, happiness, and eternal life of God's children.

The ordinance of baptism into the kingdom of God is a binding covenant upon all who receive that ordinance. Early in the history of the Church, in consequence of some who had previously been baptized into other churches and desired to unite with the Restored Church without yielding to another baptism because they considered their former baptism efficacious, the Lord gave a revelation which made clear and unmistakable the course which they should follow. He declared:

"Behold, I say unto you that all old covenants have I caused to be done away in this thing; and this is a new and an everlasting covenant, even that which was from the beginning.

"Wherefore, although a man should be baptized an hundred times, it availeth him nothing, for you cannot enter in at the straight gate by the law of Moses, neither by your dead works." (D&C 22:1-2.)

President Brigham Young added this significant contribution to the obligation associated with the covenant of baptism:

"All Latter-day Saints," said President Young, "enter the new and everlasting covenant when they enter this Church. The covenant to cease sustaining, upholding and cherishing the kingdom of the Devil and the kingdoms of this world. They enter the new and everlasting covenant to sustain the Kingdom of God and no other kingdom. They take a vow of the most solemn kind, before the heavens and earth, and that, too, upon the validity of their own salvation, that they will sustain truth and righteousness instead of wickedness and falsehood, and build up the Kingdom of God, instead of the kingdoms of this world." (Discourses of Brigham Young, p. 160.)

These admonitions and instructions emphasize the sacred and binding nature of the covenant which baptism into the Church places upon every soul receiving this gospel ordinance.

The ordinance of the Sacrament is also a sacred covenant. It reminds us of the great sacrifice of the Son of God upon the cross, which makes possible our redemption, salvation, and, if worthy, exaltation and eternal glory. It also gives us the opportunity to renew and keep in force the sacred covenants and obligations which we have entered into with our God.

President David O. McKay made this choice statement to the Council of the Twelve regarding the blessings of this ordinance:

"What a strength there would be in this Church if next Sunday every member who partakes of the Sacrament would sense the significance of the covenant made in that ordinance—every member willing to take upon him the name of the Son, a true Christian, proud of it, and always remember him, in the home, in business, in society, always remember him and keep his commandments that he has given them. How comprehensive that blessing and how significant the covenant we make each Sabbath day."

This admonition, my brothers and sisters, we should always remember as a part of the preparation necessary in meeting the requirements of the covenant of the Sacrament.

The Holy Priesthood is accepted by an oath and covenant and is binding upon those who receive it. They obligate themselves to keep faithfully all the commandments of God and to magnify their callings by honoring and exercising the priesthood in righteousness for the benefit and blessing of mankind.

Like the Children of Israel of old we, today, cannot meet the obligations of gospel covenants without sacrificing the things of this world—our personal ambitions, our time and means and, if need be, membership in every organization not established for the building up of Zion.

The Lord has promised that those who faithfully keep the oath and covenant of the Holy Priesthood will be given all that he has. And what does this promise mean? President Wilford Woodruff made this explanation:

"Who in the name of the Lord can apprehend such language as this? Who can comprehend that, by obeying the celestial law, all that our Father has shall be given unto us—exaltations, thrones, principalities, power, dominion. . . ."

And then again, President Woodruff asks: ". . . Who can comprehend it?" (Discourses of Wilford Woodruff, p. 79.)

Can we, my brothers and sisters, comprehend the significance and far-reaching benefits of this promise? To realize fully these expectations, the Lord has revealed another covenant, the new and everlasting covenant of marriage, which binds together by the authority of the Holy Priesthood, man and wife for time and for all eternity. Children born to them, or later sealed to them, become theirs, if true and faithful, throughout all the eternities of time. What a glorious covenant this is, so full of blessings and promise of rich rewards.

Perhaps the sacredness and far-reaching effects of all these covenants and obligations and others unmentioned can be summed up in the words of two past Presidents of the Church.

President Wilford Woodruff taught:

"We are under sacred covenants to stand by the truth.' . . . We have received the light, the knowledge of God; we are under sacred covenants to stand by the truth, and by one another in righteousness. . . ." (Ibid., p. 81.)

President Joseph F. Smith emphasized with forceful language the obligation of Latter-day Saints to the covenants they have received with this counsel and admonition:

"Among the covenants are these, that they will cease from sin and from all unrighteousness; that they will work righteousness in their lives; that they will abstain from the use of intoxicants, from the use of strong drinks of every description, from the use of tobacco, from every vile thing, and from extremes in every phase of life; that they will not take the name of God in vain; that they will not bear false witness against their neighbor; that they will seek to love their neighbors as themselves; to carry out the golden rule of the Lord, do unto others as they would that others should do unto them." (Gospel Doctrine, p. 107.)

Monday, April 6

Now, my brothers and sisters, the Lord has not left us without instruction concerning how the covenants and obligations of the gospel are to be maintained in our lives. In the revelation setting forth the oath and covenant which belongs to the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood, the Lord gave this comprehensive warning and advice:

"And I now give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life.

"For you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (D&C 84:43-44.)

If we prayerfully meditate this instruction, we can understand why it is profitable for each of us to be more careful henceforth in observing and keeping our vows with the Lord.

It is well to remember that we kept our first estate in the pre-existent world; therefore, how tragic it would be if in this interlude of mortality, which is such a small part of our eternal existence, we should forget our heritage and transgress the commandments of God and thus lose all the credits acquired there.

Our safety and happiness lie in keeping fully the commandments of God and maintaining, through good works, all obligations connected with the covenants entered into with him to the end of our days.

I pray God will give us the strength, my brothers and sisters, to do so, for our joy and happiness, which I ask humbly in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER HUGH B. BROWN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

As we are still enjoying the afterglow of Easter, the emphasis throughout this great conference has been on the divinity of Christ. From the profound and scholarly opening address of President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., Saturday morning, through all the sessions of the conference, all have borne witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God. I cannot hope to add anything to what has been said unless, perhaps, emphasis by repetition.

Little is known of the details of the Master's sojourn on the earth except during those three transcendent years of his ministry, the most eventful years of history. If we are to get a proper concept of the moral and spiritual significance and splendor of his unique life—from Bethlehem to Bethany—we must view it in the light of eternity. He lived his life on this earth at the summit of time, and on the high point of that summit we see the light of the resurrection, the most glorious beacon in the universe, flashing hope and courage to a benighted world. Let us from that eminence look back—back beyond Eden, and there we shall find that Jesus the Christ was with God the Father in the beginning.

And that beginning must have antedated the beginning of which we read in Genesis when the earth was created, for the obvious reason that he was its Creator. Yes, he lived before time began as we understand time. There is ample scriptural evidence to support the belief that Christ had a pre-mortal existence. Time will not permit quoting or reading many of the passages of scripture, but I should like to refer to one or two.

John, in his inspired preface, said:

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

"The same was in the beginning with God.

"All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. . . .

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." (John 1:1-3, 14.)

To this wonderful testimony Paul adds this corroboration

"For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him:

"And he is before all things, and by him all things consist." (Colossians 1:16-17.)

And the writer of Hebrews adds:

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets.

"Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made worlds:" (Hebrews 1:1-2.)

Jesus himself referred to his pre-existence many times; for instance he said:

"For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." (John 6:38.)

And then in that greatest of all prayers we find the poignant passage:

"And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." (Ibid., 17:5.)

At another time he chidingly spoke to his uncomprehending followers and said:

". . . Doth this offend you?

"What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" (Ibid., 6:61-62.)

These proofs of Christ's pre-existence confirm our faith in the immortality of the soul for if the spirit had an existence before the body was created, so that spirit is capable of independent existence after the body dies.

The fact that he came forth from the tomb with spirit and body reunited—and this is the central fact in the teachings of the apostles—gives divine assurance that we too, through his atoning sacrifice, shall partake of the blessings of the resurrection. Harken to his promise:

"... I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. . . ." (Ibid., 11:25-26.)

And let us read together the words of John, written while he was on the Isle of Patmos, as recorded in Revelation,

"Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: . . ." (Revelation 1:7.)

"And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, . . ." (Idem, 17-18.)

John continues

"And after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia; Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God: . . .

"And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS." (Ibid., 19:1, 16.)

Furthermore:

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

"And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. . . .

"And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. . . ." (Ibid., 21:2, 6.)

Zechariah said that when the Master shall appear he will stand on the Mount of Olives, and the mount shall be cleft in twain, and they beholding the wounds in his hands shall ask whence these wounds, and he shall reply,

"... Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." (Zechariah 13:6.)

"And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south." (Ibid., 14:4.)

We proclaim the pre-existence and divine nature of Christ, the purpose of his life, the reality of his resurrection and the certainty of his second coming as eternal and well-attested truths and prophetic promises. They have illuminating and inspiring significance for our troubled world. They are our heritage from the Judeo-Christian world, clarified and amplified by modern revelation.

They are relevant to our time and age, which, as Adlai Stevenson recently pointed out, "is a time of conflict of ideology, as a time of ferment in technology, a period of revolution in science, . . . an era when at last the means lie at hand to free mankind from the ancient shackles of pain and hunger. It is all these things, but the true crisis of our times lies at a deeper level. All this freedom and elbow room only thrusts onto us with more force the fundamental issue of the faith that is in us."

As the late A. Powell Davies said: "The world is too dangerous for anything but truth and too small for anything but brotherhood."

There must be a re-affirmation of the truths concerning the fatherhood of God, the Godhood of Christ, and the brotherhood of man. Truths for which the Savior gave his life. Truth and brotherhood, love of God and fellow men, will make men free and establish peace in a world which is threatened with a devastating and final war.

The truculent and blasphemous attempts of communist ideologies to erase Christ from their literature and to expunge all memory of him from the hearts and minds of men, in order to degrade and enslave men, must fail, for as God made man in his own image, so his image is indelibly stamped on the souls of men, and instinctively they know that they are the sons of God.

The challenge of evil with its inevitable confusion tends to make the relevance of Christ's life and message more apparent and the application of his divine teachings more urgent.

It would be cowardly almost to the point of treason to dilute, water down, and make insipid the soul-saving power of these glorious truths. Indeed, as Paul said:

"That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, . . .

"And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Philippians 2:10-11.)

We humbly but fearlessly add to the testimonies of the prophets and apostles of old our own witness that he lives, that he is a personal being, that he will come again with his resurrected, glorified body still bearing the marks of the crucifixion and that there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, to which I testify in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve has just addressed us. We shall now hear from Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have in my library, I think, the conference addresses so far as they are available back to the beginning, including the Journal of Discourses, and I think all the conference pamphlets or discourses published since then. In each one is a statement of counsel, of eternal principles, of commandments, of practical advice for the day in which we live.

This conference in which we have now sat nearly three days is no exception to that. With you I have marveled at the breadth and the depth of the advice here given, the need for it, and the manner in which it touches the needs of the day in which we live. We have been fed. Our lives have been enriched and steadied and encouraged in all things pertaining to life, and I feel to express the gratitude of my heart for these recurring conferences when we get together for reminder and renewal of faith, and of witness, and of instruction in eternal truth.

Some time ago, as I am sure many of you have done, I saw a rather unusual documentary film produced by the Bell Telephone system, in which a panel of scientists and others were reviewing the great breadth of creation: this world, and men, and space beyond. It was developed as if it were a mystery story, and was called, as I remember, "The Strange Case of the Cosmic Rays," in which scientists were telling what had been discovered and what the current thinking was about what had been discovered. They had selected a panel of distinguished men recalled from history, including some celebrated names. I think Charles Dickens was among them, and Edgar Allen Poe, and Dostoyevsky, the eminent Russian writer, men who were, in a measure, sitting in judgment on the work of the scientists.

I made some notes at that time, and although they are cold and not rechecked, they have been running through my mind. The men of science asked this panel to appraise their findings, first bringing attention to the fact that the universe is a unified whole, that there is evidence of planning and intelligence and order and law throughout the entire universe.

Then one of the witnesses, before he would commit himself to an opinion, asked a very significant question, which one is always disposed to ask in mystery stories: "What is the motive of it all? You have told us about space. You have told us about the earth. You have told us about cosmic rays, and life, and atoms, and all the natural phenomena. What is the motive of it all?" Then they concluded, as I recall, that they did not know enough about the motive of it all, and suggested that the panel come back fifty years hence and see whether they were any closer to an answer—with the scientists themselves conceding that however much they may have discovered, they were like Newton, who said: "I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore, and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

I think the motive of it all is an ever-present and ever-insistent question: What has been the motive of this conference? What is the motive of the gospel? What is the motive of all this teaching, all this traveling, all this missionary endeavor? Of all the work and the effort and the struggle of life, of all the striving, all the learning, all the living?

Blessedly the Lord God has told us what the motive of it all is, and it is no small motive, pertaining not only to time nor to life on earth. It is a motive pertaining to eternity, and the great summarizing sentence of the motive, of course, has already been recalled in this conference a number of times. The Lord God himself has declared it to be his purpose and his glory to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.

The motive is happiness; it is peace; it is progress; it is everlasting life, and not just a few short days or a few short years. It is a motive of such consequence and such endlessness that it transcends all else. It is this for which we do all we do, this for which we gather, this for which we teach, encourage, and bear witness to each other, this for which we remind each other of these great and everlasting things of life.

"But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

"Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying,

"Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

"Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"This is the first and great commandment.

"And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

"On these two commandments hang

all the law and the prophets." (Matthew 22:34-40.)

I read into this something, or would like to read into it today, something which is not always read into it: I think this implies not only that we should love our neighbors, but in a very sincere and real and unselfish way we should also love ourselves. I think the Lord God must have intended that we should have a high regard and respect for ourselves as well as a high regard and respect for other men.

I am thinking of a line from Ruskin, in which he said: "There is no wealth but life." The life each of us has is, after all, the sum and substance of all that we have in time and in eternity. And I think no intelligent man would ever deliberately do anything which would not make him happy. I cannot think of an intelligent man's doing what would make him unhappy. I think when we err, we err in that we lose our sense of values or our sense of direction, or do not quite have in mind what will make us happy or unhappy. All the motive, all the commandments, all the counsel of God, all this great effort of living and of life, all the striving, the learning and all else, should make us basically happy. Our Father had no other motive for us but our happiness, our peace, and progress and limitless life with our loved ones everlastingly, ever with accomplishment, ever with growth, ever with opportunity, ever with the highest possibilities that the Lord God could help his children to realize in life—this is the motive, this is the source of happiness, of service, of all we do for each other, of all we do for ourselves.

Now, as we go from here and ask ourselves what comes of all of this, what the motive of it all is, and what life is, I think we have the summary in the lines given and so oft repeated, "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man," and no short-sighted decisions and no short-sighted objectives should ever be the determining factors of our lives.

I was impressed this morning with the counsel of Brother George Q. Morris in advising us to go forth and live our lives with steady purpose, and not worry too much about the uncertainties and about the things we do not know. I would leave this counsel with our youth: We all live in uncertainties, and we always have. All generations have, and if we were so concerned about the uncertainties that we did not make solid preparations for the future and turn in a solid performance we should have wasted life. With a calm, quiet peace and purpose, and with prayer in our hearts, and with the clean living of life and the keeping of the commandments, we ought to go forward into the future and lay as broad a base and acquire as much knowledge and prepare ourselves as well, and serve as well as we can or ever could, despite all ominous threats and all else that seems to disturb the present scene.

From a young missionary's report given a few nights ago came a sentence that was great in its implications. Speaking of enduring to the end, he said: "We must not only endure, but we must prevail."

There is great motive; there is great purpose. As has been asked through all the ages, "What is Man?" I recall a scientist's answer to a great group of men last summer as he suggested some elements of the answer as to what man was. He endeavored to tell us how many atoms each man had in his physical anatomy, and we thought we were something very considerable when he said that we each had an octillion atoms in us, in our physical frames. Then he tried to tell us what an octillion is. He said if it should start to rain peas, just ordinary garden peas, and rain peas four feet deep over the whole face of the earth, water and land surface included, and then rain peas four feet deep over 250,000 planets this size, that would be an octillion—give or take a few, more or less. We began to feel quite puffed up and important. Then he said if you squeeze out all the space between all the atoms in and between the electrons and all the component parts of these atoms, you would then be about as big as a speck of dust. Then we began to acquire our humility back again.

But beyond all the atoms, he witnessed to us as a scientist, memory is perpetuated; man is more than a machine; and there is something eternal which persists always and everlastingly. That, of course, we knew by other witnesses. Life is everlasting, and the motive we know, and the purposes of our Father we know. His plans we know in sufficient amount to help us to realize them in their fullest and highest if we will, and I leave my witness with you as to the truth of the counsel which has been given in this conference, as to the prophetic leadership which we are privileged in this day and generation to have, and as to the great motive which supersedes all the transitory things of life, to the realization of which I pray God we may leave here and rededicate ourselves and teach our children, and devote all the effort and earnestness we have within us, in Jesus' name. Amen.

ELDER ALVIN R. DYER

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I have learned a little more realistically what is meant by the scripture, "he that endureth to the end." Brother Hinckley says it is "the survival of the fittest." I do not know what that means, but I do know this, that what has been said at this conference has greatly increased my faith and testimony and desire to serve the Lord.

In the few minutes that I shall occupy I should like to testify of the prophets and read to you from section one of the Doctrine and Covenants these words:

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments." (D&C 1:17.)

I had an experience some few months before I left the mission field, of a ministerial association from one of the states in our mission, writing a letter and saying that they were receiving ever-increasing inquiries about the Mormon Church and would we please supply them with literature and information. We did this, and I had occasion also to visit the headquarters of this association. And there in the presence of a number of these men, and some of them were ministers, had the opportunity of explaining to them the premise under which the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints had been organized.

I took occasion at that time to read to them from section twenty of the Doctrine and Covenants, and I would like to read to you what I read to them, beginning with verse 7:

"And gave unto him [meaning Joseph Smith] commandments which inspired him;

"And gave him power from on high, by the means which were before prepared, to translate the Book of Mormon;

"Which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles and to the Jews also;

"Which was given by inspiration, and is confirmed to others by the ministering of angels, and is declared unto the world by them—

"Proving to the world that the holy scriptures are true, and that God does inspire men and call them to his holy work in this age and generation, as well as in generations of old;

Third Day

"Thereby showing that he is the same God yesterday, today, and forever. Amen.

"Therefore, having so great witnesses, by whom shall the world be judged, even as many as shall hereafter come to a knowledge of this work.

"And those who receive it in faith, and work righteousness, shall receive a crown of eternal life;

"But those who harden their hearts in unbelief, and reject it, it shall turn to their own condemnation—

"For the Lord God has spoken it; and we, the elders of the church, have heard and bear witness to the words of the glorious Majesty on high, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen." (Ibid., 20:7-16.)

This had a profound effect upon these men, and I was grateful to leave my witness with them as to the premise for the organization of God's Church upon the earth in this day and time.

Some years ago there appeared an article in Fortune magazine, which had to do with the failure, according to the editors and authors of this article, of the Christian churches of America to supply the needed inspiration for the direction of the Christian churches in this land. This article has very recently been referred to by one of our noted educators from the West Coast, Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California. I read from this article, which stresses the need of divine direction in the Christian churches of America. I quote:

"We have the peculiar spectacle of a nation which, to a limited extent, practices Christianity without actively believing in Christianity. We are asked to turn to the Church for our enlightenment, but when we do this we find that the voice of the Church is not inspired. The voice of the Church today is the echo of our own voices. And the result of this experience, already manifest is disillusionment. . . .

"The way out," continues Dr. Sproul, "is the sound of a voice, not our voice, but a voice coming from somewhere not ourselves, in the existence of which we cannot disbelieve.

"It is the task of the pastors to hear this voice, cause us to hear it, and to tell us what it says. If they cannot hear it, or if they fail to tell us what it says, we, as laymen, are wholly lost.

"Without it we are no more capable of saving the world, than we were capable of creating it in the first place."

I think one of the great messages of this Church is to declare unto the world that God has raised up a prophet and that there is a need for a prophet of God in this day and age. We go to the ends of the earth to proclaim this unto the children of men and if they will but listen to the direction and the inspiration of the prophets of God we could be led from our dilemma and from the disillusionment that settles over the earth today.

I read recently of a statement of Winston Churchill which gives some evidence of the need of inspired direction in the earth today, for said he, "As the years go by, the process of government—I suppose in every modern country and certainly in our own—grows ever more complicated and burdensome. . . .

"I have perhaps a longer experience than almost anyone, and I have never brooded over a situation which demanded more patience, composure, courage and perseverance than that which unfolds itself before us today."

Is there a need for a prophet of God? The answer is yes. Look at the evidences of this. The world of politics and relationships between nations is not improving since that statement was made, in fact they have grown worse. There is a world-wide lack of trust between peoples. We stand each dawn, as it were, on the brink of open hostilities.

Atomic and hydrogen power, with their many implements of destruction, serve only to add to the menace of our way of living. The pressure conditions under which we live today are taking a tremendous toll in heart and mental disturbances. The status of home life, spiraling trends of drunkenness, surging infidelity in the home of husband and wife, with an over-all laxity of morals among both young and old, increased personal and community delinquencies all pointing to a growing disregard for the worth of the individual. One would have to be blind not to recognize these disastrous trends and the need of divine direction to save those who will hear, understand, and follow the truth. The ancient Prophet Amos declared, that God would do nothing, save he reveal his mind and will to his servants the prophets. (See Amos 3:7.) The need of the mind and will of our Heavenly Father, through his servant, a prophet, is greatly in evidence.

I want to leave my testimony, my brethren and sisters, that God does live and that he and his Son, Jesus Christ, are at the helm, and that prophets have been raised up from the very inception of this Church, commencing with Joseph Smith and others who have followed him, and that we are blessed to have standing at the head of the Church today and directing us, a prophet of God, and if the children of men would but listen to the voice of that prophet we all could be led away from the difficulties that are oppressing us this very day. I bear this record in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

May I call attention to the great gospel truth that salvation is a family affair, that it is attained in and through, by and because of families.

For a text, may I read the words quoted by Moroni to Joseph Smith on the evening of September 21, 1823:

"Behold, I will reveal unto you the Priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

"And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers.

"If it were not so, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming." (D&C 2:1-3.)

Now, what were the promises made to the fathers? Since the coming of Elijah, on April 3, 1836, in what way have these promises been planted in the hearts of the children?

In answer, and by way of illustration, may I read one of the greatest promises ever made to the fathers, one which is perhaps pre-eminent above all others. To Abraham the Lord said:

"... I am the Lord thy God; ...

"My name is Jehovah, and I know the end from the beginning; ...

"And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee above measure, and make thy name great among all nations, and thou shalt be a blessing unto thy seed after thee, that in their hands they shall bear this ministry and Priesthood unto all nations;

"And I will bless them through thy name; for as many as receive this Gospel shall be called after thy name, and shall be accounted thy seed, and shall rise up and bless thee, as their father;

"And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee; and in thee (that is, in thy Priesthood) and in thy seed (that is, thy Priesthood)" and now note particularly what follows; it is the heart and core of all the promises made to the fathers—"for I give unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal." (Abraham 2:7-11.)

In the nearly four thousand years since Abraham, uncounted millions of his literal seed have lived in the world, most of them in a day when the gospel, with its saving ordinances and truths, was not found among men. Yet the Lord promised Abraham, their father, that these millions who have sprung from him, these millions who are his literal seed, these hosts of his posterity who comprise a major portion of a multitude of nations, that all these are entitled by lineage and as of right to the blessings of the priesthood, of the gospel, of salvation, and of eternal life.

Monday, April 6

May I here note that in order for men to gain salvation in the kingdom of God, they must receive the ordinances of baptism and of the laying on of hands for the receipt of the Holy Ghost; and in order for them to gain eternal life, which is the fulness of the Father's kingdom, and be joint-heirs with his Son, they must in addition enter into the ordinance of celestial marriage.

Now by revelation the Lord in our day has singled out and identified the children in whose hearts the promises made to the fathers have been planted. To the elders of the Church in this day he said:

"Thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers—

"For ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God—

"Therefore your life and the priesthood have remained, and must needs remain through you and your lineage until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.

"Therefore, blessed are ye if ye continue in my goodness, a light unto the Gentiles, and through this priesthood, a savior unto my people Israel. The Lord hath said it." (D&C 86:8-11.)

Well, we are latter-day Israel; we are part of the seed of Abraham; we hold the power and authority of this priesthood; we are a light to the gentile nations, and as a result we are under command to carry the message of salvation to them. But we are also chosen and appointed to be saviors to Israel itself, to the seed of Abraham—to the whole kingdom and nation of people of the chosen lineage, who have lived in all the days since Abraham—whether they lived when the gospel was here or whether they did not.

May I now show how these principles work by using myself as the illustration. I have received the gospel; I have been baptized under the hands of a legal administrator; I have received the gift of the Holy Ghost—all of which has put me on a path leading to an inheritance of salvation in the celestial world. Also, I have gone to the temple and been sealed to one of God's choicest handmaidens and have thereby obtained a place on the path leading to an inheritance of eternal life in the highest heaven of the celestial world. By obedience I have power to press forward and obtain these great rewards.

Because I have some understanding and realization of the glory, importance, and worth of these gospel blessings, there has come into my heart a great desire to have my children after me become inheritors of the same identical blessings that I have received, and so I strive to bring up my children in light and truth. Next to my own salvation and that of my wife, there is nothing so important to me as the salvation of my children.

Further, because I know the priceless worth of the gospel and the blessings that flow from it, I have a desire that my ancestors—those who lived when the gospel was not on earth and who have not had the privileges which are mine—I have a great desire that they also should be inheritors of these blessings. In other words, the promises made to the fathers have been planted in my heart, and I am obligated to act as a minister for the salvation of those in my line who have lived and died without having the gospel preached to them.

And now, if I do what I should, I will search out and identify those who have gone before in my lineage, and will see that the ordinances of salvation and exaltation are performed for them.

Salvation is a family affair. It is I, my wife, my children, and my ancestors. It is you, your wives, your children, and your ancestors. Salvation is a family affair.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Brother Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, Assistant to the Twelve, will be our concluding speaker.

ELDER GORDON B. HINCKLEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, I seek the Spirit of the Lord that what I say may be consonant with the inspirational things to which we have listened during the past three days. As I look into your faces, I see the fulfilment of prophecy. In your presence I see a realization of the words of Jeremiah: "... I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion.

"And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." (Jer. 3:14-15.)

You are here, each of us is here, enjoying the blessings of the Lord because the servants of the Lord have gone into the world to teach the glad tidings of the gospel for the blessing of our Father's children. More than eighty thousand of them have gone. They have given more than two hundred thousand man-years of dedicated service. I am sure that few of us appreciate the cost, the heartaches, the sorrows, the sacrifices, and the results of this magnificent effort.

I read the other day a story written by a little girl whose father was on a mission in Denmark when she and her mother lived in Parowan. She writes:

"My little mother had to work like a slave to keep her children while Father was on his mission. I remember how every night she would spin, and how in the daytime, I would split fine splinters off from the pitchy wood, and at night I would sit with her and tend the baby and keep holding and lighting these pitchy sticks for her to see to spin by, and how I would cry when I went to bed to think my sweet little mother had to work so hard. . . .

"I remember the Christmas of 1862. All of us children hung up our stockings. We jumped up early in the morning to see what Santa had brought, but there was not a thing in them. Mother wept bitterly. She went to her box and got a little apple and cut it in little tiny pieces and that was our Christmas, but I have never forgotten to this day how I loved her dear little hands as she was cutting that apple." (Hannah Daphne Smith Dalton)

A few years ago I did some research on the discovery of gold in California, in which men of the Mormon Battalion participated. I learned that while men were traveling westward over land and sea in search of gold, missionaries from these valleys were traveling eastward over land and sea in search of souls. And the days of sacrifice are not over. As you heard this morning among the statistics that were read to you, the parents and friends of our missionaries last year sent them between five and six million dollars. That money was spent not only in dollars, but also in pounds and shillings, in crowns and kroner, in francs and marks, in yen, in pesos, and cruzeros.

Add to that the value of the time of the missionaries. Estimate it conservatively at another five or six million dollars, and you have a consecration of at least ten million dollars a year for the purpose of declaring the reality and personality of God, the deep meaning of the Atonement, and the restoration of the Lord's Church, guided by apostles and prophets.

I think you may be interested in these remarkable words of the Prophet Joseph Smith written in 1842, two years before his death:

"... no unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly, and independent, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country, and sounded in every ear, till the purposes of God shall be accomplished and the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done." (History of the Church IV:540.)

That is the magnitude of our mission, brethren and sisters, and it shall not be accomplished until the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done.

I am sure we are all gratified by the many good things said concerning the Church. We are deeply grateful for the opportunities of radio and television, and the generosity of the public press, all of which help to build a favorable atmosphere in which to teach the gospel. But I am confident that the time will never come when we shall not need vigorous men and women of faith to go into the world as missionaries for this cause. We have never found, and I think we never shall find, an adequate substitute for the situation in which two wholesome young men meet with a family, reason with them, teach them, testify to them, and pray with them. We shall always need missionaries. With that thought in mind I should like to suggest a five point program for the membership of the Church, a program which I feel is easy of attainment, and which would prove fruitful to this great cause.

Monday, April 6

Third Day

1. That we cultivate in our homes a proper attitude toward missionary service. We enjoy the blessings we so greatly treasure because of those who have gone before us. Out of a sense of appreciation, out of simple gratitude, we should make an effort to extend these same blessings to others. Our young people have an obligation to prepare themselves for missionary service.

We should also build the attitude that there is nothing of a vacation, nothing of a holiday in this great missionary service. It is hard, and at times discouraging, work. Last year our missionaries averaged sixty-seven hours a week in actual proselyting effort. Let those who contemplate missions realize that they will work as they have never worked before, and that they may expect such joy as they have not previously known.

2. That we foster training for missionary service. One of the great compliments paid the Savior was that he taught as one having authority. The missionary who knows scripture and can quote it speaks with the voice of authority. It is not essential to memorize five hundred citations, nor even three hundred. Fifty well chosen verses of scripture will become a remarkably effective tool in the hands of a missionary. May I suggest that in our family night gatherings we make it a project to memorize one scripture citation a week pertinent to this work. At the conclusion of a year our children will have on their lips a fund of scripture which will remain with them throughout their lives.

3. That we make financial preparation. Missionary work, like everything else, has become more costly. I was heartened by my experience in interviewing a young man in Arizona recently. I asked whether he had a sincere desire to go on a mission. He replied, "I have wanted to go since I was seven, and, moreover, since that time I have saved for it. I have $1600 in the bank to make certain that I shall have the means to go." A little at a time, systematically saved, will assure our children that the necessary means will be available when a missionary call comes.

4. That we see that our public and private deportment backs up the missionary cause. No member of this Church can let down his standards without throwing an obstacle in the way of those who are striving to teach the gospel in the world. Likewise, no member can uphold the standards of the Church in public and private life without reflecting strength to the cause.

5. Finally, that we all get the missionary spirit, that we seek opportunities to teach the gospel, to distribute the Book of Mormon, to let people know what we believe. I am having a delightful correspondence with a man in England with whom I struck up conversation on a plane while flying across the Atlantic. He has now read the Book of Mormon and some of our other literature. I am pleased to note a significant change in his attitude toward the Church.

One of the most fruitful sources of contact for our missionaries lies in referrals sent to them. A member of the Church will suggest to an associate or a relative that he invite the missionaries to come to his home. President J. Leonard Love tells me that in the Northern California Mission their experience indicates that forty percent of the referrals given them join the Church. Think of it! Forty percent of the names sent to them result in convert baptisms! In the British Mission at one time it was discovered that sixty-eight percent of those who had come into the Church had made their first acquaintance with the doctrines through members of the Church.

My brethren and sisters, this assignment to teach the gospel belongs to all of us, not only to the fifty-five hundred devoted men and women who presently are serving in the field. It belongs to each of us, and we shall not be through with it until the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done.

God help us to sense and fulfil our mission honorably, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

And now we come to that moment when we should like to express our thanks and appreciation. We have had a glorious conference. Many have contributed to its inspiration and success. Will all who have participated in the inspiration of these gatherings please accept of the gratitude of our hearts.

The singing for this session, as we have already informed you, has been furnished by the Ricks College choir under the direction of Chester W. Hill, with Frank W. Asper at the organ. We wish to express appreciation to these young men and women of the Ricks College for the hours they have spent in practice in weeks that have gone by, resulting in the inspiration of their singing to this congregation today. The Lord bless you young people. We are proud of you! We have enjoyed your presence as well as your inspirational singing. May the Lord's protecting care be with you as you go back to your homes, and may this experience ever be a happy memory for you, as it will be for all of us.

I should like to express again our appreciation to the Brigham Young University combined choruses. They occupied these seats last Saturday—another choice group of young people. We cannot help feeling confident that the Church is in good hands when we see such representatives of youth as have participated in this conference.

We wish to express appreciation to the Tabernacle Choir, and the Tabernacle Choir men's chorus for their participation during the various sessions of our annual conference. Forty-five thousand two hundred eighty-seven men of the priesthood were moved by the inspirational singing of those young men from the choir last Saturday night.

We are not unmindful of the public press and you reporters for your fair and accurate reports throughout sessions of the conference. We want the city officials to know that we are not unmindful of the help they have rendered during the last five days, to Chief W. Cleon Skousen, and his associates, the traffic officers—in handling increased traffic, for the fire department, and the Red Cross, who stood on hand ready for an emergency; for you tabernacle ushers who have rendered service early and late in seating the great audiences.

We are grateful for the radio and television service—twenty-seven television and twenty radio stations throughout our own city and the nation have carried the messages of this conference to untold thousands of people who have listened to the proceedings of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Annual Conference of the Church.

We have already named those who have sent these lovely flowers, sweet messages of their love, and best wishes for a successful and inspirational conference.

The closing prayer of this session will be offered by Elder Alfred E. Rohner, formerly president of the Southwest Indian Mission.

Now I should like to say, brothers and sisters, the Lord bless us with a desire to live better than we have ever done before. No individual can go away from this conference, even as a listener, without a heavier responsibility upon him. One of the happiest experiences that I have had has been to meet young people, and hear the young man or young woman say, as he or she introduced his or her companion, "I want you to meet my friend who is an investigator." And that has happened frequently during this conference.

In 1923 in the British Mission there was a general instruction sent out to the members of the Church advocating what Brother Gordon B. Hinckley has emphasized today. We did not spend money advertising in the press. The feeling in England was quite bitter at that time, but we said: "Throw the responsibility upon every member of the Church that in the coming year of 1923 every member will be a missionary. Every member a missionary! You may bring your mother into the Church, or it may be your father; perhaps your fellow companion in the workshop. Somebody will hear the good message of the truth through you."

Monday, April 6

Third Day

And that is the message today. Every member—a million and a half—a missionary! I think that is what the Lord had in mind when he gave that great revelation on Church government, as recorded in the 107th section of the Doctrine and Covenants. He describes the Melchizedek Priesthood and the men who stand at the head of that priesthood, and the Aaronic Priesthood and the presidency of the Aaronic Priesthood, those who are active in the priesthood quorums—both the Melchizedek and the Aaronic. He then goes into detail about the duties of members and concludes:

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence.

"He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen." (D&C 107:99-100.)

I think that includes the father of a little girl who sent a letter to me this week. She first gave her age. She loved her father and mother, she said, but "Father doesn't take Mother to the temple. I wish he would. I love them both, and I want to be sealed to them."

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty and walk in the performance of it in all diligence." That is the responsibility of every man and woman and child who has listened to this great and wonderful conference, to the inspiring messages of the Council of the Twelve and other General Authorities.

God help us to be true to our responsibility and to our callings, and especially to the responsibility we bear as fathers and mothers of the children of Zion—heaven's treasures given to us.

O Father, bless those who hold this priesthood, who have been married in accordance with thy instructions, and God help all to take advantage of this eternal blessing, that we may be united together and with thee forever, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Ricks College Choir will now favor us with "The Lord's Prayer." The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Alfred E. Rohner, formerly president of the Southwest Indian Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned for six months.

The Ricks College Choir sang "The Lord's Prayer," following which the benediction was pronounced by Elder Alfred E. Rohner, formerly president of the Southwest Indian Mission.

Conference adjourned sine die.

The choral music for the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions was furnished by the Brigham Young University Combined Choruses, with Norman Gulbrandsen conducting at the morning session and Ralph Woodward at the afternoon meeting.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday, April 4, with Richard P. Condie conducting.

The music for the Sunday morning and afternoon meetings was furnished by the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, Richard P. Condie conducting, assisted by Jay E. Welch.

The Ricks College Choir furnished the choral music for the Monday morning and afternoon sessions, with Chester W. Hill conducting.

Richard P. Condie directed the singing of the Tabernacle Choir at the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

Accompaniments and interludes on the organ were played by Alexander Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy M. Darley.

SALT LAKE MORMON
TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 9:30 to 10:00 a.m. Sunday, April 5, 1959, through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas. The broadcast was as follows:

(The Organ played, "As the Dew From Heaven Distilling," and on signal the Choir and organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard P. Condie conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Alexander Schreiner, Tabernacle Organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir first turns to a chorus from "The Creation" by Haydn concerning the goodness and beauty of the earth that the Lord God has given: "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good." And the heavenly choir sang in song divine, thus closed the sixth day: "Achieved is the glorious work the Lord beholds it, and is pleased. In lofty strains let us rejoice, our song let be the praise of God."

(The Choir sang: "Achieved Is The Glorious Work."—Haydn.)

Announcer: Alexander Schreiner recalls next the quiet and brooding beauty of the northern night as Grieg left us its lingering mood in music: "Nocturne."

(Organ Selection: "Nocturne."—Grieg.)

Announcer: And now from the Tabernacle Choir, one of the deeply searching songs of Tschaiakowsky—a song of heartfelt longing and of loneliness: "Only the Sad of Heart."

(The Choir sang: "Only The Sad Of Heart."—Tschaiakowsky.)

Announcer: "I stand all amazed at the love Jesus offers me, Confused at the grace that so fully he proffers me; I tremble to know that for me he was crucified, That for me a sinner, he suffered, he bled and died. Oh, it is wonderful that he should care for me, Enough to die for me! Oh, it is wonderful, wonderful to me!" Such are the opening words of the hymn by Charles H. Gabriel.

(The Choir sang: "I Stand All Amazed."—Gabriel.)

Announcer:

In a moving and most meaningful utterance, the Master of mankind thus prayed for those whom the Lord God had given him: "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil."<sup>1</sup> This question of being in the world but not of it, is a question of increasing concern—because, in effect, the world is ever shrinking in size—and we come ever closer to the influence and attitudes of others—and there is ever more compelling pressures to be as others are, to do as others do, with questions of compromise and of preserving principles—how far to go, how different to be, how to live comfortably among men. One of life's most important problems is learning to get along with the people with whom we live in the world, without compromising principles, and one of the plausible ways of getting along with people is to make concessions pertaining to principle—to go the way of the world, whatever way that is, which no one really knows, because the world has so many different ways. It is quite impossible to do everything everyone else wants us to do or to please all people, because everyone else wants us to do something different, and abandoning principles is no solution to the problem of getting along with people. Indeed, it is false and foolish to suppose that compromising principles will win the respect or acceptance of anyone. Compromising principles isn't getting along with people; it is simply surrender; it is simply self-betrayal. And he who betrays himself is never solidly accepted or respected anywhere by anyone. Others often judge us not so much by their standards as by our own—by what they know we believe—and we disappoint and disillusion other people when we depart from our own principles. A person who is untrue to himself is seldom trusted by anyone, ever. In his famous essay on old age, Cicero said: "As a general truth, as it seems to me, it is weariness of all pursuits that creates weariness of life."<sup>2</sup> And one thing that adds weariness and disillusionment to life is trying to be all things to everyone, instead of simply trying to be true. We lose face and deceive ourselves, when we seek supposed popularity or the supposed approval of other people at the price of principle. The only way to get along with others, is to be what we know we ought to be, to do what we know we ought to do, to give respect and to deserve respect, and not betray ourselves by compromising principles.

(Organ Selection: "Earth, With Her Ten Thousand Flowers."—Griggs.)

Announcer: With Alexander Schreiner at the organ we have heard a hymn melody by Thomas C. Griggs: "Earth, with her ten thousand flow'rs, Air, with all its beams and show'rs, Heaven's infinite expanse, Sea's resplendent countenance, All around and all above, Bear this record, God is love."

And now from Wagner's Tannhauser, the men's chorus of the Tabernacle Choir recalls the fervent-moving music of the "Pilgrim's Chorus": "Once more with joy, oh my home, I may meet thee; once more, ye fair flow'ry meadows, I greet ye."

(The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang: "Pilgrim's Chorus."—Wagner.)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir closes from Temple Square with Evan Stephen's arrangement of an old hymn tune, and with the words of William W. Phelps: "The Spirit of God like a Fire Is Burning! The latter-day glory begins to come forth; The visions and blessings of old are returning, and Angels are coming to visit the earth."

(The Choir sang: "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning."—Anon.)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the fifteen hundred forty-sixth presentation, continuing the 30th year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

Richard P. Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ. The spoken word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.

The One Hundred Twenty-ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints

The One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints convened in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 9, 10, and 11, 1959.

The general sessions of the Conference were held at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m., Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the General Priesthood meeting was held in the Tabernacle Saturday evening, October 10, at 7:00.

The proceedings of the general sessions were broadcast and telecast over Station KSL and KSL-TV at Salt Lake City, and by arrangement through KSL the following stations made available to their listening or viewing audiences one or more of the six general sessions:

In Utah: KSVC at Richfield, KSUB at Cedar City, KVEL at Vernal, KVNU at Logan, KDXU at St. George.

In Idaho: KRXX at Rexburg, KID and KID-TV at Idaho Falls, KBOI and KBOI-TV at Boise, KPST at Preston, KBRV at Soda Springs, and KLIX-TV at Twin Falls.

In Colorado: KREX at Grand Junction, KBTW at Denver.

In California: KSRO at Santa Rosa, KRDL and KVIP-TV at Redding, KEEN and KNTV at San Jose, KTVU-TV at Oakland, KTTV at Los Angeles, KERO-TV at Bakersfield, KOVR-TV at Stockton.

In Oregon: KKID at Pendleton, KGW-TV at Portland.

In Arizona: KPHO and KPHO-TV at Phoenix, KCLS at Flagstaff, KVWM at Show Low, KGUN-TV at Tucson.

In New Mexico: KRSN at Los Alamos.

In Texas: KWFT at Wichita Falls.

In Washington: KTNT-TV at Tacoma, KHQ-TV at Spokane.

In Nevada: KLRJ-TV at Las Vegas.

All general sessions of the Conference were broadcast in the Assembly Hall on Temple Square, in Barratt Hall (60 North Main Street), over a loudspeaking system and by television. Thousands, in addition, listened to the services on the Tabernacle Grounds by means of amplifying equipment.

The proceedings of the General Priesthood meeting were broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall over public address systems, and by direct wire over a public address system to members of the Priesthood in other assemblies throughout the United States and in Canada.

President David O. McKay presided, and conducted the services at each of the sessions of the Conference, including the General Priesthood meeting.

A full report of Columbia Broadcasting System's Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast is also included in this record, as is also a full account of Columbia's Church of the Air program. (See pages 126 to 130.)

Elder Joseph Anderson was Clerk of the Conference.

FIRST DAY MORNING MEETING

The opening session of the Conference convened in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, Utah, Friday, October 9 at 10:00 a.m., with President David O. McKay presiding, and conducting the exercises of the meeting.

The choral music for this Conference session was furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers of the Jordan Valley Region, Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, and Frank W. Asper at the organ.

President McKay opened the Conference with the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

This is the opening session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. We are convened in the historic Salt Lake Tabernacle on Temple Square. All the General Authorities of the Church are here in attendance excepting Elder Harold B. Lee and Elder Marion G. Romney. Elder Lee is in South America officiating at the organization of two new missions—the Andes Mission and the Brazilian South Mission. Elder Romney is making an official visit to the European Missions, during which visit he has organized the new South German Mission. Brother Benson will be here tomorrow. He is not present this morning as he has been traveling in Europe.

We have here a cable from Elder Romney from Munich, Germany: "Dear President McKay and Brethren: As General Conference approaches our thoughts are with you. We with the 35,000 Saints and missionaries in the British Mission, French, European and German-speaking missions, look to you for sustaining inspiration, so may the Lord bless and direct you. Marion Romney."

I have a cablegram from the Brazilian Mission at Sao Paulo: "The Saints and missionaries of the Brazilian Mission join in prayers for an inspired Conference."

Brother Joseph Anderson is Clerk of the Conference. For the convenience of those who are unable to enter the building, the Tabernacle being filled so far as we can see, every seat being occupied, we announce that these services and all general sessions of the Conference will be broadcast in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall by television. The general sessions of this Conference will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the west—over 21 radio stations and 17 television stations. The names of these stations have already been announced to the television and radio audiences. To the owners and managers of these various stations we wish to express our sincere appreciation.

According to a survey that was made the other day, it is possible that one million people will hear and see the proceedings of this Conference through radio and television. This figure is based on the ratio of each city carrying the Conference, and the number of viewers per city.

To the large audience assembled in the Tabernacle, to the overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, to the untold thousands comprising the television and radio audience, in behalf of the First Presidency and Council of the Twelve and other General Authorities, we bid you a hearty welcome.

Please remember than any important messages that come to us for persons attending the sessions of this Conference will be announced at the dismissal of the meetings over the public address system on the grounds.

We are favored this morning in having the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Jordan Valley Region. They will furnish music for the sessions of the Conference today. It is a joy to have these mothers present this morning.

These beautiful flowers which you see arranged on the rostrum and pulpit have come from Hawaii, and are sent with the love and greetings of the members of the Church in the Oahu Stake. We express appreciation and thanks to the members of Oahu. Our thoughts and best wishes throughout the Conference will be with them as we enjoy the fragrance and beauty of these blooms from Hawaii.

Friday, October 9

First Day

We note also the presence of prominent men: H. Aldous Dixon, Congressman; David S. King, Congressman; our Governor, George Dewey Clyde; LaMont Toronto, Secretary of State; Adiel F. Stewart, Mayor of Salt Lake City; Captain Russell H. Blood, United States Naval Hospital; his son, Russell M. of Washington, D. C.; and others undoubtedly, whom we have not been able to observe from the rostrum. With these we have our stake presidencies, bishoprics of wards, other ward and stake officers, to all of whom we extend a hearty welcome and prayers that we shall have indeed a spiritual feast together.

The music, as already announced, will be furnished for this session by the Relief Society Singing Mothers of Jordan Valley Region, Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, and Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin this session by the Relief Society Singing Mothers singing, "Open Our Eyes, O Loving and Compassionate Jesus." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Wilford W. Richards, until recently director of the Latter-day Saints Institute of Religion at Utah State University at Logan, Utah.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers sang "Open Our Eyes, O Loving and Compassionate Jesus."

Elder Wilford W. Richards offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was just offered by Elder Wilford W. Richards, until recently director of the Institute of Religion at Logan, Utah. The Relief Society Singing Mothers will now sing, "Go Ye Forth With My Word," conducted by Florence Jepperson Madsen.

---

Singing by the Singing Mothers, "Go Ye Forth With My Word."

President David O. McKay:

As I said, we are favored with having the Singing Mothers under the direction of Sister Madsen at our Conference this morning. I want to say we are blessed, and I am sure you will all agree with me. Truly the Lord said, "The song of the righteous is a prayer unto me." We are inspired with the beautiful singing of these, our mothers.

Our first speaker this morning will be David O. McKay. He will be followed by Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of the Seventy.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. MCKAY

"I charge thee therefore before God," Paul wrote to Timothy, "and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine.

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;

"And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.

"But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." (II Timothy 4:1-5.)

Those are among the last words written by Paul to his son in the faith, Timothy, who was ordained bishop of the Ephesians. When Paul wrote those words, he was a prisoner under Nero. Two charges were pressed against him: one, that he had conspired, so it was alleged by Nero's partisans, to set fire to Rome; second, he was accused of introducing a novel and unlawful religion. That was Paul's second imprisonment. Many of his friends had left him. Demas, who had been in the Church, had forsaken him and gone home. Alexander, the coppersmith, an apostate, had testified against him; but Luke remained by his side.

Evidently Peter, Paul, and other leaders of the Church were troubled in their day by apostate groups even as leaders today are troubled by apostates who usurp authority, misinterpret scripture, and preach false doctrine. In the spirit of charity perhaps we should say, troubled by apostates who are mentally ill.

It seems that every age in the world has been afflicted with just such apostates and such perverted truth, and with incorrigible youth, degenerate groups, who make every age seem worse than those which preceded it. For example, listen to this: "The world is passing through troublous times. Young people of today think of nothing but themselves. They have no reverence for parents or old age. They are impatient of all restraint. They talk as if they alone know everything. As for girls, they are forward, immodest, and unwomanly in speech, behavior, and dress." No, that was not for today—that was written in 1274 A.D.—685 years ago!

Here is another: "President Frederick C. Perry of Hamilton College, expressing distrust of gloomsters who view the world with alarm, has cited these writings taken from an Assyrian tablet dated 2800 B.C. as proof that political prophecy for a dismal future has always been prevalent:

"The earth is degenerating in these latter days. There are signs that the world is speedily coming to an end. Bribery and corruption abound. The children no longer obey their parents. Every man wants to write a book, and it is evident that the end of the world is speedily approaching." That was written 2800 B.C.!

Well, the era through which we are passing is no exception. On the flyleaf of the book, The Naked Communist, by W. Cleon Skousen, we find this quotation, (and I admonish everybody to read that excellent book of Chief Skousen's):

"The conflict between communism and freedom is the problem of our time. It overshadows all other problems. This conflict mirrors our age, its toils, its tensions, its troubles, and its tasks. On the outcome of this conflict depends the future of mankind."

Elaborating that statement, I should say that the most urgent problem of our day is a spiritual problem. I agree with one leading educator who said, and I quote: "Unless the spiritual problem is solved, civilization will fail; indeed we already have a foretaste of that failure in many parts of the world:

"The Nazi creed presents a new conception of civilization. It is the supposition, advanced with fanatical zeal, that civilization consists primarily in material achievements, and can reach its goal without ethical considerations. It accents power, authority, and obedience; denies human equality and the worth of the individual."

The False Teachings of Communism

In their false teachings the Communists accept the doctrine of Marx, who denies the existence of God, and repudiates man's immortality. Second, they deny the divinity of Jesus Christ, and of course, his resurrection. They challenge the free agency of man.

In that first sentence that I read from Paul to Timothy, Paul declares the existence of God, and we shall see how authoritatively he supports that. He declares the divinity of Jesus Christ, and the reality of his resurrection. I read again what he said to Timothy, and this is almost his farewell message to that boy, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." (II Timothy 4:1.)

The United States recently entertained the leading man of the ideology that denies the God, Jesus Christ, and the right of free agency and dignity of man. Even while he was here we could hear echoing his own words: "We remain the atheist that we have always been; we are doing as much as we can to liberate those people who are still under the spell of this religious opiate." Those are his words. He said further: "Those who expect us to abandon communism will have to wait until a shrimp learns to whistle."

A number of years ago, Lord Balfour, Prime Minister of Great Britain, delivered a lecture in the McEwen Hall of the University of Edinburgh on the subject, "The Moral Values Which Unite the Nations." In an interesting and convincing manner, Lord Balfour presented the following fundamental ties that unite the different nations of the world:

1. Common Knowledge.
2. Common Commercial Interest.
3. The Intercourse of Diplomatic Relationship.
4. The Bonds of Human Friendship.

The audience greeted his masterful address with a great outburst of applause. As the presiding officer arose to express his appreciation and that of the audience, a Japanese student, who was doing graduate work at the University of Edinburgh stood up, and leaning over the balcony, said, "But, Mr. Balfour, what about Jesus Christ?"

Mr. Robert E. Spear, to whom Professor Lang related this incident, writes: "One could have heard a pin drop in the hall. Everyone felt at once the justice of the rebuke. The leading statesman of the greatest Christian empire in the world had been dealing with the different ties that are to unite mankind, and had omitted the one fundamental and essential bond. And everyone felt, too, the dramatic element in the situation—that the reminder of his forgetfulness had come from a far-away non-Christian land."

"Preach the word," Paul admonishes Timothy. What "word"? That "... Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." (Ibid., 1:10.) Those words were named in that letter. Let us consider that.

"Behold the man," said Pontius Pilate, Roman governor of Judea, as Jesus, mockingly bedecked with a purple robe, his hair platted with a crown of thorns, stood before the mob who cried, "Crucify him; crucify him!"

As on the occasion of that historic trial, so through the ages men have beheld Christ from different viewpoints. Some who reject him as venomously as did the rabble, see in him and in his disciples "investors of a Christian moral system that has undermined and sapped the vigor of the European world." Others with clearer insight, begotten by experience, behold him as the originator of a system that "promotes industry, honesty, truth, purity, and kindness, a system that upholds law, favors liberty; is essential to it, and would unite men in one great brotherhood."

Others behold him as the "one perfect character—the peerless personality of history," but deny his divinity. Millions accept him as the Great Teacher, whose teachings, however, are not applicable to modern social conditions. A few—O how few!—of the approximately two billion inhabitants of the globe, accept him for what he really is—"the Only Begotten of the Father; who came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness."

Today civilized nations are sitting on a mountain of explosives, accumulated in defiance of Christ's teachings. Let the heat of hatred, suspicion, and greed become a little more intense, and there will be such an international explosion as will greatly retard, if not forcibly drive from the midst of mankind, the hoped-for peace heralded by the heavenly hosts when Christ as a babe was born in Bethlehem.

Prove it as a fact, and it is, that Christ did appear after death as a glorified resurrected Being, and you have the answer to the question of the ages: "If a man die, shall he live again?" Let us look at the deep significance of the testimony of the disciples of Jesus, which may be better understood when we realize that with Jesus' death the apostles were stricken with gloom. When he was crucified, their hopes all but died. That his death was a reality to the disciples is shown in their intense grief, in the statement of Thomas, in the moral perplexity of Peter, and in the evident preparations for a permanent burial of their Master. Notwithstanding the assurance of Christ, often repeated during the two and a half years he was with them, that he would return to them after death, the apostles seemed not to have accepted, or at least not comprehended the statement as a literal fact.

What was it, we ask the world, that suddenly changed these disciples to confident, fearless, heroic preachers of the gospel of Jesus Christ? It was a revelation that Christ had risen from the grave, his promises had been kept, his Messianic mission fulfilled. "The final and absolute seal of genuineness had been put on all his claims, and the indelible stamp of a divine authority upon all his teachings. The gloom of death had been banished by the glorious light of the presence of the risen, glorified Lord and Savior."

On the evidence of these unprejudiced, unexpected, incredulous witnesses the resurrection has its impregnable foundation. There was one young man among them. I do not know whether we know about his life, but I like to think of him as a sort of independent thinker, not paying much attention to his mother's religion—his mother had joined the Christian Church, but he did not pay much attention to it until he was disturbed one night by his mother's voice asking him to rise quickly, "don't stop to dress, throw a cloak around your body and rush to Gethsemane and tell Jesus that Judas and soldiers are coming to arrest him." I think that young man who fled naked from the men who snatched the sheet from his body, was John Mark, the author of one of the four Gospels. We know he did join the Church, later, and that he labored with Peter. We know that Paul, in that letter to Timothy, said: "Bring Mark with you. He is profitable to our ministry, and let us hear his testimony." (See II Timothy 4:11.) We know he went on a mission to the northern part of Africa, and you travelers today can walk over ruins built to his memory.

Testimony of Mark

We have no evidence that Mark joined the Church while the Savior was on the earth. Undoubtedly the Savior was in Mark's home. At any rate we are justified in assuming that he was acquainted with the Master. Mark does not himself recount any appearance of the Risen Lord, but he testifies that the Lord would meet his disciples. From Mark we hear the glorious proclamation of the first empty tomb in all the world. For the first time in history the words "Here lies" were supplanted by the divine message, "He is risen." No one can doubt that Mark was not convinced in his soul of the reality of the empty tomb, and if my inference is right, he knew about the trial, the humiliation to which Jesus was subjected, and the crucifixion, and he became a minister of the gospel. To the proclaiming of this truth he devoted his life, and if tradition can be relied upon, he sealed his testimony with his blood.

Testimony of Luke

The text we read said that Luke stood by Paul's side at the jail. It was not long after that before Paul, according to tradition, was beheaded. Luke was a physician. He spent many years of his life studying about this man, Jesus, who was crucified. He experienced the darkness that spread over that country when Jesus was crucified. According to all trustworthy testimony we have the gospel of Luke as it came from his own hand. In chapter 24 Luke testifies to the divine message: "Why seek ye the living among the dead?"

"He is not here, but is risen." (Luke 24:5-6.)

With equal assurance as to their accuracy we can accept his statement and witness in regard to Peter's and Paul's and other apostles' testimony regarding the resurrection. "To whom also he [Christ] shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." (Acts 1:3.)

Who can doubt Luke's absolute confidence in the reality of the risen Redeemer? Contrast his testimony, his life, with that of upstarts who deny the existence of God and laugh at the claims of Jesus Christ as the Redeemer.

It is true that neither Mark nor Luke testify as to having personally seen the Risen Lord, and therefore some urge that their recorded testimonies cannot be taken as firsthand evidence. That they do not so testify, and yet were convinced that others did see him, shows how incontrovertible was the evidence among the apostles and other disciples that the resurrection was a reality.

Testimony of Paul

Fortunately, however, there is a document which does give the personal testimony of an eyewitness, a witness to an appearance of Jesus after his death and burial. This personal testimony also corroborates the testimony not only of these two men, Mark and Luke, but of others also. I have in mind Saul, a

Friday, October 9

First Day

Jew of Tarsus, educated at the feet of Gamaliel, a strict Pharisee, and before his conversion a bitter persecutor of all who believed in Jesus of Nazareth. And there is a quotation from the oldest authentic document in existence relating or testifying to the resurrection of Christ, in which we find Saul's (Paul's) words, sent back to people who had joined the Church, whom he loved and who loved him, saying:

"For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

"And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

"And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve:

"After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

"After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

"And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

"For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God." (I Cor. 15:3-9.)

Testimony of Modern Revelation

In addition to the ancient apostles, we have the testimony of the Prophet Joseph Smith who gives in an unequivocal description the following stirring testimony in relation to his first vision:

"... When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages ... standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!" (P. of G. P., Joseph Smith 2:17.) These words were spoken nearly two thousand years after the events to which I have already called your attention!

The Latter-day Saint Belief

Thus, my dear fellow workers and my friends in the world, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stands with Peter, with Paul, with James, and with all the other apostles in accepting the resurrection, not only as being literally true, but also as the consummation of Christ's divine mission on earth. Other great religious leaders among the nations of the world since history began have taught virtue, temperance, self-control, service, obedience to righteousness and duty; some have taught a belief in one supreme ruler and in a hereafter; but only Christ broke the seal of the grave and revealed death as the door to immortality and eternal life.

If Christ lived after death, so shall men, each one taking his place in the next world for which he is best fitted. Since love is as eternal as life, the message of the resurrection is the most comforting, the most glorifying ever given to man; for when death takes a loved one from us, we can look with assurance into the open grave and say, "He is not here; he will rise again."

My dear fellow workers, it is just as easy for me to accept as a divine truth the fact that Christ preached to the spirits in prison while his body lay in the tomb as it is for me to look at you from this pulpit. It is true! It is just as easy for me to realize—and note this—that one may so live that he may receive impressions and direct messages through divine inspiration. The veil is thin between those who hold the priesthood and divine messengers on the other side of the veil.

Let us say today as Paul wrote to Timothy: "Preach the word ... do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." (II Timothy 4:2, 5.) "... The Lord is God, and beside him there is no Savior.

"Great is his wisdom, marvelous are his ways, and the extent of his doings none can find out.

"His purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand.

"From eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail.

"For thus saith the Lord—I, the Lord, am merciful and gracious unto those who fear me, and delight to honor those who serve me in righteousness and in truth unto the end.

"Great shall be their reward and eternal shall be their glory." (D&C 76:1-6.)

God help us in this age so threatened with an ideology of benighted people of disbelief in God our Father and in his Son Jesus Christ and in the restored gospel through those divine Personages, to preach the Word and to be true to our callings no matter what or where they may be, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder A. Theodore Tuttle of the First Council of Seventy will now speak to us.

ELDER ALBERT THEODORE TUTTLE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My dear brothers and sisters, my testimony this morning is that the soul-stirring message that we have heard has come from the Lord; that his speaker was the officially chosen servant to speak to the world today, President David O. McKay. Historically, this has always been the mission of a prophet—not so much to foretell as to forthtell. I trust that many besides the group in this congregation will have borne upon their souls the same testimony that this message comes from the Lord through the Lord's servant.

Within the past week we have had an experience in our home that has caused me some serious reflection. We have been blessed with our sixth child—a sweet little girl. Last Sunday morning I was called to the hospital about 4:00 a.m. As I was driving there I noticed that in my haste I had forgotten my wallet. I thought for a moment that I should return and get it, and then I thought, "I haven't time." Later, I stood by the bedside of my companion and observed the processes that are normal and natural in childbirth. When in a moment of anguish a poignant cry of pain escaped her lips, that wallet didn't seem very important.

Now, I am not trying to depreciate a wallet, nor the temporal security that it symbolizes, for I think it is necessary, and that the Lord intends by prudence that we have sufficient of the world's goods. However, I think there is something purifying that comes into the heart of a father when he stands by the side of his wife during the processes of childbirth, and I thought of the real values of life. The things that took on the most significance were life itself and its purpose.

The wallet was not of most value. Life and the life of a loved one was. The family and its choice relationships assumed their proper importance. The love that exists between a husband and a wife, how precious it became! And then above all, the thing of prime importance was the knowledge of a gospel plan of salvation that gives meaning and purpose, direction and worth, to life—a gospel plan that raises the child-birth process from a purely physical thing to a partnership with our Father in heaven in keeping his first commandment, and in bringing his spiritual children to tabernacle in temporal bodies.

I was grateful for the knowledge that our family ties, sealed by the Holy Priesthood of the Lord and based upon obedience in righteousness to his commandments, would continue throughout eternity. I was grateful for the knowledge that love, as President McKay mentioned, will endure forever, and that those things that matter most will survive and have meaning not only in this sphere, but in others also.

Now, as I pay tribute to my wonderful wife, I pay tribute to another group of women in this Church. I looked into their faces as I came to the pulpit this morning. These are the wives of the General Authorities. I think all of us know that at least once a week they share their husbands with all of the Church—always two days, sometimes three, oftentimes more. For the wives there is no compliment on a fine talk after the conference, no thanks for some question answered, for some help given, oftentimes not even a thought. However, few of these Brethren could serve as well without the quiet, sustaining, invisible, yet real strength that comes from the companionship of a good wife. The women's work is in the home with their children or grandchildren, sustaining their companions, serving in the Church and community, and sharing their husbands with the rest of the Church. Although their work has an everydayness about it, it requires as much service and dedication as other kinds of work.

Then, as I go about in the wards and stakes, I find literally thousands of wives

Friday, October 9

First Day

who do the same thing, who give service, even sacrifice, in permitting their husbands who hold the priesthood, to go to countless meetings and give thousands of hours of service to their fellow men.

Surely Milton must have been thinking of such as these as he penned these words in the sonnet on his blindness: "They also serve who only stand and wait." I am humbled by the great service that is given in this Church by these women, of whom this great Singing Mother's Chorus is but symbolic.

I would pay my respects, too, to one other group in the Church—the unsung and unheralded. Without their efforts the work of this Church would come to a standstill. These are the office personnel, the secretaries, the office managers, the custodians, the department heads, the clerks, the stenographers, the operators—all who give so unstintedly of their time and service in the Church Office Building, and elsewhere, because of their spirit of dedication and devotion to this work.

I humbly pray that the Lord will bless his children who serve him. I am grateful beyond expression for a Church that is organized by the Lord Jesus Christ, that permits, even obligates, his children to serve in his cause, a Church in which the lay members not only participate, but lead, a Church in which each one of us can find expression for his talents and growth in his character as he strives to earn his salvation and to serve his fellow men.

I know that God lives, that Jesus Christ is his Son; that he lives, that he directs this Church and his prophets here on this earth. I am grateful for the Church organization that gives us a medium of service to mankind and growth for ourselves. May each of us in our own contribution find satisfaction and joy in service to our fellow men and to our Lord, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER WILLIAM J. CRITCHLOW, JR.

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

President McKay, my brothers, sisters and friends:

President McKay, setting me apart one year ago, charged me: "to be a special witness to the name of Christ in all the world." I shall use my few minutes pursuing the business of that charge.

In fancy, I made a pilgrimage back through nineteen centuries of time to Palestine. I went to seek the man of Galilee called Jesus. I fancied I was in that fabulous city of Tiberius on the shore of the Sea of Galilee where I observed, along the water's edge, miles of palaces and fashionable residences surrounded by palm groves and rich gardens, gay with tropical luxuriance.

On an almost deserted thoroughfare I saw the markets of rich merchants and the stands of oriental trades people.

Approaching a merchant, I inquired if he knew the whereabouts of the man of Galilee, named Jesus. For a moment he just stared at me; then said, "Where have you been? Look at this deserted street. Only minutes ago he came this way going west, and all the customers followed him. I would have followed, too, had I someone to watch my merchandise."

I overtook the multitude before it settled on a little hill. Fortunately, I found myself near him with sitting space for some of you out there who, in fancy, will stretch your imagination one thousand nine hundred years back into the past. Come quickly. He is speaking:

"Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

"Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

"Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." (See Matt. chapters 5-7 for Sermon on the Mount.)

He pauses, and arises from his sitting position upon a large rock as if to survey the multitude.

He is tall in stature, perfectly formed without spot or blemish. He wears a tunic and an outer robe. Sandals are on his feet.

He settles back upon the rock and speaks:

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

"Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

I find it difficult to concentrate on what he is saying, just for gazing at him.

His brow is smooth.

His complexion is clear.

His eyes are blue.

His hair is long.

His beard is brown like his hair.

His every feature is perfect.

His motions are graceful.

His voice is soft and low.*

Listen to him: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

"Give us this day. . . ."

Need I repeat more of it?

"Lay up not for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal;

"But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal;

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. . . .

"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

"Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. . . .

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. . . .

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

You priesthood fathers would bless your wives and children if you would gather them around you and read to them the full text of the great Sermon on the Mount. Do it soon. It is the greatest speech ever delivered from the lips of men. It is the most widely circulated speech ever heard among men. It has been printed in thousands of books and uttered by thousands of speakers from thousands of pulpits to millions of people.

Another time, when he sought seclusion, he went into a desert place to be away from the crowds. The multitude found him, and he received them. And when the day began to wear away, he gathered up five loaves and two fishes, blessed them, and fed five thousand people. After the feeding, there remained twelve baskets of fragments.

Another time he fed four thousand, after blessing seven loaves and a few fishes.

The feeding of these thousands was only one of the many kinds of miracles he performed.

He cleansed the leper;

—turned water into wine;

—stilled the wind;

—calmed the waves;

—walked on the water;

—healed the sick and the halt;

—cast out evil spirits;

—returned sight to the blind;

—restored life to the dead.

Words of his deeds spread throughout the countryside, even to Greece and Rome, and when it was time for the Feast of the Passover, Jerusalem was crowded with people from far and near who had come to see this marvelous man of Galilee. And they were not disappointed. Down from the Mount of Olives and through the streets of Jerusalem he came, riding a little donkey.

*This pen picture is by a Roman trader who, on the old silk road to China, paused in Palestine.

Friday, October 9

First Day

His path was strewn with flowers, palm branches, and the robes of friends who watched his entry and who sang:

"Hosanna to the Son of David:

"Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

"Hosanna in the highest." (See Mark 11:9-10.)

Witnessing the procession, I fancy, were two slaves, filled with rabid curiosity.

"Who is he?" asked one of the other.

"I don't know," was the reply.

"Is he a king?"

"No, he's not a king."

"Well, is he crazy?"

"No—he's not crazy."

"Then who is he?"

"I don't know—he's not a king—he's something greater than a king."

Not all who watched his triumphal entry into Jerusalem were his friends. Members of the Jewish Sanhedrin, disturbed by Jesus' miracles and preaching, and definitely alarmed by his growing popularity with the people, plotted as they watched, for his arrest—even for his death. Not many hours later they bribed one of his apostles with thirty pieces of silver to betray him. After a trial of mockery, held informally, irregularly, and illegally during the night while his friends, the people, slept, he was scourged, then led to a place called Calvary where he was nailed to a cross. Among his last words were, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." (Luke 23:34.)

The morrow was the Sabbath of the Lord their God. Lest his presence on the cross desecrate that holy day, his body was hurriedly removed and laid away in a borrowed tomb where it lay for three days.

Resurrected, he tarried off and on with his disciples for forty days.

One day, as he walked with his disciples on a lonely road, he paused to bless them and then in their presence he ascended heavenward. As he disappeared a heavenly messenger announced:

"... Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1:11.)

Whence came this Jesus of Nazareth—this man of Galilee?

Some thirty years before his ministry began, Mary, his mother, laden with child and in the throes of her travail, had just arrived at Bethlehem.

Hers had been a long four-or-five day journey on the back of a little donkey, when she was not afoot. When she arrived, there was no place for her at the inn where she had expected to stay, and no one round about would give her space to stay. So a bed of clean straw was hastily made for her in a manger in a nearby stable.

There, Jesus of Nazareth was born. The dumb animals tethered there were the first to hear the infant cry.

"And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

"And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

"And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger." (Luke 2:8-12.)

And there in the manger the shepherds found him.

Later wise men from the East brought the babe gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh.

If Jesus had come, as these wise men, riding on a camel, bearing gold, frankincense, and myrrh, with a crown on his head, he undoubtedly would have been accepted—king of the Jews.

His coming had been long awaited, but they could not accept one, born so humbly and lowly in a stable.

He came—born away from home, in obscurity.

He preached—the clearest, most simple, teacher of profound truth that ever came among men.

He healed—

He called followers about him—even apostles.

He suffered—betrayed, denied, and deserted.

He died—a horrible death upon a cross.

He was resurrected—after three days in a tomb.

He lives.

He will return again.

Listen; these words are his:

"I am from above.

I came down from heaven.

All power is given unto me.

I am the light.

Ask in my name.

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

I am the way.

Keep my commandments.

I am the Lord of the Sabbath.

I am greater than the temple.

I am the life.

I am the resurrection and the life.

I am the truth.

Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

I will rise from the dead.

He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.

Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well for so I am."

"I know," said the woman at the well, "that Messias cometh, which is called Christ."

Jesus answered—"I that speak unto thee am he." (John 4:25-26.)

When Caiaphas shouted—"... tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God."

Jesus answered—"Thou hast said." (Matt 26:63-64.)

"Nearly two thousand years have passed and none has reigned, or served, or dreamed who has so touched and moulded human life. He is the ideal—the example—the greatest unalterable, wholesome, growing influence in a world of blood and tears. Books on his life fill libraries; the name of Pharaohs, Caesars, emperors, kings of all ages that have come and gone are but ghosts upon a printed page. Their legions dust upon the land; their proud armadas rust upon an ocean floor."

"But this one solitary life, surpasses all in power. Its influence is the one remaining hope of future years."

In a Roman court, nearly two thousand years ago, the skeptic Pontius Pilate demanded of Jesus: "Art thou a king?"

Jesus answered: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

The perplexed Pilate muttered: "What is truth?" (John 18:37-38.)

The truth, my brothers and sisters and friends is,—and I say it in all solemnity—it is my witness: Jesus, the man of Galilee, is Christ, the Son of the Living God.

Pilate spoke again: "What shall I do with this man?"

What he did is history. Now twenty centuries later—what will you, my listening brothers, sisters and friends, do with this man?

Speaking for myself, I have accepted him as the Son of God.

He is the living Son of the Living God—that is my testimony—my witness—and I declare it boldly, yet humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder William J. Critchlow, Jr., Assistant to the Council of the Twelve. We shall now hear from Elder Mark E. Petersen of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER MARK E. PETERSEN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

With you, my brothers and sisters, I have been very deeply impressed by the conference session this morning. I do not know when I have been so deeply touched by the words of a prophet of God as I have been this morning by the remarkable address of our President.

I love this President. He is the prophet of Almighty God. I bear you my solemn testimony he is the prophet, seer, and revelator of the Almighty for us today, and I testify to you that if we follow in his footsteps and accept his teachings the Lord will bless us and prosper us and guide us throughout our days.

And I have been so deeply touched, with you, by these other two addresses that we heard. I am so grateful for these testimonies pertaining to the Savior of the world. I love Jesus Christ. I love him as my Redeemer and my Savior. I know that you love him likewise, but I know that our love for him is interpreted strictly in terms of our service to him. "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." (John 14:21.) So said the Savior.

Friday, October 9

First Day

I would like to talk with you today in a projection of some of the ideas presented to us by President McKay. These words that he gave us, that we must be preachers of the Word, and be evangelists for the Lord, are so filled with meaning for us all. I hope each one of us will take these words to heart. Each one of us is a minister. Each one of us is an evangelist for Christ. Where is your ministry?

I would like to talk with you about your ministry among your own children, because you are ministers of the Lord unto your children, and if you will do your duty by your children, you will be as saviors on Mount Zion to them. But if you fail in your responsibility in serving the Lord pertaining to your children, they may go astray, and the Lord has said that their sins shall be upon the heads of the parents.

A few days ago I received a letter. It is like some other letters I have received, and I would like to read a part of this letter to you. It comes from a mother. She says: "I have a daughter who is 15. Her boy friend is 16. They have been going steady for over a year. We have just now learned that they are in serious trouble. For the first few months of their friendship they dated only occasionally. Then they decided to 'go steady.' That was the beginning of their trouble. It seemed they were always in each other's company. Now my little 15-year-old girl is soon to become a mother, and we are all just broken-hearted."

This letter is typical of a nation-wide problem, one which has become of major concern to both federal and local officials, and which poses a difficult situation for school executives in many parts of the nation. It is a situation which is forcing an increasing number of young people into child marriages and child divorces, with broken hearts and broken lives, and the problem is a growing one.

In the September 6, 1959 issue of Parade magazine there appeared an article with pictures discussing this problem. It was entitled, "Married Teen-agers." One of the pictures showed a 17-year-old mother of triplets. The article discussed conditions in Dallas, Texas, and reported that in the schools of that city there are 480 married children: 459 in senior high schools; 12 in junior high schools; and 9 in elementary schools.

The Family Service Society of San Bernardino County in California reports that from the year 1940 to 1958 the number of marriages involving two teen-agers increased twelve times, and the marriages involving one teen-ager increased six times. The average age of these children is 17 for girls and 18 for boys, but many of them involve 13, 14, and 15 year-old girls, and 14, 15, and 16 year-old boys.

The U.S. News & World Report for December 12, 1958 reports that there are child mothers, some married and some not, in twenty-two of the twenty-three high schools in the city of Washington, D. C., as well as in four of the elementary schools of that city.

The Associated Press, in a nationally published article written out of Washington by Roger Greene, dated August 9 of this year, reports: "An all-time record of babies born out of wedlock—more than 200,000 a year—has set off a new storm of controversy over ebbing standards of American morality. . . . Latest figures show the rate of such births per 1,000 unmarried females has tripled in the last two decades, with a particularly alarming rise among teen-age girls. . . . 5,000 illegitimate babies are born each year to girls under 15. . . . A tragic by-product is that at least 20,000 young unwed mothers sell their babies on the 'black market' annually, with price tags ranging from $1,500 to $3,000."

Life magazine recently carried an article on this trend toward child marriages resulting from the present dating tendencies of American children. After showing what leads up to these tragic marriages, the article discussed the divorces which result. It quoted Judge Willard Gatling of Charlotte, North Carolina on the subject. Said the judge: "Teen-age marriage has almost no possibility of succeeding. Ninety percent are total failures."

The fact is that neither the boy nor the girl at this tender age is in any way prepared for marriage. The boy and girl want what they think is the fun, but they do not want the responsibility. Said one youngster quoted in Life magazine: "I'm a party boy. I just ain't cut out to be married."

What are the reasons for these early child marriages? Why do we have so many of these adolescent tragedies? Let me list a few of the reasons.

1. Early dating. Unfortunately this early dating is often encouraged by parents, school officials, and occasionally by some church groups. Children are actually urged at times to date when they are but 11, 12, and 13 years of age.

2. Early dating soon grows into early steady dating. Some go steady at 13 and 14, while many do so at 15 and 16.

3. Steady dating is encouraged by steady dancing, where one boy dances with one girl all evening.

4. Early steady dating demands the use of automobiles. In North Carolina, where one study was conducted it was learned that many ninth grade girls, 13 and 14 years old, dated only boys with cars, and many of those boys were under 16, which is the legal driving age. One 13-year-old boy said, "I asked a girl of my age for a date. She asked me if I drove a car. I said no. 'Well,' she said, 'come back and ask me when you do.'"

5. Early steady dating and the free use of automobiles by children lead to early intimacies and immorality. Said one girl who was asked about this subject: "We loved each other so much, and we were together just all the time. And there's not much to do, you know—the drive-in movies, and the movies downtown, and that's about all. So after you've seen all the movies, you just park the car and if you're in love—well, that's it."

6. Early intimacies bring early child marriages.

7. Child marriages bring on divorce, as Judge Gatling said, in ninety percent of the cases.

Writing in Better Homes and Gardens magazine recently, Howard Williams discussed the great moral breakdown of the so-called "enlightened era," and said: "Promiscuity, illegitimacy, heart-break, and misery are all that the enlightened era has brought us. Let's put an end to them."

But how can we put an end to them? In order to do so we must see the problem clearly. To help us in our study permit me to ask some pointed questions of you as parents.

1. How early should young people date? Do you think it is wise for 12 and 13 and 14 year-old children to date?

2. Should schools or other public organizations sponsor dances for early teens and require that only couples come? Should schoolteachers force early dating upon these youngsters? By what right do they exclude children from school-sponsored socials because they or their parents oppose dating at this early age?

3. At what age should girls begin wearing lipstick and dressing and acting like grown-ups? At 12 or 13, or even younger? This may seem like a trivial thing, but does not the early use of lipstick mean an early invitation to dating, and does not early dating so often lead to early tragedy?

4. Should little boys and girls kiss and neck? The youngsters themselves should think carefully about that question. They may kid themselves into thinking that early necking is a sign that they have now grown up. But is it? In reality it is but the first step to the more serious and tragic petting which drags so many 13, 14, 15, and 16 year-old children down into a loss of virtue and into forced marriages or illegal operations.

5. When should young people begin going steady? Should it be while they are yet in junior and senior high school? Or should steady dating be reserved for the time when young people are actually considering marriage, and are old enough to consider it sensibly and realistically, and are capable of carrying on the responsibilities of marriage?

6. After their first ruinous experience in child marriage and child divorce, do the young people consider that in the future they might desire a good marriage, a permanent one, with a respectable and well-established partner? And do they consider that when they come to that age, the good fellows and the desirable girls may not wish to marry someone else's castoff?

First Day

What are some of the remedies for this situation? First and foremost I believe that it lies in large part in the parents' assuming their proper role as guardians of their children. Parents need not forever be slaves to the philosophy that they must obey their children in every whim. Parents must assume the position of leadership in the family. They must make the basic decisions of family life and not leave these decisions to the spoiled children of the household.

In an article in a recent issue of This Week magazine, under the caption, "Don't Let Them Grow up Too Fast," the author referred to a study made in North Carolina, where parents got together to slow down early dating and early marriage in that state. The parents formed a league to do so. The article said: "The kids themselves approve of the slow-down program. They don't want to be pushed into adulthood. And far from resenting clearcut rules and regulations they appreciate guidance and discipline."

"One 14 year-old girl said: 'Since my parents joined the league, they've begun telling me what I can do and what I can't do, and frankly, it's a big load off my mind. And anyway, isn't that what parents are for?'"

Parents must screen the playmates and dating partners of their children. Parents must decide when the child is old enough to date. Parents must provide chaperonage for early social activities of their children. Parents must make certain that their children have a proper conception of true values, moral, economic, and religious.

It is an interesting thing that studies made in the Family Service Agency of San Bernardino showed that among divorcees forty-three percent never went to church at all; thirty-five percent went occasionally; and only twenty-two percent attended church with any regularity.

Parents must decide on the use of the family car by their youngsters. In this connection they must be obedient to the law, and not permit their children to drive until they reach legal age.

They might also have in mind the paragraph about automobiles contained in an article by Jacob M. Braude, circuit court judge in Chicago, who listed the fifteen chief causes of juvenile delinquency, and said:

"A boy or a girl under 21 has no business owning a car, period. These young people simply don't have the sense of moral and social responsibility that should go hand in hand with the ownership of an automobile."

"Now I don't mean by this that it is wrong for properly licensed boys or girls to drive the family car under effective parental supervision. . . . But the key to the automobile problem is proper adult supervision—and this is difficult, indeed, when the juvenile himself owns the car. Youngsters who buy automobiles legitimately are faced with the constant drain of buying gas and maintaining the car, a problem that too many of them solve with a syphon hose or money stolen from home. A large percentage of the sex offenses can also be traced directly to juvenile ownership of cars."

Parents must be exemplary themselves. How can they expect their children to respect them if they themselves are not respectable, or if they themselves are not obedient to law and order? How can parents expect their children to accept their discipline if the parents refuse to discipline themselves?

And then parents, as adult citizens and taxpayers, must express themselves on school problems which affect their own children. They must become vocal and active members of parent-teacher groups and other organizations which can sway opinion and policy with respect to the social life of their children at school. Parents must co-operate with law and enforcement officers in their efforts to preserve law and order in their communities.

Parents must develop good character in their children, a love of righteousness, faith, a respect for other people, and they must help their children to overcome selfishness, and to live for the future, and not for the momentary lusts or so-called pleasures of today.

Does it seem that I lay too much upon the parents? Not when you realize that the parents hold the key to the situation.

The Boy Scouts of America engaged the Institute of Social Research of the University of Michigan to make a study of adolescent young people. That study showed that the vast majority of young people—ninety-four percent—desire and expect that their parents will provide leadership for them and give them guidance; ninety-five percent said they are willing to take parents' rule on what time to come in at night; eighty-seven percent are willing to accept their parents' advice pertaining to money; seventy-six percent accept their parents' guidance in personal problems; sixty-two percent accept their parents' advice on how to act when out in a crowd; ninety percent believe that when parents make rules, those rules are for the benefit of the youngsters, and not for the convenience of the parents.

But the survey also showed a tragic note—the parents do not live up to the expectations of the youngsters. They fail to provide the leadership their own children expect of them.

When the study endeavored to find out how many parents plan family activities to include the children, it was discovered that only seventeen percent provide such activities regularly; sixty percent only occasionally; and twenty-two percent not at all.

All of this points up the wisdom of the Lord in laying upon the parents the responsibility of rearing and training their own children, and adding that if they fail to do so, the sin be upon the head of the parents.

Now I ask you—do you want an early child marriage for your youngster, with only a ten percent chance of that marriage being successful? Do you want to take the chance on immorality that forcefully confronts you if you permit your child to date early, and especially if you permit the child to date steadily?

Are you willing to assume the full guardianship of your own child, and protect that child from its own whims and the whims of others?

Are you willing to stand at the crossroads with your child and protect him or her from the temptation and degradation that usually accompanies early and steady dating? Are you willing to do for your child what the Lord asks you to do, to rear that child as a faithful Latter-day Saint, a good citizen, and give him an opportunity to work out his future successfully?

You as parents hold the key to the situation. You are the custodians and the guardians of your own children. If you do not guard and protect and rear them, who will?

I humbly and earnestly pray that we will assume the responsibility which is ours, and love our children well enough to train them and guide them, and give to them the leadership and direction which most young people expect of their parents, and this is my humble and earnest prayer, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

FIRST DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

Conference reconvened Friday afternoon, October 9, at 2:00 p.m.

President David O. McKay presided, and conducted the services.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers of the Jordan Valley Region, with Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, provided the choral music for this session. Elder Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City in the second session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. This session of the Conference will be broadcast as a public service over the television and radio stations throughout the west. These services are also being broadcast in the Assembly and in Barratt Hall by television.

We are favored again this afternoon by the persence of the Relief Society Singing Mothers of the Jordan Valley Region, with Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting, and Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Relief Society Singing Mothers rendering, "Lord, Hear Our Prayer." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Zeph Y. Erekson, formerly president of the Australian Mission.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

To stand before this great body, members of the Church, mostly priesthood, is something that creates in my soul a feeling of awe and of responsibility. I trust that I may have the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord in the words that I may utter. I am very grateful for what was said in our meeting this morning by our President and those who followed after him. I am sure that we have been edified in the remarks that have been made, and I feel my dependence upon the Spirit of the Lord to aid me in saying something that might be profitable on this occasion.

There may be some who wonder why we hold general conference twice a year, bring our people, particularly the presiding officers, together from all parts of the Church. But, brethren, I do not know what we would do if this privilege should be withdrawn from us. I have wondered what, in the days of Peter, James, and John and following, the condition might have been if they could have met quarterly and semi-annually in conferences. Perhaps the apostasy would have been postponed, if not altogether avoided. But those privileges were not theirs.

I think I feel the importance of these gatherings, and the bringing together the men who hold the priesthood particularly, to receive counsel, to be encouraged, and to return to their stakes renewed in their spirits. We can reach our people today better than they could anciently. We have many facilities that they did not have, and our people are naturally under present conditions, drawn closer together than they were in former days.

And now, my good brethren and sisters, what is our duty? To keep the commandments of God. And we are instructed to do that in our quarterly conferences, in our general conferences, and in all the meetings that are held in the various stakes and wards of Zion. Even as it is, there are conditions arising which should cause us to be alert, on our guard, diligent, persevering in the keeping of the commandments of the Lord, and in instructing the members of the Church. By all means, this is needed. Satan is not dead.

I think frequently of the words of the Lord to John when he said that Satan raged because "he knoweth, that he hath but a short time." (Rev. 12:12.) And he is more active today, perhaps, than ever before in the history of the world. His emissaries get among the Latter-day Saints. Some of them are very cunning and crafty. Some of them at one time had the light and understanding of the gospel but have lost it. They come among our Latter-day Saints, and if we are not prepared by our faith, by our obedience, and knowledge of the gospel, many of us stand in danger of being led astray.

The Prophet Joseph Smith made the statement that a man cannot be saved in ignorance. When he said man, he meant mankind. Ignorance of what? Of the saving principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Now we are taught faith in God our Father and in his Son Jesus Christ. We are taught to study, make ourselves familiar with his life when he was upon the face of the earth, why he came, the nature of his work, how it concerns us, to prepare ourselves by our study and by our faith to stand worthy before him in the keeping of his commandments.

We read in the Doctrine and Covenants where the Lord says that all those who repent and are baptized are to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. Now we baptize our children at the age of eight years—that is the age that the Lord has designated as the age of accountability. Little children before that age are redeemed, should they die, without any act upon their part. One of the most wicked doctrines ever taught in this world was that little children were born in sin, contaminated, and have to be cleansed from that sin for which they themselves were not responsible. Little children were innocent in the beginning, the Lord says, and by his decree until they reach the age of accountability they are free from sin, but from that age on they are under the necessity of baptism for the remission of sins, and entrance into the Church and kingdom of God.

Now, we are promised that when we are baptized, if we are true and faithful, we will have the guidance of the Holy Ghost. What is the purpose of it? To teach us, to direct us, to bear witness to us of the saving principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Every child old enough to be baptized, and who is baptized, is entitled to the guidance of the Holy Ghost. I have heard people say that a little child eight years of age could not understand. I know better than that. I had a testimony of this truth when I was eight years old, coming through the Holy Ghost. I have had it ever since.

We are commanded also to bring up our children in light and truth, to teach them the fundamental principles of the gospel, so that when they grow older they will understand, and have a knowledge of the gospel, a testimony of its truth, and be prepared to resist the persuasions and doctrines and teachings of those who would destroy that belief.

I am grateful for our Primary organizations and our Sunday Schools, and the other organizations of the Church, but brethren and sisters, the Lord has not placed all the responsibility upon our auxiliary organizations, nor upon the bishops of wards to teach the children of Zion the gospel of Jesus Christ. That should be taught them in their homes.

As we travel from stake to stake, we discover in many places that children who are eight years of age, nine years of age, even older sometimes, have not been baptized. Why? Who has neglected this? We cannot blame the child, but somebody is at fault. When a child gets to be nine or ten or eleven or more years of age and has not been baptized a member of this Church, then someone's at fault. Primarily, I would say that fault is in the home. But the fault is not altogether in the home. The fault rests with those who have charge in the wards of looking after the interests of the young, and the bishops who are to look after all the members of the Church. No child should be permitted to go unbaptized after he or she reaches the eighth year, and when there is that kind of neglect someone is responsible.

Friday, October 9

Bring up your children, my brethren and sisters, in light and truth. Teach them by example. Fathers and mothers have to set the example. They cannot say to their children, "You follow the teachings of the Church, but in our lives we are going to make exceptions." It cannot be done, not properly. You parents, set the example. There should be unity in the home, and if there is unity in the home, then there is likely to be unity in the Church. But we begin in the home.

Now, the gospel of Jesus Christ is the means of our salvation and exaltation. I have often wondered why some members of the Church were members of the Church, because they do not live in accordance with the principles of eternal truth. There is only one reason for membership in this Church, as I understand it, and that is as a means of receiving salvation and exaltation in the celestial kingdom of God. If that is not our aim then why are we in the Church?

I know a man who went to school when I went to school, we played together, went to school together. When he grew to be a man he went East and became a scientist. He came back, and then he began to create a great deal of disturbance in the Sunday School classes, questioning the revelations that had been given through the Prophet Joseph Smith. This came to my attention when one of the members of that class came to me and said, "This brother comes to our class, and he is just a disturbance." As I was well acquainted with him, I made it my duty to get hold of him, and I asked him why he did those things; and was disturbing the members of the class.

"Well," he said, "I cannot accept all of the revelations that were given to the Prophet Joseph Smith."

"Are there any of them that you can accept?"

"Yes," he said, "I can accept some of them," but he could not accept all of the doctrines that had come through the revelations of our Father in heaven and his Son Jesus Christ to the Church.

After we got through with the conversation, and I had a long conversation with him, he said, "Now, I am going to ask you one favor. Please do not take any step to have me excommunicated."

I said, "Why do you want to stay in the Church when you are opposing its doctrines?"

He said, "I will tell you why. I was raised in the Church, and my friends are members of the Church. I have few associations outside of the Church. If I should be excommunicated that means that I should be cut off from all communication, all fellowship with the people with whom I am now associating, and I do not want that to happen. So please do not take any steps to have me excommunicated."

I thought there was some hope for him so I did not take any such step, but I did talk to him kindly and try to get him to see the folly of his ways, to repent, and when he went to the classes, and he could go to the classes, he should not go with that spirit of defiance or opposition to the doctrines which the others believed. I said, "If you don't believe them, then keep still and see if you cannot get the Spirit of the Lord so that you can accept them."

Well, he is dead now. I do not know whether he repented or not, but brethren, the gospel of Jesus Christ is the most vital thing in all the world to us. We should so live that we can accept every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, and that is a commandment from him.

Now if we have the right spirit, that is what we are going to do. If there is any doctrine or principle connected with the teachings of the Church that we do not understand, then let us get on our knees. Let us go before the Lord in the spirit of prayer, of humility, and ask that our minds might be enlightened that we may understand. This Church is not teaching false doctrine. All the revelations given to the Prophet Joseph Smith are absolutely true. They are given for our salvation, for our knowledge, for our understanding, that we may draw nearer and nearer to our Father in heaven, and be found worthy before him and eventually have the privilege of coming into his presence, there to be crowned as sons and daughters of God, receiving the fulness of his kingdom.

The Lord bless you, my good brethren and sisters, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER ALVIN R. DYER

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brothers and sisters, I feel it is a great privilege to be in your presence here today, in the presence of my Brethren, and to be under the inspiration and leadership of our Prophet and those who are associated with him in the Presidency of the Church, and I have felt here this day the power and the inspiration of the Spirit as it has been manifested in what has been said.

A number of years ago there was a noted historian sent to Salt Lake City, to study the customs and the way of living of the Latter-day Saints. He remained here many years among our people and published a book in the year of 1922 telling of his findings. I should like to read a paragraph or two from what he said about our people. He never knew the Prophet Joseph Smith. He could only tell of his work by the results as it was manifest among the people who were guided by the revelations from God which their prophet had received. I quote:

"Who can explain Joseph Smith? What are the 'revelations from God'? What is their test? Is it not beyond all reason that a lad, born of poor parents, devoid of any save the commonest education, too poor to buy books, should have accomplished what he did in less than forty years, unless there was some great reason for it?

"Let anyone, even a literary genius, after forty years of life, try to write a companion volume to the Book of Mormon, and then almost daily for a number of years give out 'revelations' that internally harmonize one with another, at the same time formulate a system of doctrine for a Church, introduce many new principles, resuscitate extinct priesthoods, and formulate a system of Church government which has no superior upon earth . . . to deny such a man a wonderful power over the human heart and intellect is absurd. Only fanatical prejudice can ignore it. However, he may be accounted for by the reasoning mind, Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, was one of the wonders of his time." (George Wharton James.)

One of the great distinguishing characteristics of the Latter-day Saint people is that they are governed by revelations from God, and whether people come into our midst, or whether we go out into the world, this characteristic remains a distinguishing factor.

I recall that some few years ago in one of the communities of Oklahoma a minister, in an effort to discredit the effects of our missionary work, in that area had an article placed in a daily newspaper, from which I quote a part. He said: "The first thing that you should know is that these missionaries are a part of a church that claims to have a revelation and a prophet."

How well he placed the facts. Yet it seems rather strange that a Christian minister would make such a statement in derision, for revelation and the prophets have ever been a part of God's plan to convey commandments and teachings of righteousness unto his children. There are others, like this minister, who feel that we have no right to receive revelation, but if we do not receive revelation for the guidance and direction of the true Church of Jesus Christ, then we do not have the oracles of God, and if we do not have the oracles of God, then we are not the people of God.

But this is not the fact, for over and over again God has revealed his will unto this, his people, through his servants, the prophets. In the first section of the Doctrine and Covenants, which is a book of revelations given through the Prophet Joseph Smith unto the Latter-day Saints, the Lord has said:

First Day

"Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments." (D & C 1:17.)

These commandments are revelations from God which provide the laws and ordinances of the gospel, and by obedience to them will exalt man in the presence of our Heavenly Father. The Prophet Jacob, one of the Book of Mormon prophets, speaks of the need of revelation in this manner. He says:

"Behold, great and marvelous are the works of the Lord. How unsearchable are the depths of the mysteries of him; and it is impossible that man should find out all his ways. And no man knoweth of his ways save it be revealed unto him; wherefore, brethren, despise not the revelations of God." (Jacob 4:8.)

Again Moroni, another Book of Mormon prophet, speaks of those who would deny revelation.

"And again I speak unto you who deny the revelations of God, and say that they are done away, that there are no revelations, nor prophecies, nor gifts, nor healing, nor speaking with tongues, and the interpretation of tongues;

"Behold I say unto you, he that denieth these things knoweth not the gospel of Christ; yea, he has not read the scriptures; if so, he does not understand them.

"For do we not read that God is the same yesterday, today, and forever, and in him there is no variableness neither shadow of changing?" (Mormon 9:7-9.)

The revelations from God are a great expediency in leading man unto eternal life and exaltation. Yet in every age, where God's will has been expressed unto his people, there have been those who have failed to obey and who have in some instances rebelled against the revealed word of God.

This was true with the greatest of all prophets, Christ the Lord. Early in his ministry multitudes of people followed him everywhere, for he blessed them, raised their dead, and fed their hunger.

But, upon that occasion when he announced to them for the first time that he was the Son of God and that he would reveal unto them the mind and will of the Father, that he was the living bread sent down from heaven, they turned and walked no more with him, seeing the people turn from him because of revelation, he turned to his disciples and said, "Will ye go away also?"—but his nearest disciples led by Peter, did not leave him, for they accepted his revelations; gone, however, were the crowds of people who had followed him on the shores of Galilee and the hillsides of Judea. From that day forth, save for his closest disciples, he walked alone.

Unfortunately, in the early days of the Church not all of the Latter-day Saints accepted the revelations. I suppose that as each revelation was given to the Prophet Joseph Smith, and it was made known unto the people, just that many more of the weak Saints rebelled and turned away from the Church. This became one of the great problems to our people in the days of Kirtland and Missouri, for some of the members and leaders alike opposed and did all that they could to prevent the coming forth of further revelation, and the progress of the Church.

The Prophet Joseph Smith, speaking of this at Far West, had this to say: "Many men will say I will never forsake you, but will stand by you at all times, but the moment you teach them some of the revelations (mysteries) of the kingdom of God that are retained in the heavens and are to be revealed to the children of men when they are prepared for them, they will be the first to stone you and put you to death."

The Prophet continued in this very significant meeting to make this further statement: "Would to God, brethren, I could tell you who I am! would to God I could tell you what I know! but you would call it blasphemy, and there are men on this stand who would want to take my life." Continuing further, he said, "When God offers a blessing, or knowledge to a man, and he refuses to receive it, he will be damned." Thus by the implied remarks of the Prophet, the rebellion of the weak Saints in the days of Kirtland and Missouri continued, yes, even unto the days of Nauvoo. They seemed, unfortunately, not to understand the things of God, which had been revealed.

When the work of the Prophet Joseph Smith was completed, when he had received the keys, powers, and ordinances, and had conferred them upon the heads of the Quorum of the Twelve, when he realized and sensed that the time had come when he would give his life for his work, he seemed to speak, upon occasion, more emphatically than ever before with regard to the truth of the revelations which he received, indicating that there were those within the Church then who opposed and did not accept all the revelations which God had given through him. These were his words upon the memorable occasion of one of his last addresses to the Saints.

"Oh! I beseech you go forward and make your calling and election sure—when did I ever teach anything wrong from this stand? When was I ever confounded? I want to triumph in Israel before I depart hence and am no more seen. I never told you I was perfect—but there is no error in the revelations which I have taught." (May 12, 1844.)

I have mentioned these things, my brethren and sisters, only in reflection to bring it down to us today. Can we say, with regard to revelation, in a similar sense, that those who fail in the Church today to accept and live fully the revelations given are somewhat rebellious perhaps not in the same antagonistic manner which was manifest in the early days, but nevertheless rebel within themselves against the word of the Lord. There are some who perhaps sense the great value of these God-given truths, yet fail in their appropriation. They will not let go for fear of losing something greatly worth while, but still hold back when it comes to fully accepting the revelations from God.

May I consider with you for a few moments some of the vital revelations given through the Prophet Joseph Smith and perhaps as we go back to our homes from this great conference of the Church we can regenerate in our own thinking the desire to conform more closely to the commandments which the Lord has required of us through these revealed writings. I refer to a revelation with regard to the magnifying of the priesthood found in section 84 and section 121, given at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1832, and at Liberty, Missouri, in 1839, and when we find that perhaps two thirds of the elders who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood, are found not to be in their priesthood meetings each Sunday morning, we realize the need of greater adherence to this instruction. Would we say that those who are not fully living in accordance with this revelation are perhaps opposing the divine will of our Heavenly Father as it is expressed through his prophets?

There is the revelation given on tithing and offerings at Far West, Missouri, in 1838. Would you say, my brethren and sisters, that a man, especially one who holds the Melchizedek Priesthood, and who does not pay an honest tithing is rebelling against the revelations of God?

What about attendance at Sacrament meeting? I remember as a young man being placed in a bishopric, and of being told we ought to achieve twenty percent attendance at Sacrament meeting. Today the current average attendance is thirty-three percent, and yet each Sunday finds sixty-seven out of one hundred of our people not attending their Sacrament meeting. Would you say that this failure to attend, on the part of some, is something of a rebellion against this revelation given at Jackson County, Missouri, in 1831?

Then what about the revelation on virtue and the receiving of the Holy Ghost, given in Liberty Prison in 1839, when the Prophet revealed to us that if we would have the companionship of the Holy Ghost, our lives must be virtuous and we must live constantly under that influence? Would you say that those who have evil thoughts and would permit unclean practices to come into their lives are opposing the will and the revelations of God on purity of life?

There are still other revelations—the reiteration of the Ten Commandments at Kirtland, Ohio, in section 42; the great principle of righteous dominion, in section 121, wherein we are to live with our fellow men in kindness, in long-suffering, in meekness, and love unfeigned, in the true spirit of brotherhood as becomes a Latter-day Saint; the revelations on temple work in sections 124, 127, and 128, given in Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1841 and 1842.

Friday, October 9

First Day

Are we doing all that we can in accordance with these revelations, and if we are not are we inwardly opposing them? My brothers and sisters, you be the ones to answer that for yourselves.

Then there is this last one I will refer to, the revelation on harmful indulgences—the Word of Wisdom—and we see the manifest desire of many within the Church to twist the meaning of this great revelation, and those who do this, are they rebelling against the will of God as they did in the earlier days?

I bear record to you, my brethren and sisters, that these revelations have been given to us for our enlightenment, for our growth, that we may return to the presence of our Heavenly Father. They are a distinguishing characteristic of the Latter-day Saints. We are to use them for our upbuilding and growth within the kingdom of God.

Would it not be profitable to re-view the revelations—to learn afresh—to “know our duty” and then where needful adjust our lives fully to the laws and commandments of God?

I bear record to the truthfulness of the revelations given to the Prophet Joseph Smith. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Alvin R. Dyer, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, has just spoken to us. Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of Seventy will now address us. He will be followed by Elder John Longden.

ELDER MARION D. HANKS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

I seek only to be able to speak the truth, to merit the Spirit of the Lord which will direct me and bless me in so doing. I appreciate the wonderful sermons which have been delivered here from the first through Brother Dyer's.

I sat thinking a moment ago of my sainted father who left his little family and departed this earth more than thirty-five years ago, how he went into the missionary field at the call of the Lord through the Brethren, in his late 'teens, carrying copies of the Book of Mormon with testimony and conviction, expressing his deepest assurance of the validity of the work he represented and yet without adequate knowledge, perhaps, because he was but a boy and because much knowledge now available was not had, to defend his viewpoint in the eyes of the world. He had but his testimony, his faith, and the Book.

As President Smith spoke I marveled that we have lived long enough and that we live in a time, you and I, when the wise men, the honest men of the world, are coming to understand some of the things the Lord has taught us through all the years since the establishment of the Church.

As President Smith referred to the age of eight and his faith that a youngster at that age can know, I thought of my little children and then of a book published recently, written by two of the most accepted, and I think effective, child psychologists of the day, commenting on the age “eight” in the lives of the young.

“Eight seems to be an age when much that was not comprehended before is often easily understood. At that age it is almost as though a new dimension has been added to the child's understanding.”

It is remarkable that qualified and earnest seekers after truth should discover that at age eight a new dimension enters into the life of the child. The Lord assured us of this when he talked of the age of accountability long ago.

Of one thing implicit in both President Smith's and Brother Dyer's remarks, I would speak for just a few moments.

A thoughtful friend phoned this morning to tell me of a book he had just received—I had not seen a copy nor is it available in our bookstores yet—a book called, I Found God in Soviet Russia, in which a man tells of his own experiences as a prisoner in a concentration camp in Siberia.

He talks of the religious faith that permitted people to endure and survive.

He mentions in at least four different places, and this would perhaps be a satisfying if sorrowful and surprising thing for us to know, that in a concentration camp in Siberia there is a little band of members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, meeting faithfully and loyally, unwilling to deny or let rest or become indifferent to their responsibilities even though to be a member of the Church makes them liable to life imprisonment according to the book.

The book notes that these Mormons insisted on coming together in the name of the Lord—that when they had a few minutes they met to worship God in their own way.

When I think how the Lord must love and look with compassion upon such individuals, when out of my own experience as a parent I can see how much I love my little ones, I can understand (at least within my limitations) what the Lord meant when he talked about the worth of souls in his sight. And I believe I may understand it more impressively and movingly today than I have ever understood it before.

May I read you some words with which all are familiar, and read them in context of what has been said?

"Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God;

"For behold, the Lord your Redeemer suffered death in the flesh; wherefore he suffered the pain of all men, that all men might repent and come unto him." (D&C 18:10-11.)

There follows the great statement of the joy of the Lord in the soul that repenteth, and this:

"And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!"

And then the marvelous statement that "... if your joy will be great with one soul ... how great will be your joy if you should bring many souls unto me!" (Idem, 15-16.)

I have in mind to express my testimony about the importance of the one, to add my humble witness to the charge that has been given every teacher and parent, every youth-influencing, every adult-influencing Latter-day Saint, to be concerned about the one individual child of God.

I heard a statement as I drove toward Brigham Young University the other morning from the Talmud, or so it was quoted: "To save one life is like saving a whole nation." And I began to think of other statements, including the one from the eighteenth section of the Doctrine and Covenants, to which we have alluded. I thought of the statement of Oliver Wendell Holmes, who said, "Every individual is an omnibus." Do you see the significance and implication of this?

As we have the marvelous blessing of setting missionaries apart, I can seldom refrain from thinking of them (and occasionally say it) that in each of them, as in each of us, is wrapped up a heritage and a promise, for each is a distillation of much that has gone before, and beyond all that is represented in the individual now and of the past, there is also the future, because in each of us are the seeds of the future; in each of us there is, in fact, the capacity and possibility of becoming many.

Could I tell you one story which bears repetition—and I have had the blessing of repeating it in some of the stakes of the Church. It is the most significant single experience I have ever had, personally, about the importance of one. It happened long enough ago that I think the individual involved would not be conscious of our noting him, though I see no harm if he is.

A man walked into these grounds and into an office in the Bureau of Information one day long ago. He interrupted a conversation which was private and serious, and did it without apology. He was quite an elderly man; he was not what you would call an attractive human being. He was unkempt, unshaven; he reeked of alcohol and tobacco.

He walked over to the desk where I sat, pointed his hand in the direction of the temple, and said, "How do you get in there?" I assumed that he was a tourist, one of the infrequent but occasional few who do not understand the purpose and the reason of temple-going and who have become affronted because they are not taken into the temple, and perhaps had come to complain.

I told him as best I could, or began to, the story of the temple, but had pro-

Friday, October 9

First Day

ceeded only a little distance when he interrupted. He waved me away and said, "Oh, you don't have to tell me all that, I know that. I am a Mormon."

"Well," I said, "if you are a member of the Church and you know all of this, what is it you want from me?" He said, "Frankly, nothing. There isn't anything you have to give me. I am here because my wife insisted on my coming in, but I have fulfilled my errand," and out he went.

I tried to pick up the threads of the conversation and finish it, and later, as I sat thinking about him and his story, I looked out the window and saw him walking by the Joseph and Hyrum [Smith] monuments with a younger woman. I went out to talk with them. She identified herself as his wife. He had been married three times; each previous wife had died after bearing a large family.

There are two questions I asked him, which I think each person here would do well to hear answered as he answered them. I asked, in effect, how he had come to his feeling of antagonism and indifference. He told me that at age nineteen he had been ejected from a chapel by a bishop's counselor who had been summoned because of the boy's trouble-making in class. One thing that had been said, this man remembered for nearly sixty years. As he was thrown out, someone objected. The answer that came from the counselor who had the task in hand was, "Ah, let him go, he is just one kid!"

He went, and he never came back, nor was there ever any visiting, never any outpouring or increase of the love that should follow reproof, according to the Lord. He moved to another area of the land, married, had a family; his wife passed away and he married again, his second wife died after bearing a family also. He had come to Salt Lake City at the insistence of his third wife, who, having been taught by the missionaries and converted to the principles of the gospel, had brought him here hoping that somehow he might be touched—he, the member.

This, also, I would like to report: I asked him how many living descendants he had. He counted them and answered, "Fifty-four." I asked him then, how many of them are members of the Church, and I expect you know the answer, though perhaps not his interesting expression. He said, "Huh, ain't any of them members of the Church. They're a pretty hard lot."

This last question: who was it the bishop's counselor propelled out the door that morning? Just one boy? Just one? This one has in his own lifetime become, in effect, a multitude, and the current has but begun to run, and every one of them denied, according to his own witness, the love of the gospel and the brotherhood of the Saints, the warmth and strength and direction of the programs of the Church.

Oh, I can understand a little more, why the Lord said that one soul was precious to him.

I close with a statement Horace Mann made. This is well-known also, but worth the repetition. To a man who questioned Horace Mann's statement at the dedication of a boy's home or school, that if all the work and energy and effort and money put into this endeavor had been to save just one boy, it would have been worth it, and had said to Horace Mann, "You became too oratorical, didn't you? You didn't really mean that, did you?"—Horace Mann answered, "Oh, yes, I meant it. It would have all been worth it, if the one were my son."

Every son of God is important in his eyes. Every unbaptized child, undordained boy, young man who is not in the right stage of his priesthood progression, every boy and girl not attending seminary when they can and should, every boy and girl not being married in the temple when they could—these are vitally important in the eyes of God and should be, in our eyes.

God bless us to understand the infinite importance of the one, in God's eyes, and to do all that we can to fulfil his purposes for them, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Marion D. Hanks of the First Council of Seventy. Elder John Longden, Assistant to the Twelve, will now speak to us.

ELDER JOHN LONGDEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My testimony has been strengthened and my faith increased in the glorious truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ to which we have listened today. It does answer the questions: why these general conferences, why these quarterly conferences, why these conferences of the auxiliary organizations—"For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ," (Eph. 4:12) until we all come to a knowledge of the truth.

I have reminisced as Brother Hanks has been speaking. I am sure he will pardon me if I make reference to him and his marvelous family. It was my privilege to live in the Nineteenth Ward in the Salt Lake Stake. On October 12, 1921, I left for my mission to the Central States. The day after, there came into the home of Brother and Sister Hanks, not a small boy—he was rather large, I understand—I was not there, but I have heard—and he was named Marion. Well, you have seen his works; you have felt his spirit. There are others in this family just as good and just as devoted to building up the kingdom of God.

Theirs is an example of a good Latter-day Saint home, wherein are taught the truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ; wherein they gather in humble prayer and thanksgiving for the blessings which have come into their lives; wherein they are taught the true joys of service to God and our fellow men. My, what a contrast to the story he has just related to us.

There is another anniversary this week—if I may be pardoned for making reference to it—just fifty years ago on the 7th of October my father and I arrived in Salt Lake City—a boy of ten, coming to a new world with one purpose in mind, to be close to the center of the Church and to serve the Lord.

I am grateful for that father who listened to the missionaries some sixty-three years ago in England, about two years before I was born, who accepted these truths and for about forty-five years was associated with the Scout program of the Church.

I shall ever be grateful for my membership in the Church of Jesus Christ, and to the young people today may I say that there is no obsolescence in the teachings of the gospel. As I understand the definition of obsolete it means something that is old-fashioned, that we have outgrown, something that is ancient or antiquated and maybe, in the terms of modern language, "old stuff" or "for the birds."

The gospel of Jesus Christ is just as vital and essential today as it was when it was instituted in our pre-existent estate. Jesus Christ is the Author of salvation. I know this as I know I am standing here today. I have that witness.

We may be termed peculiar, but that is nothing new. Whenever there has been a dispensation of the gospel of Jesus Christ in the earth, the followers have been referred to as "a peculiar people." Moses so declared. Peter and Paul so declared. I would recall the words of Peter:

"But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." (I Peter 2:9.)

It is wonderful to bask in the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ which banishes fear, which banishes confusion and frustrations, and, oh, the need for remembering these things today.

So I pray that we will acknowledge the hand of God as we have listened to his mouthpiece and prophet in his keynote address to this great conference, admonishing us to teach the word. We make no apology for teaching truth, we need make no compromise with the philosophies and teachings of men. The only time we are on dangerous ground is when we pull away from the teachings of the Master, for I assure you the Master does not pull away from us. As individuals we are prone to pull away from him because of things we do and say not in harmony with his teachings.

May we have a desire reburnished in our minds and our hearts as we leave this conference, to be more dedicated in the service of the Master, putting our own homes in order, having family prayer, our individual prayer, paying our tithes and offerings, keeping the Word of Wisdom, and being chaste and benevolent. As I speak of putting our homes in order, I should like to suggest that we take note of what comes into the hands of our youth, our own children. We must make sure they are not having their minds poisoned by the garbage, if you please, that is on many of the newsstands and available through other channels throughout the nation.

Time will not permit me to go into this subject further, but I call to mind a headline which I read just recently as I visited one of the stakes in the East and it told of this sad story:

As the story was told, a man, an employee of the city of New York for some thirty years, a respected employee, married, with grown children who were married, had working with him a young man about twenty-five, also married. Unknown to their wives, they had been in the dastardly business of producing vile film, pornography, and were arrested with over $500,000 worth of the filthy stuff in their possession in one of their garages. I mention again, they were married men with children of their own, deliberately poisoning the minds of young people, taking advantage of living in a land where our forefathers came to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience, a land built upon freedom and liberty.

I call to mind a statement made by a minister a couple of weeks ago as the Premier from Russia visited in the United States. He said he hoped that Mr. Khrushchev would come to his church "... to see how we worship."

How are we worshipping? Are we the followers of Jesus Christ only on the Sabbath day, or just when we are in priesthood meeting, or is it that worship which reflects good and his peace as we go forth in our various travels, endeavors, and walks of life, truly being an influence every day, every hour, every minute for good to our fellow men?

I pray that we as parents will seek to know what our children are feeding upon, and see that they feed upon the truths found in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, the Pearl of Great Price, the four Standard Works of the Church. Then they will not suffer from malnourishment of the Spirit, and we will be fitting them to withstand the buffeting of Satan.

I bear you my witness and testimony that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Divine Son of our Heavenly Father, that Joseph Smith was and is a Prophet of God, and that those who have succeeded him as Presidents of this Church down to President David O. McKay today, have been and are mouthpieces and prophets of our Lord.

I bear you my solemn witness that President McKay holds the keys and authority, the keys of the kingdom, and that the mantle of authority is upon him. I am so thankful for that witness, and I pray that I may be able to continue to bear this testimony as the Lord permits. I pray his peace and blessing upon us humbly, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My dear brothers and sisters, I humbly ask an interest in your faith and prayers that the Spirit of God will direct what I may say.

The Book of Mormon prophets made numerous predictions regarding the Indians, or the Lamanites, promising many great blessings that would come to them in the latter days. Some of the prophecies regarding the Indians have been fulfilled; others are being fulfilled; and eventually all of the predictions of the holy prophets will come to pass.

I would like this afternoon to tell two marvelous experiences had by the Indians in Guatemala, Central America. These experiences were related to me while I was visiting that country.

I toured the Central American Mission in January 1956, in the company of President and Sister Edgar Wagner. We were on a train coming from Guatemala City to Quirigua, Guatemala. Riding in the same car with us was a very lovely Indian woman, a Quiché Maya from Quezaltenango, Guatemala. She was accompanied by her husband. President Wagner introduced them to me, stating that the Indian woman was the Relief Society president in Quezaltenango. I sat in the adjacent seat and had a conversation with them. The woman told me the following story:

"When I was a girl," she said, "a marvelous thing happened in my home town. One day two strangers came to Quezaltenango. They were tall men—much taller than the Indian men of our country—and their skin was white in color. They were handsome men. Their clothing differed greatly from that worn by the Quiché Mayas. Nobody had any idea as to who they were or whence they came. They just suddenly arrived in the middle of the city and began to preach to the people. A large group of Indians soon assembled in the street to listen to the instructions given by these strangers. Many of the things they told us were predictions of what would occur in the future.

"The thing that impressed me most," she said, "was the statements they made regarding our ancestors once having had the true gospel of Jesus Christ.

They had lost it through wickedness and apostasy, resulting in the gospel being taken from the earth. They then said that God had caused the true gospel to be restored to earth again, and that in the near future that gospel would be brought to our people. Those two messengers said that we would be able to recognize the true gospel of Jesus Christ when it came, and the sign by which we would know it would be that young men, traveling two by two, would bring it to us."

A few years passed, and she had grown to womanhood. Finally Mormon missionaries came to Quezaltenango. As she observed them, and listened to them preach, she recalled the things that were predicted by the two messengers when she was a girl. She recalled that the bearers of the true gospel were to be young men, traveling two by two, and these Mormon missionaries completely fitted the predictions. Thereupon she invited them to her home and received the gospel from them.

This Indian woman bore a very strong and fervent testimony to me that she knew that these missionaries had brought her the true gospel of Jesus Christ. She said:

"I know that God sent those two strangers, his messengers, to Quezaltenango to prepare the hearts and the minds of the Quiché Mayas in this part of the country to receive the gospel of Jesus Christ. I and a number of others of our people who saw those messengers and listened to their predictions are now Mormons."

I asked her to give me the names of other Lamanites who were present when the two messengers visited Quezaltenango. This she did. I had one of the missionaries, the supervising elder, check with them for the purpose of verifying her story. These other Indians also gave similar accounts of those two tall, white strangers visiting Quezaltenango some years ago.

This past January (1959) I was again assigned to tour the Central American Mission in company with President and Sister Wagner. Sister Hunter accompanied me on this tour.

Friday, October 9

First Day

Shortly after we arrived in Guatemala City, President Wagner told us about some very important events which had occurred in the life of a certain Cakchiquel Maya man named Daniel Mich. This good Lamanite or Indian had joined the Church not long before our arrival in Guatemala. After becoming a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and just prior to our arrival in the Central American Mission, Brother Mich came to Guatemala City and attended a Sacrament meeting. He bore his testimony at this meeting and told the wonderful story of his experiences which I shall retell to you today. In describing Daniel Mich's telling of his experiences and bearing his testimony, President Wagner said:

"The tears rolled down Brother Mich's cheeks. There was not a dry eye in the house. The Spirit of God was there in great abundance."

The following is Daniel Mich's story. He lived in Patzicia, Guatemala, a small town not far from Lake Atitlán. A few years ago an Indian rebellion against the government officials, who were primarily of Spanish blood, took place in Patzicia. The government officials decided to put to death all the Indians who had participated in this rebellion and especially those who instigated it.

Daniel Mich had taken no part in the rebellion; however, the government officials thought he was guilty. The Spirit of God whispered to him and told him and his brother to flee to the mountains and hide in a certain place. If they did not, they would be killed. They did as the Spirit instructed. As they arrived at the hiding place suggested by the Spirit, they lay on a ledge and looked over the precipice. Below them they could see the government officials searching for them along the mountainside.

A number of Indians were captured at this time and put to death. Daniel Mich and his brother stayed in seclusion for two years, but finally they were also captured. Conditions had changed during the two years to the extent that the Mich brothers were not killed but were thrown into prison. For four long years they lay in prison, living under the most terrible conditions. Their clothing wore out. They had a scant amount of bedding. It was very cold, and the jail was unheated. The caretakers of the prison gave them very little food; in fact, they practically starved to death. And to make matters much worse, Daniel Mich received word from his wife that she and the children were practically starved to death. During the six years' time that he was in hiding and in prison, they had not been able to make a livelihood.

In desperation, and, of course, in great grief, Daniel Mich kneeled down and prayed to God, pleading that the Eternal Father would be merciful unto him and let him die. He also prayed that the Lord would extend his mercy unto his wife and children, that they all might soon die. He pleaded with the Lord to release him and his family members from the misery and suffering that they were enduring.

But God did not let them die. Instead, Daniel Mich had a vision, or a dream, or whatever it might be called. He was going up the side of a steep mountain on a definitely defined trail. He came to a place where a side trail forked off the main trail. A man stood on the side trail and said, "Follow me."

Daniel Mich replied, "No, I cannot follow you. I must follow this trail straight ahead."

He went some distance farther, and another man stood on another side trail. He also said, "Follow me."

And again Daniel Mich replied, "No, I cannot follow you. I must go straight ahead." This experience repeated itself three or four times.

Daniel Mich explained, "Finally I came to the summit, and there standing in front of me was a tall, handsome man, with beautiful white hair. He had a very kindly and beautiful smile. This man said to me, 'Daniel, follow me.' I replied, 'I will follow you,' because as I made that remark, the Spirit of God whispered to me and said, 'That man has the truth.'"

Shortly after having this dream or vision, Daniel Mich and his brother were released from jail. They returned to their home town. Soon thereafter, and possibly about a year before I visited Guatemala, missionaries came to Patzicia, Brother Mich's home town. They had not been working there long until one day the mayor sent for them to come to his office. When the missionaries arrived, they saw a large crowd of Indians, perhaps 200 or more, collected in front of the mayor's office. As the missionaries approached, according to the description given by the missionaries, "The crowd of Indians opened as the Red Sea opened for the Israelites to go through. We walked between two columns of Indians and on into the mayor's office."

The elders said to the mayor, "You sent for us?"

"Yes, I did," was the reply.

"What do you want?" they asked.

The mayor answered, "I have here in front of me a petition signed by two hundred citizens of our community in which they demand that you young men leave town immediately and that you refrain from teaching your religion any more in our community. Will you go?"

"No, we will not go," the missionaries replied. "We will not leave this town until our mission president tells us to leave."

The elders sat silently in the mayor's office for several minutes, and then one of them asked, "What do you intend to do?"

The mayor replied, "I do not know."

Thereupon one of the missionaries suggested that he telephone the governor, and perhaps the governor could instruct him. The mayor immediately picked up the telephone, called the governor, and explained the situation.

The governor emphatically instructed, "Let those Mormon missionaries alone. They have a right to teach their religion in your town or in any other town or city in Guatemala, because we have religious freedom in our country."

After this favorable solution of the problem, the missionaries came out of the mayor's office. Once again they described the crowd, stating that it opened as the Red Sea opened for the Israelites. The elders passed between those two long lines of Indians. As they arrived at the edge of the crowd, two men approached them and said, "Will you come to our homes and talk to us?" One of the men was Daniel Mich.

The missionaries were happy to accept the invitation. They went to Daniel Mich's home and taught him the gospel. He received all they taught with much faith and sincerity. They taught him only three or four lessons when a very important event occurred. One day while in the midst of one of the lessons, one of the missionaries opened his book, and Daniel Mich saw a photograph of a tall, handsome man, with beautiful white hair.

Brother Mich immediately and excitedly exclaimed, "This is the man! It is he whom I saw!"

Of course the missionaries wondered what he was talking about, and so they questioned him. In response he told them the wonderful story which I have just told you good people today.

Then Daniel Mich asked, "Who is this man whose photograph you have in your book?"

"His name is David O. McKay," the missionaries replied. "He is the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He is God's holy prophet, seer, and revelator upon the earth at the present time. He is the man who holds the keys of the kingdom of God and stands as Christ's representative in the true Church and the leader in spreading the true gospel of Jesus Christ."

In deep sincerity Daniel Mich replied, "I know that all of the things you have told me are true. I know that you missionaries have the true gospel of Jesus Christ." Then he asked, "Do you know why I invited you to come to my home that day as you came out of the mayor's office?"

"Of course we do not know but would certainly like to know," they replied.

Then Daniel Mich explained, "At the time that the tall, handsome man, with beautiful white hair—whom you have told me was President David O. McKay—said to me, 'Daniel, follow me,' the Spirit of the Lord whispered to me and said, 'This man has the truth.' The Spirit also said, 'Two young men will bring you the truth'; and when you came into our town recently and began to teach your religion, I became curious. I had been watching you and attempting to find out all about you that I could. When the citizens of Patzicia signed the petition to have you thrown out of town and when you called to see the mayor, I joined the crowd in front of the mayor's office to see what would take place. And now," he said, "all the things that I believed have been verified. I know that David O. McKay is a prophet of God. I also know that you have the true religion of Jesus Christ."

Friday, October 9

First Day

These two important stories demonstrate the fact that the Lord is touching the hearts of the Lamanites, and they are receiving the gospel. He is opening the way for the fulfillment of the promises made to the Lamanites or Indians by the Book of Mormon prophets.

The last meeting of our mission tour was held at Chimaltenango, Guatemala, in the evening of January 30, 1959. Missionary work was opened in this district only two years earlier. There are four towns in the district, having a Church membership of 141 people.

There were 425 people in attendance at the conference, practically all being Indians. Based on the Church population in the district, we had 300 percent attendance. Practically every Indian mother was carrying a baby wrapped in a shawl and tied to her body. Most of the people were barefoot; they were humble, God-fearing, faithful people, poor in economic goods, but rich in spirituality and their love for the Lord.

Brother Daniel Mich from Patzicia was present. We called on this humble Indian to talk. When I listened to his testimony for thirty to forty minutes and felt the spiritual influence of God which emanated from him, I could understand why the Lord loved this humble intelligent, and spiritual-minded Lamanite enough to give him the marvelous experiences of which I have told you. I shall always remember our conference at Chimaltenango and the beautiful testimony given by Brother Daniel Mich from Patzicia, one of the towns in the Chimaltenango district. I am convinced that God loves the Lamanite people.

Now, brothers and sisters, I want to bear my testimony. I know that God lives as I know that I am alive. I know that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world. I know that Joseph Smith is one of the greatest prophets that has been upon the earth. I bear witness that the true gospel of our Master was restored upon the earth through him. Also, I testify that each of the presidents of the Church from Joseph's time to the present has held the keys of the kingdom. Each one, up to and including President David O. McKay, was divinely selected to be the President of the Church, each being a prophet, a seer, and a revelator.

I feel as Daniel Mich explained, I am willing to follow President David O. McKay at all times and to do anything that he asks me to do. I pray to God that I will have the strength, the faith, and the understanding that I might follow all the things that he tells me to do, because I know that he will not tell me to do anything that will be to my detriment or to the detriment of the people with whom I work.

I also humbly plead with all Latter-day Saints that we will have the same spirit and testimony that this humble Indian had. May all of us follow at all times the leadership of President David O. McKay and do all that he asks us to do. We accept him as God's holy prophet. If we will follow his leadership in all things, we will work out our eternal exaltation. May this be our happy lot, and may our Eternal Father bless us with sufficient faith and strength of character to keep all of his commandments always, I humbly pray, in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Milton R. Hunter of the First Council of Seventy has just spoken to us. We will now hear from Elder LeGrand Richards of the Council of the Twelve.

ELDER LEGRAND RICHARDS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I rejoice with you, my brothers and sisters, in the privilege of attending this wonderful conference and listening to the testimonies of the servants of the Lord, including the great witness borne to us this morning by President McKay. I thank the Lord for my testimony that I know this work is true, and I know the power of God is in it; that this Church is built upon the foundation of apostles and prophets, and that Christ our Lord is truly the head of his Church today, as he has always been.

I have just had the privilege, with my wife, by appointment of President McKay, of touring five of the missions of Europe—the Danish, the Swedish, the Norwegian, the Finnish, and the Netherlands Missions—and Sister Richards and I appreciate that opportunity very, very much. I love missionary work. I love the spirit of missionary work. I know the Spirit of the Lord is in the missionary work.

When Jesus was resurrected and sent his disciples into all the world to preach the gospel to every creature, he said, "And, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," (Matthew 28:20), indicating that when his kingdom should be set up in the latter days that he would be with his servants until the end of the world. And I know that the Spirit of the Lord is in this great missionary movement.

It was our privilege to visit and hear the testimonies of over five hundred missionaries, and each one I interviewed personally; and if you parents could have heard the testimonies of those missionaries, you would have been proud, and you would have felt compensated for the sacrifices you are making to keep them in the mission field. Many of them bore testimony of their gratitude to their parents for the privilege of being in the mission field. Some told of the financial struggles their parents had had. One boy said that his father was out of work when he was called to go, but he would not stand in the way of that son of his being an ambassador of eternal truth, and many of them testified that their parents had prospered financially as never before while their sons were in the mission field.

Another thing that thrilled me in their testimonies: Many of them testified that their parents and the members of their families had become more interested and active in the Church while their sons were in the mission field, so that this great missionary program in a way is like a two-edged sword. It does a marvelous work in the mission field, and it does a marvelous work here at home.

One missionary whom I interviewed in Denmark said, "I almost worship President Petersen, my mission president. It was he who brought the gospel to my father in this land, and there are now fifty-seven of us in the Church by virtue of that one conversion."

Another young man who was a counselor in the mission presidency in that mission was the seventh son of a convert from that mission to go back into the mission field—a wonderful young man—and he said, "Brother Richards, couldn't I stay another six months?" I said, "No, you had better go home. You have your military work to get back of you and your schooling, and then you ought to get married, and then you can raise your boys as your father did and send them back on missions, and they will do the rest of your missionary work for you."

It was a wonderful thing to be with those missionaries and feel their spirit, and I thank the Lord for the experiences that have been mine. They say the proof of the pudding is in the eating of it, and I have had the privilege of filling four missions and presiding over two, and touring many of the missions, and I would not want to raise a boy in this day and generation and not have him go on a mission for his good and, because I think we owe so much to the world, to share with them the wonderful truths of the gospel.

If you parents could have seen the glow in their faces when the missionaries would bring their investigators up to shake our hands, you would not figure that there was anything in this world that could compensate and take the place of the experiences that were theirs.

The missionaries fast for their investigators. Two of the missionaries fasted all day that their investigator would not disappoint them when they had a baptismal service arranged for her that night up in Trondheim, in the northern part of Norway. We went out to the bank of a fjord after ten o'clock at night, the sun still shining, and what a marvelous sight to see the missionaries and the sister dressed in white! The missionary led her out into the waters of baptism, and when she came back, my wife said, through the interpreter, "Was it cold?" She said, "It's deilig." That means, it's beautiful. I do not know whether any of you Scandinavians will recognize that or not, but that was her way of saying it was wonderful.

Friday, October 9

It was wonderful. It was a wonderful thing to witness that baptism. We stood there watching it, and many of the tourists or the vacationers were watching it and a little sailboat that sailed up the fjord because this was out in the open. We have no baptismal fonts there yet. However, they are building a beautiful new chapel and had the foundation in when we were there. As I looked and watched that beautiful sight, I thought of the account in the Bible where John led the Redeemer of the world down into the waters of baptism. He did not take a little water and sprinkle upon the head of the Savior. He led him down into the water, and we read that when he was baptized they came up out of the water, and I wondered how Christians could satisfy themselves having a little water sprinkled upon their heads instead of really being baptized as the Redeemer of the world was baptized, especially when they read so many predictions of the prophets and apostles that the day would come when men would "transgress the laws and change the ordinances."

I visited with quite a number of people who had been to the temple. They had just had a tour from each of those Scandinavian missions and from up in Finland to the temple. About one hundred went in each group. And I want to pay tribute here to you members of these foreign-speaking groups. I have something to do with your work. But you have sent money to these mission presidents to help some of these underprivileged members to go to the temple. You should see the joy that it brings into their lives! Those temples have literally changed the attitude of the Saints in many respects.

I was visiting with one young man and his wife who had three children. They had just returned from the temple in Switzerland, and she said this: "Brother Richards, we have been members of the Church for only six years, and we figure we are only six years old. We did not know how to live, and what to live for, until we found the Church."

When you stop to think in those lands, according to reports, there are only about five percent (I think it was three, but to be safe I will say five percent) of the people of those lands who attend church at all of any kind, and then you know how little there can be in their lives really to live for. Sometimes I thought as we went through those missions that about all they live for was their vacation, because they are great people to have a vacation every summer. I will not take time to go into detail about that. But they did not seem to be looking to eternal life or eternal exaltation or eternal companionship with those whom they love. They did not know anything about things like that. The newspapers even write articles discussing the fact that there is no God.

I was told that many of the ministers will openly admit to their members that they do not know whether there is a God or not. So, you see, they need the missionaries. They need this wonderful message that we have.

Speaking of the temples, I remind you of when Nicodemus came to Jesus by night and said:

"Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

"Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

And Nicodemus, you will remember, could not understand that, so he said,

"How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?"

And Jesus said:

"... Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

And Nicodemus could not understand and Jesus said,

"Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

"If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?" (John 3:2-5, 10-12.)

And I have always thought that the heavenly things that Jesus spoke of were these wonderful blessings that we receive in the temples of the Lord, and I thank the Lord that temples are reaching out to our people in these far-off lands.

In 1906 I heard President Joseph F. Smith make this statement in Rotterdam, Holland: "The day will come when temples of the Lord will dot this whole land of Europe," and I have lived long enough to see two of them there, and I tell you it is changing the feeling of our people toward the Church to know that these glorious blessings are coming within their reach.

As we went to leave the London Temple to come home, one good brother, who must have been in his sixties, said, "Brother Richards, why couldn't I have known this thirty years ago? Why couldn't I have had the joy all these years of helping to build the kingdom?"

That is the spirit of this work. There is not much time left, but I would just like to reminisce a moment. When I went on my first mission as a young man of nineteen, we were instructed by President Anthon H. Lund before we left for our missions. Among other things he said, "Brethren, the people will love you. Now don't get lifted up in the pride of your hearts and think that they love you because you are better than other people. They will love you because of your calling and the Spirit of the Lord that you take with you and the priesthood that you bear."

I didn't understand too much what that meant as a boy, but after I filled my first mission there in Holland, I wept more tears a hundred times over as I took the train from Amsterdam to Rotterdam than I shed when I said farewell to my loved ones to go to that land.

I went into one home where I had the privilege of bringing the gospel, and the little woman, a mother of about eight children, looked up into my eyes, and the tears rolled down her cheeks, clear down the front of her dress, and she said, "Brother Richards, it was hard to see my daughter leave for Zion a few weeks ago, but it is a lot harder to see you go," and then I knew what Brother Lund meant when he said, "They will love you. They will love you because of the message that you bring to them."

Then I went to say good-bye to a man who was in the government service. He stood erect in uniform. He was old enough to be my father. He got down on his knees, took my hand in his, and hugged it and kissed it and bathed it with his tears, and then I understood what Brother Lund meant when he said, "They will love you."

I tell you, brothers and sisters, we should be grateful for this great missionary system that is bringing so much joy, happiness, and peace into the lives of our people. That little family who did not know how to live until they had found the Church, and then just think of the revelation to them of the marvelous truths of the gospel, eternal duration of the marriage covenant—they will have their children in the eternal world—and that they can be exalted in the presence of God, the Eternal Father, and his Son, Jesus Christ! Compare that to what they have in a nation where the people have almost deserted their faith in God.

I pray God to bless us all and help us to be worthy of our heritage and to give freely, and I do want to commend others who have sent money into those missions to help the local young people to fill missions, for they are doing a great work. And if any of the rest of you are financially able and you would like to lay up a few more treasures in heaven, I invite you to do the same.

I leave you my blessings and pray God to be with you all, and bear witness of his truth in the name of the Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Presiding Bishopric of the Church will hold a special meeting tonight in this building at six o'clock. All stake presidencies, bishoprics, members of stake and ward Aaronic Priesthood committees are invited to attend. There will be an Agricultural Meeting conducted by the General Welfare Committee in the Assembly Hall tomorrow at 7:30 a.m. All stake presidents, and bishops who operate welfare farms, and all ward and stake welfare representatives are invited.

He to whom we have just listened is Elder LeGrand Richards, member of the Council of the Twelve. The singing for this session has been furnished by the Relief Society Singing Mothers under the direction of Florence Jepperson Madsen, with Elder Frank W. Asper at the organ. We have been most fortunate to be present or to be listening in during these two sessions at which the Singing Mothers have furnished such inspirational music. There is something about our mothers that always touches a tender spot in our hearts. "She of whom you speak," said one poet, "my mother, seems as pure and whole as some serene creation minted in the golden moods of sovereign artists—not a thought, a touch, but pure as lines of green that streak the first white of the snowdrop's inner leaves." And when you have a group of mothers singing the songs of Zion under the inspirational leadership of this wonderful woman, Sister Madsen, you cannot refrain from having a welling up in your heart of thoughts that seldom come. Sister Madsen, and Singing Mothers, we thank you for the service you have rendered this day. God bless you and keep you as you continue to render your sweet influence upon the lives of men.

Friday, October 9

First Day

The Singing Mothers will now give us, "Send Forth Thy Spirit," and the benediction will be offered by Elder D. Arthur Haycock, recently president of the Hawaii Mission. Following the benediction this Conference will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

---

"Send Forth Thy Spirit," was rendered by the Singing Mothers.

The closing prayer was offered by Elder D. Arthur Haycock, formerly president of the Hawaii Mission.

Conference adjourned until 10 o'clock a.m., Saturday, October 10, 1959.

SECOND DAY

MORNING MEETING

The third session convened in the Tabernacle at 10 o'clock a.m., Saturday, October 10, 1959, with President David O. McKay conducting the meeting.

The choral singing for this session was furnished by the University of Utah Choral Society (The Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Choruses and the Bonneville Strings), conducted by David A. Shand, with Roy M. Darley at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in the third session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. All members of the General Authorities are present, excepting Elders Harold B. Lee and Marion G. Romney. Brother Lee is in South America to officiate at the organization of two new missions, the Andes Mission and the Brazilian South Mission. Elder Romney is officially visiting missions in Europe. He has organized also the new South German Mission.

[The following letter was received by the First Presidency from Elder Harold B. Lee and his wife, Sister Fern T. Lee, written from Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dear Brethren:

This is probably the last communication I will be able to have before the convening of the forthcoming General Conference of the Church.

With a sense of the great responsibility resting upon the First Presidency during our great General Conferences, our prayers have been for you that you might be sustained in strength and with the high spiritual response necessary to measure to the expectations of the Church and to our Heavenly Father in the high performance of your personal responsibilities.

Needless to say, we have a longing to be with you, to participate in the uplift which always comes, not only from our intimate association with our brethren of the General Authorities, but also from the great outpouring of the Spirit which always comes when the Latter-day Saints meet together in General Conference. We have the feeling, however, that our absence from General Conference by the appointment of the First Presidency will only serve to impress in the minds of the Church members generally the great importance of the foreign missions, so important that if necessary it justifies the absence of General Authorities from General Conference in order to give proper attention to the work of these missions.

In our humble way, and to the best of our abilities therefore, we shall endeavor to extend ourselves during this mission tour, and particularly during the period of the General Conference, to transmit to the wonderful humble Saints who would also like to be at the General Conferences the love and blessing of the First Presidency and to endeavor to instruct them as the Spirit may direct as you would have us instruct them were they permitted to be under the sound of your voices in the General Conferences.

Will you, therefore, extend to our fellow workers of the General Authorities our affectionate regards and prayers for them as they participate in the forthcoming General Conference, and to the faithful Saints may we extend our love and blessing as one of the least of our Father's servants. Such an absence as this assignment requires only serves to intensify the great privilege of a close bond which attendance at such a conference provides.

With kindest personal regards and assurances of our affectionate and loyal support in all the proceedings of the Conference as it carries forward, we are your humble servants,

Harold B. and Fern T. Lee

P.S. We have just concluded a conference in the great city of Montevideo with 675 in attendance.]

We welcome this large audience in the Tabernacle and all who are listening in by radio and television. We express appreciation for the presence of stake presidencies, bishoprics, other Church officials and also our state and city officials and educational leaders.

This session of Conference will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. We appreciate the service that is being rendered by the owners and managers of these various stations. The names of the stations were announced just prior to the opening of this session. These services are also being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in Barratt Hall by television.

The singing for this session will be furnished by the University of Utah Choral Society made up of the Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Chorus and the Bonneville Strings, conducted by Elder David A. Shand, Roy M. Darley, the Assistant Organist, is at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the University of Utah Choral Society singing "The Morning Breaks," under Elder Shand's direction. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder J. Earl Lewis, formerly president of the Canadian Mission. The Chorus will now sing "The Morning Breaks."

The Combined Chorus sang the hymn, "The Morning Breaks."

Elder J. Earl Lewis, formerly president of the Canadian Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was just offered by Elder J. Earl Lewis, formerly president of the Canadian Mission.

The University of Utah Choral Society—the Institute of Religion at the University and the University of Utah Chorus and the Bonneville Strings—will now favor us with "Supplication," under the direction of Elder David A. Shand, after which Elder Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, will read the changes in stake, ward, and branch organizations since April Conference, 1959, and the obituaries of the Church.

---

The Combined Chorus and Strings presented the number, "Supplication."

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED AWAY

President Stephen L. Richards, First Counselor in the First Presidency.

Leonard E. Adams, member of the General Church Welfare Committee.

Gordon S. Brewerton, president of Alberta Stake.

President David O. McKay:

Brother Joseph Anderson, Clerk of the Conference, has just read the changes in the ward and stake organizations and the obituaries of the Church since last April.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency, will now present for your consideration and action, the General Authorities, General Officers, and General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for the sustaining vote of this General Conference.

We are very thankful to have President Clark with us during this Conference. Recently he was unwell but through the faith and prayers of the Saints, and the inspiration of the Brethren, he is able to attend to his duties at the office and to meet with us and speak to us this morning. After he presents the names of the General Authorities and General Officers he will speak to us. The Lord bless him.

Brother George Q. Morris will be on hand to speak to us after President Clark. We shall now have the presentation of the General Officers of the Church.

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr.:

My brothers and sisters: May I invoke and have the aid and assistance of your faith and prayers. I am indeed grateful to be here with you this morning. The blessings, promises, and administrations of the Brethren and the prayers of the Saints have brought to me the blessings of the Lord. I am grateful for them. My recovery has been such, through the blessings of the Lord and the tender care and nursing of my family, particularly my daughters, and the aid and care and solicitude of my physician, who says that my recovery is miraculous. I give my deep gratitude and thanks.

We are met this morning to take part in one of the great ordinances of the Church. As I proceed in presenting the Authorities, I shall speak to you members of the Church as the Church in Solemn Assembly for this purpose among others. When you vote, you will vote as the Church, and the promises you make to support and sustain the Authorities in their work, will be the vote of the Church, not merely your vote as members.

This is a very solemn and important occasion, and a very solemn gathering and ordinance of this Church. I hope we will not forget it, for your action is the action of the Church and binds it.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

First, I am grateful for your promotion to First Counselor. I am grateful for your sustaining vote for Brother Moyle, who fills a great need that we had in the First Presidency. He is indomitable in his courage and has only the welfare of the Church at heart.

But we miss Brother Stephen L. Richards. We miss his gentleness, his kindness, his wisdom, his experience, his courtesy, his loyalty to the Church, and his great work in connection with the missionary service. We miss President Richards.

I now recall vividly the great address of President McKay, and I endorse all that has been said, not only by him in that address but by all the Brethren who have followed. This has been a great conference, filled to overflowing with the Spirit of the Lord.

I am grateful for all this and with the President's permission, I want to add a word or two, more particularly on the world condition.

When Christ came to the earth, there was, so far as I know, only one nation, the Hebrew nation, that understood and worshiped the true God, the God of Sinai—"Thou shalt have no other gods before me." (Exodus 20:3.)

He commissioned his apostles:

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." (Mark 16:15-16.)

The latter "and is baptized" was added in our day, for we received the very same commission. And there was entrusted to us the opening, and the carrying on, of the Last Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, and we have been authorized further and commissioned thereto, by the ordination and conferring at the hands of heavenly messengers, the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God, divided into two, the Melchizedek and the Aaronic, that we might avoid the constant repetition of the name of the Son.

The whole world, when Christ left, except the Hebrews, on the eastern continent, except the Hebrews and the few that Christ left, a few hundred, were pagans, not believing in the God of Sinai and of course, not believing in the gospel as did not generally the Hebrew nation. We have been fighting for two thousand years until today, titulary at any rate, not quite half of the inhabitants of the world believe in this God of Sinai and in the Christ. The other half is pagan who do not accept God, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and our God, the God of the Christian world, but who have something that is equivalent thereto that satisfies them, but it is pagan.

But we have this added situation: we have the man described by President McKay and commented upon so well, who in effect is the directing head of this whole great body of paganism in their ideology and in their non-belief in God. I think this is the first time in all history when God's people have been faced with an organized paganism more or less guided and directed by one who denies God and says he is unconvertible from his atheism.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

We get the impression that he has in mind that his Marxian ideology, and his atheism, shall gain control somehow and make of all of us the followers of his doctrines. He preaches peace, I may say, and then he preaches the abandonment of certain weapons of war, then he preaches that we go back to traditional warfare, where numbers count, he preaches that we shall destroy our military installations, and if he gets rid of these, I see no end to what he may try to do.

The whole Western world, the Christian, the God-fearing world, with the exceptions that exist in each country that follows Marxism, with the exception that exists in Russia, relatively few, but perhaps in good part many, these are the things which we face under his direction.

Now, let us have no illusions about this, brethren and sisters. The plan is really one of exterminating God and Christianity. Into our hands has been placed through divine ordinations the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God. In our hands is the responsibility of carrying forward.

We do not have now a united front to this united paganism. We are still torn and divided among many sects. But the problem we face, if the plans of the Marxian paganism are carried out, is our extermination.

God has declared that the Lord will never take away or give to another people the authority and the gospel plan which we have. I want to bring home to every one of you brethren and sisters of the Church, and to others so far as I may speak, the seriousness of this situation. You cannot mollify an unconvertible, you may not hope that after his ends are gained, for any but the treatment he has administered upon others.

There are good people in Russia. There are faithful people in Russia.

Elder Benson has recently met a few of them. But they live under this Marxian theory, and one of the elements of that is the destruction of free agency which was given to the sons of God before the world was created. Through it there was the rebellion in heaven. Through free agency we climb to the heights that lead us into exaltation. The Marxian theology repudiates God.

I have a feeling, brothers and sisters, that any man or woman who voluntarily subjects himself to this pagan ideology, who voluntarily lives within its jurisdiction, who voluntarily under this theory gives up his free agency, has lost his testimony and is on the road to apostasy.

I cannot bring too strongly that here in the last days, paganism is under one head, and that head is guided by Satan himself. Please, brethren and sisters of the Church, keep the home fires of testimony and knowledge of the gospel and of God and of Jesus Christ, keep the home fires burning in your homes, in your priesthood quorums, and all the rest, for I am sure, one way or another, we shall have to face dire persecution.

I bear my testimony that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, the Savior of the world, the Redeemer of mankind, the first fruits of the resurrection. I bear my testimony that the authority of the Holy Order of the Priesthood of the Son of God is upon the earth, bestowed through heavenly messengers upon Joseph Smith, who has given to us the plan of the gospel. I bear my testimony that the powers and authority that were given to Joseph Smith have passed on down through, from President to President, until we have now President David O. McKay, who stands by your sustaining vote, as the prophet, seer, and revelator, and President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and that he possesses all that his predecessors have had who have gone before.

May God bless us all.

I thank you for the strength that has been mine, and I do it in the name of Jesus. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. of the First Presidency has just concluded speaking. He also just presented the General Authorities, General Officers, General Auxiliary Officers of the Church for your sustaining vote. We thank you, brothers and sisters, for your unanimous vote in the affirmative.

Brother Howard W. Hunter, will you please come forward and take your place in the Council of the Twelve.

We shall now hear from Elder George Q. Morris of the Council of the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Bruce R. McConkie.

ELDER GEORGE Q. MORRIS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I am wholly dependent upon the blessings of the Lord, and pray that his Holy Spirit may direct me to say that which he would have me say.

Yesterday we heard something about youth marriages, ninety percent of which end in divorce. [See Elder Mark E. Petersen's address.] A very deplorable condition was reported as prevailing in some places among some people. I should like, if the Lord will bless me to that end, to say something about a form of marriage that our people, young and old, may enter into, one that our people should look forward to and be prepared for, and I am persuaded that because many are not so prepared, there is a lack of proper understanding among parents and children and a lack of proper appreciation of the great importance of this marriage that involves the salvation and eternal life of our people.

We speak of salvation, and I am wondering if we know what it means. The Lord made this wonderful declaration among the glorious things that he has told us: "For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.)

What is eternal life? What is immortality? What is exaltation and salvation? The Lord says: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

The Lord Jesus Christ said, as we have it in the New Testament: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:

"... That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (Ibid., 3:14-15.) This is understood as salvation through the gospel of Jesus Christ.

First, what is immortality? In the 29th section of the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord said: "And thus did I, the Lord God, appoint unto man the days of his probation—that by his natural death he might be raised in immortality"—death is the door to immortality—and then the Lord continues, "unto eternal life, even as many as would believe;

"And they that believe not unto eternal damnation. . . ." (D&C 29:43-44.)

So through the atonement of Jesus Christ immortality comes, and has come to every human soul, and will always come. The Lord also says in the 29th section that the trump should sound for the resurrection, ". . . and then shall all the dead awake, for their graves shall be opened, and they shall come forth—yea, even all." (Ibid., 29:26.) This is in agreement with the teachings in the New Testament which declare:

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice,

"And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." (John 5:28-29.)

So they shall all come forth from the grave. What then? The Prophet Amulek says: "Now, behold, I have spoken unto you concerning the death of the mortal body, and also concerning the resurrection of the mortal body. I say unto you that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body, that is from death, even from the first death unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption." (Alma 11:45.) This is immortality. It comes to every soul, good or bad, believer or non-believer. It has already been established for all the souls of man who ever have lived or who will live in the future.

Saturday, October 10

Now what is eternal life? In attempting to discuss this great subject, and the time so short, I thought I might bring to you the words of the Lord himself upon this subject so that you may ponder them as you may have opportunity. The Lord defines eternal life very clearly in the 88th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, fourth verse.

"This Comforter is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom"; Then to make plain that eternal life is the fulness of the celestial glory, he explains further, "Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son—" (D&C 88:4-5.)

I refer you to section 76:53-70 of the Doctrine and Covenants, which explains in more detail the fulness of the glory of the celestial kingdom, which the Lord says is eternal life, which he further confirms when he said, "... if you keep my commandments and endure to the end you shall have eternal life, which gift is the greatest of all the gifts of God." (Ibid., 14:7.) This then is eternal life.

And how shall we obtain eternal life? Well, only through the gospel of Jesus Christ. There is no other way, and as President Smith emphasized yesterday, the salvation that we are talking about as servants of God and the people of God with this dispensation of the gospel given to us for the world, is exaltation, a fulness of God's gift, eternal life.

Now, the Lord revealed the glorious principles of the gospel in the Book of Mormon as restored through the Prophet Joseph, and for fourteen years the Lord revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith principles of life and salvation. One of these revelations is the 132nd section of the Doctrine and Covenants, regarding the "new and everlasting covenant of marriage," which is very specific in its character, and the Lord, in mentioning it and introducing the subject to the Prophet, makes these very striking and significant statements:

"For behold, I reveal unto you a new and an everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory." (Ibid., 132:4.)

Remember that statement—the covenant of celestial or heavenly marriage, if rejected by us, shuts us out of his glory.

"For all who will have a blessing at my hands shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as were instituted from before the foundation of the world.

"And as pertaining to the new and everlasting covenant, it was instituted for the fulness of my glory; and he that receiveth a fulness thereof must and shall abide the law, or he shall be damned, . . ." (Ibid., 5-6.)

Now that is as explicit and plain as anything could be, and the fulness of God's glory is eternal life, the greatest gift that God can give and that is involved in this principle of marriage, as instituted of God by the authority of God, and in being true to the covenants of that marriage.

Then the Lord, to explain the principle more clearly, refers to the ordinary marriage. He says: "And everything that is in the world, whether it be ordained of men, by thrones, or principalities, or powers, or things of name, whatsoever they may be, that are not by me or by my word, saith the Lord, shall be thrown down, and shall not remain after men are dead, neither in nor after the resurrection, saith the Lord your God.

"For whatsoever things remain are by me; and whatsoever things are not by me shall be shaken and destroyed.

"Therefore, if a man marry him a wife in the world, and he marry her not by me nor by my word, and he covenant with her so long as he is in the world and she with him, their covenant and marriage are not of force when they are dead, and when they are out of the world; therefore, they are not bound by any law when they are out of the world." (Ibid., 13-15.)

Then note what follows: "Therefore, when they are out of the world they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but are appointed angels in heaven, which angels are ministering servants, to minister for those who are worthy of a far more, and an exceeding, and an eternal weight of glory." (Ibid., 16.)

The status has changed. The Lord continues, "For these angels did not abide my law; therefore, they cannot be enlarged, but remain separately and singly, without exaltation, in their saved condition, to all eternity; and from henceforth are not gods, but are angels of God forever and ever." (Ibid., 17.)

They may be saved in the celestial kingdom, but they cannot be enlarged, and forever and ever they remain a person of a lower degree—a lower order of being, stripped of the greatest power, that of eternal increase.

"For strait is the gate," the Lord continues, "and narrow the way that leadeth unto the exaltation and continuation of the lives, and few there be that find it, because ye receive me not in the world neither do ye know me. . . .

"Broad is the gate, and wide the way that leadeth to the deaths; and many there are that go in thereat, because they receive me not, neither do they abide in my law." (Ibid., 22, 25.)

Therefore we see that eternal life which God says it is his glory and honor to bring to mankind is gained by obedience to the law of eternal marriage, which is instituted before the foundations of the world, to bring about the fulness of exaltation.

In the 132nd section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verses 19-21, the Lord explains the covenant and blessings of celestial marriage as follows:

"And again, verily I say unto you, if a man marry a wife by my word, which is my law, and by the new and everlasting covenant, and it is sealed unto them by the Holy Spirit of promise, by him who is anointed, unto whom I have appointed this power and the keys of this priesthood; and it shall be said unto them—Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; and if it be after the first resurrection, in the next resurrection; and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, all heights and depths—then shall it be written in the Lamb's Book of Life, that he shall commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, and if ye abide in my covenant, and commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are out of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever.

"Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue; then shall they be above all, because all things are subject unto them. Then shall they be gods, because they have all power, and the angels are subject unto them.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, except ye abide my law ye cannot attain to this glory."

Now I believe that our teachers, our leaders, and our parents must be taught and must teach these principles. They are as clear as words can make them, as the Lord has explained them. I cannot help feeling that many are not being properly married because they are not properly taught. It is not enough to urge temple marriage. They must know what temple marriage means. It is a matter of eternal life and exaltation in the presence of God forever and forever.

I close with a statement of the Prophet Joseph Smith: "In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees;

"And in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage];

"And if he does not, he cannot obtain it.

"He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase." (Ibid., 131:1-4.)

May the Lord help us to awaken our youth and the parents, and all of us, to the need to know what this marriage is, to live worthy of it, to be prepared for it, for our youth to enter into it when they are mature enough, and trained enough, and for all who have been married for time only to prepare themselves for this glorious covenant—because in this marriage that God has instituted there are three parties to it. God is the principal party, and the union is consummated by his power and his authority, and his promises are attached to that union. If, in it, we are faithful and true to the gospel of Jesus Christ, we shall be exalted in his presence and dwell with him forever.

May God give us the power to make clear to all these glorious revelations, now available to the world, because the gospel has been restored in its fulness, and for the full salvation of the human soul.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder George Q. Morris of the Council of the Twelve has just spoken to us. Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy will now address us.

ELDER BRUCE R. McCONKIE

Of the First Council of the Seventy

May I take as a text these words which were dictated by the Holy Ghost to an inspired man in ancient Israel:

"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

"The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes.

"The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

"More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

"Moreover by them is thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward." (Psalm 19:7-11.)

Now if I may be enlightened by the same Spirit that rested upon him who wrote these words, I would like to indicate the great compelling necessity, the overwhelming obligation, that rests upon us as members of this great latter-day kingdom, to come to a knowledge of the law of the Lord, to know the doctrines of the gospel, to understand the principles, requirements, and ordinances which we must comply with in order to be heirs of salvation in the Lord's kingdom.

We believe and advocate that every member of this Church should have a testimony of the divinity of the work; that he should know for himself, independent of any other person, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that salvation is in him; that Joseph Smith is the agent and instrument through whom the knowledge of salvation has come again in our day; and that the mantle of the Prophet rests upon President David O. McKay at this time. By first gaining a testimony and then by being valiant in testimony, we can be heirs of salvation.

But no man can have a testimony of this work until he begins to get a knowledge of the gospel. A testimony is based on knowledge; first a man must learn about God and his laws, and then by obedience to these laws he will gain a testimony. Jesus said, "... My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John 7:16-17.)

We believe that all members of this Church should be fully and completely converted, so much so that they are changed from a natural and fallen state into saints of God, changed into a state where they have in their hearts desires for righteousness. By following such a course they are born again; they are renewed of the Spirit; they are in line for eternal salvation. But no one can attain unto such a state until he knows the laws that govern the process of being converted.

We believe that after we join this Church it is incumbent upon us to press forward in steadfastness and in devotion, living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, desiring righteousness, seeking his Spirit, loving him with all our hearts, mights, minds, and strength; and yet we cannot do any of these things until we first learn the laws which govern them. In the full gospel sense, there is no such thing as living a law of which we are ignorant. We cannot worship a God of whom we know nothing, as far as gaining eternal life through that worship is concerned.

And so I think we have the obligation, the great underlying responsibility, to learn the doctrines of the Church so that we will be able to serve in the kingdom, so that we will be able to carry the message of salvation to our Father's other children, and so that we will be able to live in such a manner as to have peace and joy ourselves, and gain this hope of glorious exaltation and eternal life of which Brother George Q. Morris has been speaking.

We have been commanded to do this very thing. We say, for instance, that no man can be saved in ignorance, and we mean in ignorance of Jesus Christ and the saving truths of the gospel. We say that men are saved no faster than they gain knowledge, and we mean knowledge of God and the principles and doctrines which he has revealed. We say that the glory of God is intelligence, and we mean that his glory is light and truth—including the revealed light of heaven and the truths of salvation.

When Moses was finishing his ministry in ancient Israel, after he had led that people through all their travails in the wilderness, he, being moved upon by the Spirit, took occasion to summarize the laws, the statutes, the judgments, the ordinances, the things that they, Israel, would be required to do; and after having so done, he said this:

"And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

"And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

"And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

"And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates." (Deut. 6:6-9.)

In other words, Moses was commanding that Israel should center their souls and hearts upon studying and knowing and learning the laws of the Lord so that they would be in the position and have the ability to live them, and thus gain salvation and perform fully the mission appointed to that chosen people.

Now in our day we have the standard works of the Church. We have the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. There are in these four books a total of 1579 chapters. I think it would not be too much to say that we could with propriety, day in and day out, consistently, read three chapters in one or the other of these works; and if we pursued such a course, we would read all of the Gospels in less than a month. We would read the entire New Testament in three months. We would read the Old Testament in ten months, and the whole Bible in thirteen months. We would go through the Book of Mormon in two and two-thirds months, the Doctrine and Covenants in a month and a half, and the Pearl of Great Price in five days. Taken altogether, we would read all the standard works in less than eighteen months and be ready to start over again.

Well, it does not seem to me that the Lord is viewing us any differently from the way he viewed ancient Israel. Our whole hearts and souls and our continual meditation should be centered on the gospel and the things of the Lord, so that we can work out our salvation and fulfil our missions. By regular, systematic study of the standard works we can go a long way toward keeping in a course that will please the Lord and further our own eternal progression. In this way we can gain for ourselves peace and satisfaction and happiness in this life and have a hope of eternal life in the world to come.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the First Council of Seventy has just addressed us.

Professor David A. Shand will now lead the congregation and Combined Choruses and the Bonneville Strings in singing "Come, O Thou King of Kings." Bishop Carl W. Buehner will follow the singing by the congregation.

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric will now address us. He will be followed by Elder Alma Sonne.

BISHOP CARL W. BUEHNERSecond Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric*

My dear brethren and sisters, with you I have enjoyed every moment of this great conference. I have had a lump in my throat a number of times as I have felt the power and Spirit that has been present in these sessions. I am very grateful to you for your sustaining vote which permits me to be with my brethren for six more months.

I should also like to express my gratitude in the selection of Elder Howard W. Hunter to become a member of the Council of the Twelve and sincerely pray that the Lord will magnify and sustain him in this high and holy calling.

I must confess to you that in making preparations for these few precious moments, I conferred with a very choice friend of mine. He has given me a number of suggestions. He said, "Warn the young people how the evil one, through his power, would like to destroy all that is good in them, defame their character, undermine their physical body, and poison their mind even as the lowly termite can destroy a building."

Do you know what a termite is? A termite is an ugly, little ant-like looking insect, very light in color, that does all its work in the dark. If it has to get from the earth where it gets its moisture, to the area in which it finds the timbers in which it works, it builds itself a little channel so that it cannot be seen as it goes back and forth. It costs citizens of this country hundreds of millions of dollars annually to replace the damage done to the wood in buildings by these little destroyers. The exterior of a structure can look beautiful and sound, but because the strength of its timbers has been eaten away by termites, and only an outer shell is left standing, it can become very dangerous and of little value. "So also can evil influences undermine us and darken our vision to the wonderful blessings ahead," my friend said.

My friend also gave me this idea: He said, "How about the message in the song that says,

"The world has need of willing men,
Who wear the worker's seal.
Come, help the good work move along.
Put your shoulder to the wheel."

I thought of thousands of our organizations in all parts of the world, officered with those willing and able to keep the good work moving along. A tremendous effort to further our Father's business is in progress, and for each of us to put our shoulder to the wheel would not only increase this effort but also bring in return, happiness, and blessings that could be secured from no other source. "Urge everyone to go to work in this great cause," said my friend.

I asked him for one more idea. I had to admit that he did have wonderful suggestions. He said, "What this world needs is people who go about doing good." One of the greatest compliments paid to the Savior was given by his great disciple, Peter, when among other things, he said, and he "... went about doing good. . . ." (Acts 10:38.) Then my friend reminded me that in my travels I had surely observed instances and had experiences that illustrate this very thing. Said he, "Why not tell the people some of these things?"

In my mind's eye, I immediately saw an army of 140,000 men and boys, visiting among the wards as ward teachers, making in excess of three and one-half million visits each year to the homes of the members of the Church. The good that is being accomplished by them and the blessings they are bringing into these homes cannot be measured. I learned recently that one of these ward teachers had served in excess of eighty-two years. It is said that in those eighty-two years, he missed visiting his district only four or five times. I heard one of the bishops who presided over this ward pay a tremendous tribute to this man. He indicated that if there was ever a man alive who went about his ward doing good, it was this man. I have learned of some who served for over seventy years, and many who have given sixty years of service as ward teachers. I cannot help feeling that they certainly have been a power and influence for good among the people of the Church.

Only a few days ago in a stake quarterly conference I heard a young man, who, with his parents, had been living in the mission field, say that he had the responsibility of visiting three families each month. He, together with his companion, in order to make these visits was required to travel 160 miles in one direction from the place they lived to visit two of these families and had to go 130 miles in the opposite direction to visit the other family, but they did the visiting every month.

I learned of the dedication of some others. While visiting a stake in the Northwest, I learned that there are communities which become isolated from the rest of the world during the winter months. Here some of our members reside. Ward teachers who have the responsibility of visiting these families have been so eager to make contact with them that they have traveled by horseback, jeep, and even used a tractor to make the visit to be sure that all was well and to learn whether or not they could be of any assistance. Then I realize that the same thing exists with the great Relief Society visiting teachers' program. They, too, go into the homes of members every month with probably 140,000 teachers. This makes 280,000 teachers visiting among our families, and this cannot help being a powerful influence for good.

I heard a story about a little Primary child who came from a home where the parents were inactive. The child faithfully attended Primary and apparently listened carefully to each lesson. One night as the family gathered around the dinner table and were ready to partake of the meal, the little girl suddenly said, "I can't eat tonight." After careful questioning by the parents, the little girl finally said, "Mother, I have learned in Primary that we should not eat the food that is placed before us until we thank our Heavenly Father for it." The father and mother looked at each other, wondering what to do, and the little girl, observing the anxiety in their eyes, said, "If you are wondering who can do this, I can." The little girl asked the blessing on the food; her appetite returned; and everything seemed all right until the same situation occurred the following evening. The little girl just could not eat her dinner, and the mother, remembering the experience of the night before, said to her, "You asked the blessing last night, ask it again tonight." The little girl said, "Mother, I can't do it. I learned in Primary that there are some things the Lord does not want us to take into our bodies, and some of these things are on this table." When the cups of coffee and the coffee pot had been removed and disposed of, the little girl asked the blessing on the food, and the family resumed eating. "You will never know the change that came over our home through the teaching of our little Primary child," the mother remarked.

An appreciative wife whose husband was a very inactive man in the Church related the following experience: "Through the personal missionary program of the priesthood quorum, a fine, active man was assigned to contact my husband to see if he could bring him back into activity in the Church. This man faithfully telephoned our home every Saturday night, telling my husband that he would call again in the morning in the hope that he would be ready to go to priesthood meeting with him. 'It would be a pleasure to let me come and take you to meeting with me. You just don't know what you are missing,' he said. Each time for twenty weeks, my husband found an excuse, not only on Saturday evening but on Sunday morning; but on the twenty-first Sunday morning, my husband came out of his bedroom all dressed up. Excitedly, I said to him, 'My heavens, where are you going this morning?' He remarked that in a few moments he would be getting a telephone call. 'I have had them for twenty weeks, you know, and I will receive one again in a few moments. When I tell this man that I am all dressed and ready to go to priesthood meeting with him, it could be such a shock to him that he may not be able to come and get me." "Well," said his wife, "you don't miss the blessings of the priesthood in the home until you realize what has been denied you. My husband will never get over thanking this man for calling him persistently until finally he yielded. What it has done for him and our family is tremendous."

I have learned in the last day or two of many of the great services our servicemen are lending in the building program of the Church. As you know, they are assigned to military camps in all parts of the world. In many of these areas, buildings will be erected, and servicemen will make very substantial contributions to those buildings in cash and in time. In many instances, they will not be able to use these buildings when they are completed. They will have been transferred to another area. I learned yesterday of a man who, with his family, had decided to take a vacation. When all preparations had been made, and because they were in the midst of a building program in their ward, he said to his family, "Well, let's just buy a plane ticket for mother so she can go and visit her family, and while she is gone, the boys and I will give our vacation time to the construction of our chapel." I saw that chapel. I saw this man and his sons working on this chapel. I shook hands with each of them. I caught the thrill that came to them. Probably the best vacation this man will ever have will be the one he gave to assist in building one of these beautiful chapels in the Church.

Many stories of the efficacy of our welfare program have been told, and I realize I must not take too much time to speak about these, but let me tell you of one case that happened recently. A man and his wife came to our office, the man bandaged from his head to his feet, to pay tribute to the work of the welfare program. Fire had struck this man's home. Two of his children were burned to death in the fire; two others sustained serious burns; and he, too, was burned practically over the entire surface of his body. He had now recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital and was so overjoyed when he saw what the brethren of his ward had done to rebuild his burned home that he came to the office of the Presiding Bishopric just to thank the Church for the great welfare program. We were about to have a meeting with the First Presidency and so invited this man and his wife to go downstairs with us and shake hands with these brethren. I am sure no greater thrill will ever come to this couple than to have this privilege, and I heard this man say to the First Presidency, "I do not think I could have endured that which has happened to us had it not been for the warmth, the love, and the blessing of the brethren who came to my rescue." The day he came to our office, he said, "Fifteen or twenty masons are there today installing my block walls, and by tonight my house will be up to the square. They told me that tomorrow that many carpenters will be there to place the rafters on the roof, cover them with sheathing, and I am told by tomorrow night, it will be shingled, all this done in one day."

There are many instances where farmers through illness or accidents have not been able to plant their farms in the spring and harvest their crops in the fall, but their farms were planted and their crops were harvested because of the love of their quorum members.

I learned of individuals who sacrificed for the missionary program. Just one or two expressions: one given by a grandmother who was on her way to the mission field. In bearing her testimony the last night the missionaries were in town, she said, "I would be willing to scrub floors the rest of my life if my twelve grandsons could have the wonderful experience of going on a mission." Could you ask for any greater dedication than this? One other young man said, "My mother is doing janitor work to sustain me while I am in the mission field."

I feel there are many people in the world who are going about doing good. I wish all had a desire to do good.

I want to thank my friend for these thoughts. I hope my friend may also be your friend. My friend is the still small voice. He and I have had an interesting experience on many occasions as we have pondered over the work of the Church.

God bless you, inspire you, and help you to go about doing good, blessing our people. I pray for this and bear you my testimony in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Bishop Carl W. Buehner of the Presiding Bishopric. Our concluding speaker this morning will be Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER ALMA SONNE

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, the good and fervent prayer offered at the beginning of this session by President Lewis has been answered in blessings upon our heads. I hope the good Spirit will continue with us throughout this service.

I am very happy, and I was delighted to hear that President Hunter had been called to fill the vacancy in the Quorum of the Twelve. President Hunter has been for many years a leader in Zion. He has been proved, and I say that a Church is very fortunate indeed that can call upon men of his caliber to serve freely and pleasantly in the great position which he now occupies.

I was also very happy this morning to hear the vigor and the strength demonstrated by President Clark in his sermon to us. The Lord has blessed him, and I am sure you join with me in expressing gratitude for his recovery, that his leadership may continue amongst us.

Yesterday, I was thrilled and greatly uplifted by that masterful sermon delivered by President McKay on the character, the teachings, and the life of Jesus Christ, the Lord. I was also pleased with his references to the Sermon on the Mount delivered by the Savior before a small group of people gathered on the mountainside. That sermon has lived for centuries. It has survived the Dark Ages. It has survived the Renaissance. It has survived modern speculations and the conflicts and the contention among nations.

That sermon will live forever. There is nothing more fundamental in God's word than the sermon which the Savior gave and which is called the Sermon on the Mount.

A few years ago I attended a Sacrament meeting in the South London Branch in London. The occasion was a Christmas program. On that program appeared a Jewish musician. He played a selection on the cello. It was very good. The presiding officer tried to get him to play another selection, but he refused. He said, however, "I will sing a solo, if that will be acceptable." He stepped forward, and he sang the song we all love, "The Lord's Prayer," after which he took his seat in the audience.

When the meeting was over, he walked up to me and said, and these are his words, "You will have to get something more practical than the Sermon on the Mount if you expect to convert the Jews."

I said to him, "Have you ever read the Sermon on the Mount?"

He said, "I must have read it."

"I hope you have," I suggested, "before you criticize it." And then I said to him, "You sang a wonderful song tonight, 'The Lord's Prayer.' Did it ever occur to you that that prayer was a part of the Sermon on the Mount?" He did not seem to realize it.

"Now," I said, "Will you tell me one single teaching in that sermon which is not practical. Name one thing in it that cannot be practised and introduced into your daily life." He was silent.

Then I began to repeat for him that wonderful prayer offered by Jesus as an example to his disciples. "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6-7.) Isn't that a practical aspiration to have?" I said.

He made no reply.

Then I repeated this: "Give us this day our daily bread." Surely, that is practical to a man like you."

And he said, "Oh, it is very practical."

I continued, "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." We are having a lot of trouble with debts

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

these days, individual and national. Don't you think we ought to pray about it once in a while?" I asked.

"It wouldn't be amiss," he replied.

And then I gave him this statement: "... deliver us from evil." Is that not a prayerful hope that all of us should have? It refers to the evil that appears in our pathways, evil that frustrates and stultifies us as we go forth in our daily affairs. 'Deliver us from evil,' is a plea for strength to resist temptation.

I called his attention to two or three other statements in the sermon: "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

"For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

At last he was impressed. He said, "Oh, if you Christians would honor that last commandment, 'As you measure out to others, it shall be measured back to you.'"

I said, "Not only the Christians, but the Jews as well."

Then he began to explain if that commandment were believed today we would be living in a different world. Fancy someone believing a teaching which declares, as we measure out to others, it will be measured back to us. There would then be no dishonesty in the world. There would be no persecution. There would be no war. There would be no bloodshed. There would be no contentions in our civilized society because the world stands on one of the great laws taught by the Lord Jesus.

I quoted again from the sermon:

"'Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.' Can't you see the practical thing in that teaching, my brother? If we desire something, something that is precious, something we need, certainly it will require effort on our part."

My friend left me. He said, "I will go home and read the Sermon on the Mount."

I asked, "You have a New Testament?"

He said, "I believe I have, but it must be covered with dust."

And now it occurs to me that when Joseph Smith penned his thirteen Articles of Faith, he stated in the fourth one that the first principle of the gospel is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. There may be other kinds of faith, but the faith that will lead us on to eternal happiness and salvation is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

May we be true to that sermon, and may we acquit ourselves in such a way that we may be worthy of an exaltation in God's kingdom, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Alma Sonne, Assistant to the Twelve, has just spoken to us.

The singing for this session has been furnished by the University of Utah Choral Society—the Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Choruses and the Bonneville Strings—David A. Shand, director. We wish to express appreciation for the attendance and the inspirational singing rendered by this body of young people. Thank you. You have inspired us not only by your singing, but by the realization, and we treasure the thought, that your lives conform to the ideals of the Gospel songs that you are rendering so impressively. We are happy to welcome you back this afternoon. We thank you for your inspiration this morning.

They will close by singing, "The Vision," and the benediction will be offered by Bishop John L. Herrick, formerly president of the Western States Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned until two o'clock. We shall now be favored by "The Vision," by the Combined Choruses.

Singing by the Combined Choruses, "The Vision" by Evan Stephens.

Elder John L. Herrick, formerly president of the Western States Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The Conference reconvened at 2 o'clock p.m., Saturday, October 10, 1959.

The singing for this session was by the University of Utah Choral Society (The Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Choruses and the Bonneville Strings), David A. Shand directing, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

President David O. McKay, who was presiding and conducting, made the following introductory remarks:

President David O. McKay:

For the information of those who are listening in over radio, or looking at television, we are pleased to announce that we are assembled in the great Tabernacle in Salt Lake City on Temple Square in the fourth session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. For those who cannot find seats—there are some standing in the doorways—we announce that overflow meetings are being held in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall, and these services will be broadcast at both those places.

The singing for this afternoon's session will be furnished by the University of Utah Choral Society—the Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Choruses, and the Bonneville Strings—conducted by Professor David A. Shand, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Combined Choruses singing, "Though Deepening Trials." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Edgar L. Wagner, formerly president of the Central American Mission.

The Combined Choruses sang the hymn, "Though Deepening Trials."

Elder Edgar LeRoy Wagner, formerly president of the Central American Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

The invocation was offered by Elder Edgar L. Wagner, formerly president of the Central American Mission. The University of Utah Choral Society will now favor us with, "He Watching Over Israel," conducted by Professor David Shand. After the singing Elder Spencer W. Kimball will speak to us.

---

Singing by the Combined Choruses, "He Watching Over Israel."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Spencer W. Kimball of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker. He will be followed by Patriarch Eldred G. Smith.

ELDER SPENCER W. KIMBALL

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brothers and sisters, it is a delight to welcome into our circle our new member, Brother Hunter. He has our admiration and our affection.

In the few moments at my disposal I should like to address my remarks to you, our kinsmen of the isles of the sea and the Americas. Millions of you have blood relatively unmixed with Gentile nations. Columbus called you "Indians," thinking he had reached the East Indies. Millions of you are descendants of Spaniards and Indians, and are termed "mestizos," and are called after your countries, for instance: Mexicans in Mexico; Guatemalans in Guatemala; Chilianos in Chile.

You Polynesians of the Pacific are called Samoan or Maori, Tahitian or Hawaiian, according to your islands. There are probably sixty million of you on the two continents and on the Pacific Islands, all related by blood ties.

The Lord calls you "Lamanites," a name which has a pleasant ring, for many of the grandest people ever to live upon the earth were so called. In a limited sense, the name signifies the descendants of Laman and Lemuel, sons of your first American parent, Lehi; but you undoubtedly possess also the blood of the other sons, Sam, Nephi, and Jacob. And you likely have some Jewish blood from Mulek, son of Zedekiah, king of Judah. The name "Lamanite" distinguishes you from other peoples. It is not a name of derision or embarrassment, but one of which to be very proud.

You came from Jerusalem in its days of tribulation. You are of royal blood, a loved people of the Lord. In your veins flows the blood of prophets and statesmen; of emperors and kings; apostles and martyrs. Adam and Enoch sired you; Noah brought you through the flood; in the sandals of Abraham you walked from Ur of the Chaldees to your first "promised land"; you climbed in faith with Isaac to the holy mount of sacrifice; and you followed the path of hunger to Egypt with your father Jacob, and with Joseph you established, under the Pharaohs, the first great known welfare project.

You are the children of Ephraim and Manasseh, Joseph's sons and of Judah, his brother. Your fathers crossed the Jordan River with Joshua, and after centuries' absence you were again in your first "promised land."

The Genoese Italian boy, with his three ships from Spain, thought he had discovered a new world, but he was thousands of years late. Your people were on the shores to welcome Columbus and his men. Cortez, Pizarro, and their contemporaries, conquerors, exploiters found your "old people" already decadent intellectually, culturally, and spiritually, but populous in your wealth and poverty. Norwegian Vikings are said to have discovered this land before Columbus, but your people were already scattered from the Arctic to the Antarctic before there was a Norway or Vikings.

When your prophet Lehi led you out of Jerusalem about 600 years B. C., you brought with you the best of the culture of Egypt and Palestine and of the then known world; also the written language of your fathers and the holy scriptures from Adam down to your own time, these engraved upon brass plates. You brought with you an absolute knowledge of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and maintained for a long time thereafter open vision and clear, unobstructed lines of communication with your Lord.

In the new "promised land" the seeds you brought from Palestine multiplied and brought to you great prosperity on the extensive lands you farmed. In your explorations you found gold, silver, copper, and iron, and processed brass and steel. Your factories turned out machinery and tools for agriculture, architecture, and road building. And with those tools you build cities, such as you knew in Egypt and Palestine, highways which would carry your traffic, and temples after the order of the world-famed Solomon's Temple.

Your culture was beyond the imagination of moderns. In your prosperity you wore "silks, scarlets, fine-twined linen, and precious clothing." You bejeweled yourselves with ornaments of gold and silver and other metals, and with precious stones. You were fabulously wealthy in your day.

In the long years of prosperity and righteousness, your wealth graced temples and synagogues. You read, quoted, and lived by the teachings of the books of Moses and the inspired writings of the prophets. Your people knew faith such as has seldom been found upon the earth. There were years of conflict and wickedness, but also years of peace and unparalleled goodness.

You produced prophets of stature. There were your Lehis, Nephis, and Jacobs; your Almas, Abinadis, and Mormons. Your Lamanite prophet, Samuel, who prophesied of the Christ, had few peers and perhaps no superiors. Your scientists and teachers and engineers were able and efficient, and left notable monuments.

Then was the transcendently important coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to you. Many of you retain this experience in your traditions. Your people gathered about their temple en masse to hear the words of life from the lips of their Redeemer, who had so recently experienced death, resurrection, and ascension in the Holy Land, as recorded in the New Testament. As they sat with bated breath and eyes uplifted, he came to them from the clouds of heaven as he had so recently left his Saints in Judæa. As they looked into his kindly eyes and wondered about his wounds, he told them of his birth and life and ministry. He repeated to them the vital and priceless sermons on the mount, on the Sea of Galilee, in Samaria, in Jerusalem. He taught them the power of faith, of the battle between truth and evil. He told them of the voice of God, his Father, at the time of his baptism, and of the special endowments to Peter, James, and John on the Holy Mount of Transfiguration, when they also heard the voice of God, the Father. Now Nephite-Lamanite ears were to hear the same voice of the same God, introducing the same Jesus Christ to them: "Behold my Beloved Son." (3 Nephi 11:7.)

He told them of his Church in Jerusalem, and displayed to them his hands, his feet, his side, torn by nails and spear at the hands of his own. He healed their sick, their lame, their blind, as he had in the Holy Land, and blessed their little children around whom fire came down from heaven to glorify. He called his twelve disciples and set them apart to carry on his Church, then ascended into heaven again.

Your Lamanite ancestors were not more rebellious than their Israelitish forebears, but their way of life guaranteed eventual decimation. You had a rugged history with many tribulations, but you have a brilliant future. You are a chosen people; your destiny is in your own hands, your friends', and the Lord's. You were scattered in the great dispersion six centuries before Christ, and again on this continent in the pre- and post-Christian eras, and your more complete dispersion came since Columbus, and the explorers and the colonists.

Someone has said that "the darkest hour is just before the dawn," and your shades of night are giving way to the dawn of a brighter day. Yesterday you roamed the wilderness in feast or famine; today you are finding security in education and industry; and tomorrow your destiny will be brilliant in self-sufficiency, faith, fearlessness, and power. Like the Israelites released from Egyptian bondage, you have been promised deliverance from your foes of superstition, fear, illiteracy, and from the curses of want and disease and suffering.

Yesterday you traveled uncharted oceans, wandered over trackless deserts, lost your high culture, your written tongue, and your knowledge of the true and Living God. Today you are arising from your long sleep and are stretching, yawning, and reaching. Tomorrow you will be highly trained, laying out highways, constructing bridges, developing cities, building temples, and joining in inspired leadership of the Church of your Redeemer.

Historians have written about your past; poets have sung of your possibilities; prophets have predicted your scattering and your gathering; and your Lord has permitted you to walk through the dark chasms of your ancestors' making, but has patiently waited for your awakening, and now smiles on your florescence, and points the way to your glorious future as sons and daughters of God. You will arise from your bed of affliction and from your condition of deprivation if you will accept fully the Lord, Jesus Christ, and his total program. You will rise to former heights in culture and education, influence and power. You will blossom as the rose upon the mountains. Your daughters will be nurses, teachers, and social workers, and, above all, beloved wives and full-of-faith mothers of a righteous posterity.

Your sons will compete in art, literature, and medicine, in law, architecture, etc. They will become professional, industrial, and business leaders, and statesmen of the first order. Together you and we shall build in the spectacular city of New Jerusalem the temple to which our Redeemer will come. Your hands with ours, also those of Jacob, will place the foundation stones, raise the walls, and roof the magnificent structure. Perhaps your artistic hands will paint the temple and decorate it with a master's touch, and together we shall dedicate to our Creator Lord the most beautiful of all temples ever built to his name.

Sad have been your experiences of the last sixteen centuries. From the unexcelled righteousness of the post-Christian era, your ancestors slipped into an apostasy which has brought centuries of suffering and distress to their posterity. Fabulously wealthy, they forgot their God. They divided into tribes and clans and went to war with each other, driving and plundering, till the continent was a pulsating war camp.

You had great warriors like Ammoran, Helaman, and Mormon, who in cunning strategy and leadership rivaled the Cyruses, Alexanders, and Caesars. Your downfall came when your people walked the way to war. Revenge and hatreds made cold wars flame into hot shooting ones. Baptismal waters became rivers of blood. The parched earth policy was followed, and enemy armies surged back and forth across the land, tramping down crops, squandering livestock, and changing a stable people into nomads.

When armies march and people fight, education suffers, art languishes, buildings crumble, forests are exploited, farms return to desert, and orchards to jungle. Fighting men build temporary bridges, forts, and towers instead of homes, public buildings, and observatories. There is neither time nor inclination to carve statues, paint landscapes, compose music, or record history. Communities on the march or in retreat have no schools nor teachers. Priceless records are destroyed with the buildings and cities which are burned and pillaged. Artists, scholars, writers, and clergy alike shoulder arms, stalking enemies, and laying siege to cities. Plunder replaces honest industry. Cattle, goats, and poultry are devoured by voracious soldiers. Calves, kids, and piglets are eaten as are the seed-corn, and the wheat. Fruit is devoured, and trees are burned for wood. Today's insatiable hunger swallows tomorrow's plenty. Armies carry movable tents and abandon homes and churches. Temples fall in ruins and are overgrown by vegetation. With ever-decreasing flocks to shear, no weaving or knitting is done, and clothes are replaced with short skin girdles, and heads are shaven. Plowshares are turned into swords, and pruning hooks into spears. The manufacture of farm implements is turned to the making of the scimitar, the ax, and the sword. Life becomes a sordid existence, bloody, with little purpose except to survive.

Mormon said: "... they are led about by Satan, even as chaff is driven before the wind, or as a vessel is tossed about upon the waves, without sail or anchor, or without anything wherewith to steer her. . . ." (Mormon 5:18.)

In all this prolonged period of war and drivings, your immediate ancestors lost their written language, their high culture, and worst of all their knowledge of God and his work. Faith was replaced by fear, language by dialects, history by tradition, and a knowledge and understanding of God and his ways by idolatry, even to human sacrifice. Your priceless thousand years of history, laboriously engraved on plates of metal, and the brass plates of the Old Testament, were hidden by your inspired prophet-historian in the sacred hill in a stone box, to remain undisturbed until a wise Heavenly Father should bring them forth for you, their resting place known only in heaven.

In the business of killing human beings, there could be little inclination to face a Creator and a gospel of peace; the many-times restored gospel of Jesus Christ was lost; and spiritual darkness enveloped the whole world.

When Columbus came, your tribes had covered the islands of the Pacific, and the Americas from Tierra del Fuego to Point Barrow. Every school child is familiar with that period of history when your more recent ancestors were pushed from the Appalachians to the Sierras, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. All know about the four hundred year "battle of America," wherein a disunited multitude of small Indian tribal nations retreated constantly with much bloodshed to far corners, and then on reservations in areas unwanted.

In all this distress your greatest miracle was aborning. When you were decimated by war and disease and all seemed lost, and you were spoken of as "the vanishing American," then hope discovered a star. The colonist, the Gentiles, took your lands, your streams, your forests, but brought something to you immeasurably more valuable—the Holy Bible with its glorious truths, and a written language and progressive schools, scientific development, and intellectual progress.

Centuries earlier your prophets saw in vision and foretold the coming of Columbus and the colonists, of the Revolutionary War, of the creation of the great Gentile nation of the United States of America; of your scattering, and, above all, and most important to you now, of the gathering of your people and their restoration. Prophecies emanating from our Lord never fail, and the oft-predicted miracle of the "marvelous work and a wonder" was soon at hand. The war brought independence to the struggling colonies, and a mighty nation was born with a divinely inspired Constitution, granting to its people religious freedom. Early in the nineteenth century preparations were complete for the marvelous miracle. The long-sealed heavens opened. God, the Father, came down with Jesus Christ, whom he introduced to a young modern prophet, Joseph Smith, saying: "This is my Beloved Son." (P. of G. P., Joseph Smith 2:17.)

Your Redeemer, who ascended in the clouds in the Holy Land eighteen centuries earlier, and who had soon thereafter visited your ancestors on this continent, was now back upon the earth for a stay long enough to open a new dispensation, and charge his new prophet with responsibility, and to introduce the successive events which were to be world-shaking. His visit was brief but momentous. The gospel was returning. The wondrous work continued. Your priceless records, having lain in a vault for centuries, were revealed, Moroni, fourteen centuries dead but now resurrected, led the Prophet to the place. He removed the soil, took from the stone box the golden plates, and blessed with supernatural power gave to you and to your contemporaries the English translation of the miracle book written for you, preserved for you, and dedicated to you.

For you there were prayers of numerous prophets, including Nephi: "For I pray continually for them by day, and mine eyes water my pillow by night." (2 Nephi 33:3.)

Enos said:

"... I prayed unto him with many long strugglings for my brethren the Lamanites... [and] that the Lord God would preserve a record of my people... that it might be brought forth at some future day unto the Lamanites, that, perhaps, they might be brought unto salvation."

"And I had faith, and I did cry unto God that he would preserve the records; and he covenanted with me that he would bring them forth unto the Lamanites in his own due time." (Enos 11, 13, 16.)

Many moderns, lay and trained, have speculated on the origin of the early Americans. Your history sets at rest that question. Many people have questioned the divinity of the Holy Bible. Your record establishes it as the Word of God. Many have denied that Jesus was the very Son of God. Your record leaves no doubt. With its companion scripture, the Bible, there is proof for every honest soul that God lives, that Jesus Christ who was begotten by him is the Redeemer, the Savior. It establishes the truth of the exalting gospel which now came rapidly from the throne of God to the Prophet, to you and to us. Missionaries are now teaching the true gospel to you and your children. You heard today of the organization of the first Lamanite mission in the southern hemisphere—the Andes Mission.

Your record, the Book of Mormon, named after one of its chief historians, makes clearer the numerous predictions of the Bible. Other plates will have their seals broken, and additional truths will be revealed. It tells of your brethren, the Ten Tribes of Israel, who disappeared from Babylon into north countries when your people headed west to this world. They will return with their prophets, and their sacred records will be a third witness for Christ. They, the Ten Tribes, you, the Lamanites, and the believing of us, also carrying the blood of Israel, will jointly build the city to our God, the New Jerusalem, with its magnificent temple. The end of time will come; the millennium will be ushered in; the Lord, Jesus Christ, will return to lead his people; and the earth will be renewed and receive its paradisaical glory.

My Lamanite brothers and sisters, we love you. Our bringing the gospel to you is "likened unto their being nourished by the gentiles and being carried in their arms and upon their shoulders..." (1 Nephi 22:8.) Your God has performed many miracles to get the story written by his prophets, to preserve the records against threats of enemies and the ravages of nature, and to get them translated into a language you can understand, and bring to you this second witness of Christ. Your

Book of Mormon record is as a voice from the dust, messages from the dead, warnings from the Lord:

"Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts." (3 Nephi 24:7.)

Our Lord cries, "Wo unto him that spurneth at the doings of the Lord; yea, wo unto him that shall deny the Christ and his works!" (Ibid., 29:5.)

You have been preserved to this epochal day, and the gospel is available to you now. Wash your souls in the blood of the Lamb. Cleanse your lives, study the scriptures, accept the gospel and ordinances.

These predictions can be fulfilled and come to you through one channel only, the path of righteousness and faith; else all these promises are but empty, unfulfilled dreams.

May God bless you that you may accept the truths now revealed to you, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Patriarch to the Church

My brothers and sisters, I pray that the Spirit of the Lord will be with me to give me utterance of the thoughts that I have in mind to give in this conference. It is a privilege, that I enjoy very much, to meet with many of the new converts of the Church, for many who come to me to receive blessings are the results of our missionary work, and I want to express praise and commendation to the missionary work in the Church because I see the results of it. They are good, and I think it is probably the cream of the crop that come to me.

I enjoy very much hearing their stories of how they have become members of the Church, the processes they have gone through in overcoming difficulties and in receiving a testimony of the divinity of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Many tell miraculous experiences—experiences of miraculous healing, experiences of divine guidance, experiences of assistance to accomplish what otherwise would be impossible—and the Lord has said to us that "signs shall follow them that believe."

I would like to emphasize the word follow just a little bit. He did not say they would precede and be a guide and a testimony to us to prove in advance that this is the gospel of Jesus Christ. He said that the signs shall "follow" those that believe, and I find this to be the case in the stories that I hear.

The Lord has also warned us, saying, "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." (Matthew 24:24.)

Also, in referring to the day of the judgment, he said, "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?"

"And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." (Ibid., 7:22-23.)

Those who have told these experiences, even miraculous experiences, testify to me that it is not the experiences alone that give them a testimony of the divinity of the gospel. True, they strengthen their testimony; true, they are experiences that make them think, cause them to investigate the Church, but they alone are not the things that give them a testimony of the gospel.

For instance, just recently a woman told me of her experience. She became very ill. It had been determined that she had cancer. She had gone through surgery on numerous occasions, until she had come to a point where the doctors had given her up and told her that she did not have months to live, but only weeks. There was no hope for her. She was living at home with a nurse to take care of her. A neighbor called one day. She had a phone near her bed so she could answer it, and the neighbor said to her, "Now when the doorbell rings, don't answer it. It is just those Mormon missionaries coming down the street; so when the doorbell rings, just don't answer it. Don't pay any attention to it."

So the woman thanked her for her consideration, her kindness. She told her nurse that when the doorbell rang she was not to answer it; it was just those Mormon missionaries and to pay no attention to them. Well, the doorbell rang after a few minutes, and the nurse, from force of habit, opened the door, then realized that she had been told not to. She quickly disposed of the missionaries. Immediately after, the nurse left the house to get some groceries. There came a knock on the door. For some reason or other the missionaries had returned. They knocked and got no answer, so they opened the door and called in. Hearing a response from an inner room they went on in. The woman said the missionaries came and stood beside her bed and mumbled a little between themselves something she did not understand. Then one of them said, "Well, it's highly irregular, but I guess if you say so it is all right." The next thing she knew she had been administered to by these Mormon missionaries.

She said when they took their hands off her head she sat up in bed. She got out of bed and went into the kitchen and got some food from her refrigerator. Then she excused herself while she dressed. The missionaries made an appointment to come back at another time. When the nurse returned and saw the woman was up and around, she told her to get back into bed. "No, I'm not going back to bed. I am healed. I am well," the woman said.

The nurse, thinking she was delirious, called the doctor. The doctor also ordered her to get back into bed, but she refused again and said she was well. Over a year later, after the doctor had told her she had but weeks to live, she came to Salt Lake City and went to the temple, then came to my office for a blessing. She was very happy, thrilled as she had never been before in her life. The happiest part of her life has been since the doctor told her she couldn't live. Yet she said it was not the experience of healing alone that gave her a testimony of the gospel.

There are other experiences such as Brother Bates from England told me. He had been working in the MIA, or youth work, in Manchester, England. A large group of circulars had to be sent out in the mail in order to have a youth conference at a scheduled time. He and his group worked feverishly together to get these circulars in the mail. It seemed an almost impossible task, but somehow or other they accomplished it. In order to do so, however, he had spent all morning at it. He had previously made a business appointment for one o'clock at a distance which he knew he could not drive in the time he had left. He had often driven there before, and the time he had left was but a small fraction of what he knew it would take to cover that distance. But he said, "I will take care of the Lord's work first, and then I will leave it up to the Lord as to how my business works out."

He got into his sports car and drove that distance as fast as he could in safety, as he had done many times before. His appointment was for one o'clock, I think he said. When he drove through the gates of the establishment, the clock in the tower struck one. He could not believe it. He said it was impossible. There was something wrong. He got out of his car, and the man he was to meet was waiting for him. He said, "That's what I like about you—your punctuality. Right on the stroke of the time you are supposed to be here, you are here. That is what I like about you." In the course of proceedings the man gave him an order worth 10,000 pounds, without Brother Bates even asking for it, or without his even selling the man on his goods. He said, "That is what the Lord did because I did my Church work first. But these experiences alone are not what is giving me a testimony of the divinity of the gospel."

I could go on with many similar experiences. We hear them in our testimony meetings all the time. An instructor in a Sunday School class was talking about the Book of Mormon. All the members of the class had testified that they had a testimony of the divinity of the Book of Mormon. They were discussing the three witnesses, and the eight witnesses—discussing why there were these witnesses. Some said that the reason for them was to give others a testimony of the divinity of the Book of Mormon. Then the teacher asked the class, “How many here have a testimony of the divinity of the Book of Mormon because of the three witnesses?” There was not one who raised a hand. He said, “What is it, then, that gives you a testimony of the divinity of the Book of Mormon or the divinity of the gospel of Jesus Christ? It is something down inside, isn’t it? There’s something inside of us that testifies to us of the truth of the gospel.”

Many might explain away these miraculous experiences. They might say that the woman would have been healed anyway. They might say that Brother Bates got his time mixed up or some other way of explaining the distance he had traveled, which to him was impossible. But you ask the individual who had the experience—it doesn’t make any difference what the other people say, he knows down inside that there is something else there that no one can take from him. That is the knowledge, I think, that Brother Bruce McConkie was talking about this morning when he said that we have to have knowledge to obtain a testimony of the gospel. It is that knowledge that comes to us from down inside.

We are made up of a spirit and a physical body. That spirit body lived in the pre-existence, and that spirit that is down inside of us and gives us light is what prompts us to a knowledge of truth. When we are in tune with the Spirit of the Lord, that spirit within us gives us that knowledge that no one else can take from us. When we keep the commandments of the Lord, and one of the primary purposes of being on this earth is to learn obedience by our experience and to seek the gospel so that we can have as a reward through our free agency for having lived the law of the gospel, the many blessings which the gospel plan gives us, that spirit within us prompts us and gives us that knowledge.

By that method, the Lord has said: “. . . seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you.” (Matt. 7:7.) It does not come by just sitting by and waiting and expecting it to come to us; we have to reach for it. And after we have reached for it, after we have fulfilled the law by which we may receive these blessings, then, through faith, these signs follow. And these signs that follow testify to us again that this is God’s work; that he is directing his Church here upon the earth.

Many may ask, “How do we get these testimonies?” They come to us through experience, yes, by our own efforts. I would like to refer to the well-used passage in the Book of Mormon, the admonition of Moroni to obtain a testimony of the divinity of the gospel of Jesus Christ:

“And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost.

“And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things.” (Moroni 10:4-5.)

We have here the promise that truth and knowledge in all things shall be given unto us if we shall seek in faith, and if we shall put ourselves in tune with the Holy Spirit, that Spirit will speak to us and give us those experiences that will give us knowledge of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

I testify to you that I know this is the gospel of Jesus Christ; that I know that God lives and Jesus is the Christ; and that this gospel which has been restored to us through the Prophet Joseph Smith by revelation is the plan of life and salvation, and the way by which we may receive all the blessings of exaltation which have been promised down through the ages, and I testify to you to this end in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

BISHOP JOSEPH L. WIRTHLIN

Presiding Bishop of the Church

My brethren and sisters, it has been a great source of inspiration to have the privilege of attending this wonderful conference. As I listened yesterday to our prophet, I felt that we were receiving the same direction, the same inspiration, the same guidance, as did the members of the Church two thousand years ago when Peter and the apostles stood before them periodically and taught them the gospel. Yesterday we had that Spirit here. We have had it today. It is the Spirit of the Lord. Each and every one of us can feel it as we listen to what is said by our brethren.

It is a marvelous thing to belong to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and know that there stands at the head, a prophet who receives from on high the guidance and the direction that is necessary for the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father, not only those here, but those all over the world. Our President in the years gone by has traveled to many lands for the purpose of preaching to the people that they can understand the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and have the privilege of living it and enjoying all the blessings therein.

I often think that I happen to be a member of the Church, not because I accepted it, but because I was born in the Church, and I assume most of you who are present this afternoon have membership in the Church because you were born in it. On the other hand, we have quite a number of our brethren and sisters who are converts, those who had the privilege of receiving the gospel from the missionaries in various parts of the country. You and I who were born in the Church have received it, brethren and sisters, without any great demands on our part, except that we live the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and set the proper example to those not of our faith.

I often think of my two grandfathers—one was born in England and the other was born in Switzerland. The one in England at the age of twenty-one was very anxious to find the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. Yes, he belonged to another church, a great church, but he was not satisfied. He could not understand the matter of baptism. He could not understand the matter of authority. He could not find it.

One Saturday evening on retiring to his bed, he made it a matter of prayer. He asked the Lord if the Church of Jesus Christ was upon the earth could he be directed to it. That night he had a dream, and in the dream he saw not too far from where he lived a road, and at the end of it was a little chapel. When he arose Sunday morning, he was so impressed with the dream he immediately dressed and went down the road, and there was the little chapel. In it two men were preaching the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and who were they—two Mormon missionaries! My grandfather immediately joined the Church. There was no question about it in his mind.

I am positively sure that over the world where individuals have a desire to find the true Church, they can find it. They may find it in the way of a dream, or they may find it by the missionaries who may come to their homes and teach them the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

My grandfather finally made the long trip to America and came into this area with his family of ten children of which my mother was the youngest. It was a difficult thing to find the right kind of work. He worked in a coal mine, an experience he had never had. He labored there for some six months, then came to Salt Lake City to get his pay. He was paid for three months. He quit his job and finally settled on a little farm near Tooele, Utah, but there was no water and that created a problem. As I have read his history he had written day by day, there was difficulty on every hand, but not once did I ever find my grandfather finding fault or condemning the Church. When general conference was held comparable to this one, he used to hitch up his old team, and it was an old team, and drive into Salt Lake City, and here he remained for four days and attended all of the meetings. It is marvelous to read of the great inspiration he received hearing the Prophet Brigham Young at that time.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

When he attended conference, they were the best four days of the whole year, hearing the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ taught by the prophet. Brigham Young was a prophet to him, and is it not a wonderful thing to know, brethren and sisters, that from the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith until the present time, we have a prophet, seer, and revelator, so that through the direction of our Heavenly Father, we will be guided and directed wherein we will receive the blessings that we need.

President Clark told of conditions that might exist in the world because there is a great nation and a government which does not teach or permit its people to believe that Jesus Christ actually lives and is the Son of God. As President Clark said, some day that may create difficulties for us. Nevertheless, I hope and pray that each and every one of us will so live the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ that when that day of difficulty comes, we through prayer, faith, and divine direction from our Heavenly Father will be able to meet our problems and solve them.

We have a great responsibility of living the gospel because the world expects us to be a different people, which brings to mind the statement of an individual who had the privilege of visiting the Los Angeles Temple before it was dedicated. This individual said, "The temple is beautiful. It is a marvelous building, but the Mormons have something that is different." I do not know exactly what that individual had in mind, whether she thought the temple in and of itself was beautiful or something that was different, whether she thought we have the priesthood of the Lord Jesus Christ, or whether or not she was giving consideration to the fact that we are doing work for the dead. Nevertheless, an impression was made upon that individual. So, in all of our lives, wherever we go, we are going to make an impression on those with whom we come in contact. As a people, we are indeed a "different" people.

It is a wonderful thing to know that in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, brethren and sisters, the choice young men at the age of twelve may receive the Aaronic Priesthood—the Aaronic Priesthood, a divine gift which was bestowed upon the Prophet

Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery by John the Baptist himself. I humbly pray that in your homes where your sons hold the office of deacon, teacher, or priest, there is going to be positive assurance that these young men realize that they have the most divine gift of God to his sons.

If we have any difficulty at all in connection with the Aaronic Priesthood, where some of them may become inactive and not as interested as they should be, I think it comes about many times because fathers and mothers are not giving consideration to the fact that their sons hold the Aaronic Priesthood, the priesthood that was held by John the Baptist.

It is a wonderful thing to sit down with your son—he may be a deacon, a teacher, or a priest—and say to him, "You hold the Aaronic Priesthood. John the Baptist held the Aaronic Priesthood. He was a priest. He baptized Jesus Christ."

Is it not wonderful to know that your son at the age of sixteen may have the same privilege of baptizing as did John the Baptist about two thousand years ago. It is so impressive, brothers and sisters, that these young men will come to the conclusion that holding the Aaronic Priesthood is the most important gift that God can bestow upon them at their particular age. So teach them, inspire them, and direct them in connection with their assignments in the Aaronic Priesthood work, that when the day comes for them to receive the Melchizedek Priesthood, they are going to feel in their own souls, "Now I hold the priesthood of the Lord Jesus Christ," for the Christ himself is the Great High Priest, and everyone of these young men, if worthy, sooner or later is going to have the privilege of holding the office of an elder or a seventy or a high priest.

It is most inspiring and encouraging to me as I have the privilege of coming in contact with these young men who have a desire to go out and preach the gospel, as they may have been called by the President of the Church in connection with the bishop of the ward. In interviewing them, I always ask them the question, "Can you bear testimony that Joseph Smith actually saw the Father and the Son? That is the statement you will have to make because we stand on that wonderful event as a Church, that Joseph Smith at the age of fourteen actually saw the Father and the Son."

It is most thrilling and inspiring to know that these young men at the age of twenty can say, "Yes, I can bear testimony that Joseph Smith actually saw the Father and the Son." They should be able to do that, brothers and sisters, because they have held the Aaronic Priesthood from the age of twelve until the age of twenty when they receive the Melchizedek Priesthood. They should have been taught and should have the knowledge that they can bear these wonderful testimonies which are so important.

In the final analysis, this Church is the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. That is the testimony, brothers and sisters, that we ought to bear to our sons, our daughters, and our grandchildren. This is the Church which is preparing the way for the second coming of Christ. That is our responsibility. It is one of the most important responsibilities that any group of people can have.

Now with reference to these other nations that do not have the privilege of hearing or understanding the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, it is my feeling that some day they will have that opportunity. They are going to have that privilege. Was it not said to whom the gospel was to be preached—to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. Whether or not we will be able to send missionaries into Russia to preach the gospel, I do not know, but I do remember President Clark said something about two years ago, and I have never forgotten it. He said that perhaps we will be able to preach the gospel to the people of Russia out of Salt Lake City over television or radio or something else. That day will come when the Russian people will hear and understand the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, not only the people of Russia, but also the millions in China and the millions in India. They are all the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father, and I am satisfied that Jesus Christ is just as anxious that they hear the gospel and enjoy all the same privileges that we have. In some way and at some future time, these great events are going to take place.

We have a great responsibility, and I think of the words of Peter when he said, speaking to the people:

"But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." (1 Peter 2:9.)

If we live the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, we are "a chosen generation." We are a chosen generation because through the wonderful revelations that were given to the Prophet Joseph, we have the commandments, we have the direction, we have the guidance that is necessary to so live the gospel that we indeed are going to be a chosen generation.

And "a royal priesthood"—the Aaronic and the Melchizedek—the Aaronic Priesthood coming, as I have already indicated, when John the Baptist appeared and bestowed it upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery. Then, Peter, James, and John, the apostles of old and the Presidency of the Church some eighteen hundred years before, appeared and bestowed upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery the Melchizedek Priesthood. Indeed, might we say, it is a royal priesthood.

"An holy nation," of course, an holy nation, as I understand it, is the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is an holy nation, and all of those who have membership in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ are in that holy nation as long as they live the gospel.

"A peculiar people"—a peculiar people because we accept without question Jesus Christ as the Son of God! A peculiar people because we declare to the world that God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ appeared to that fourteen-year-old young man and gave him the direction and inspiration whereby the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints could again be established upon the earth for the benefit, the direction, and the inspiration of all the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father, and "... that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light." (Idem.)

My testimony to you is this: if my grandfather in Switzerland, if my grandfather in England had not had the privilege of hearing and understanding the gospel, we as a family, without a doubt, would still be in the darkness of the world, but because they accepted the gospel, it is possible now for all of us to go into the marvelous light of the Church, the marvelous light of Jesus Christ himself.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

We have a great responsibility of so living the gospel that it will be a great source of inspiration and divine guidance to all of those with whom we come in contact.

In the final analysis, as we live the gospel, it is a wonderful thing to think of the words of Jesus Christ, "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8:32.) That is the promise and the blessing that each and every one of us may live and understand—that we shall know the truth and the truth shall make us free.

May the Lord continue to inspire us in all of our endeavors, I humbly ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Bishop Joseph L. Wirthlin, Presiding Bishop of the Church, has just addressed us. We shall now hear from Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve.

ELDER ELRAY L. CHRISTIANSEN

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I humbly pray, my brothers and sisters, that what I say may give encouragement and fortitude to someone. We have had some marvelous addresses given, some wonderful music, all of which should inspire us to go forth and live better lives.

I believe that each of us needs a spiritual checkup just about as often as we need a physical checkup; that each of us, the young, and the rest of us, needs to make an appraisal of himself as a member of the Church of Jesus Christ, and as the head of a family, or as a member of a family, from time to time to determine the degree of our fidelity and our allegiance and adherence to the accepted rules and doctrines of the Church.

One of the ancient prophets of whom Elder Kimball spoke, had this day in mind—when he said:

"Yea, and there shall be many which shall say: Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die; . . .

"And there shall also be many which shall say: Eat, drink, and be merry; nevertheless, fear God—he will justify in committing a little sin; yea, lie a little, take the advantage of one because of his words, dig a pit for thy neighbor; there is no harm in this; and do all these things, for tomorrow we die; and if it so be that we are guilty, God will beat us with a few stripes, and at last we shall be saved in the kingdom of God." (2 Nephi 28:7-8.)

Is this prediction of Nephi coming to pass in our day? Are there those of us who would justify ourselves in committing a little sin? Are there those of us who would yield to the enticement and the pressure of acquaintances and associates to "eat, drink, and be merry," on certain occasions? Would we, for instance, when in the company of certain others, forsake principles, propriety, and decency in order to conform with and be accepted by the group? So-called social drinking, for example? Would we forsake the high principles of conduct which we as a people espouse and yield to the unapproved practices when we know that to do so weakens one's character, discredits his family name, and will bring sorrow and unhappiness in place of joy and peace?

"We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men. . . . If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report or praiseworthy, we seek after these things." (Thirteenth Article of Faith.)

This being the case—this being our standard, could it be then that any of us would lie a little, or take advantage of one because of his words, perhaps by misquoting or exaggerating what he said? Are there any of us who would figuratively dig a pit for his neighbor, hoping that he will fall into it? Perhaps by taking unfair advantage of him, by shrewd maneuvering, thinking that as long as one gets away with it that he is a trustworthy and honest man.

"Make of yourself an honest man," said Carlyle, "and then you may be sure that there is one rascal less in the world."

Are there any of us who would justify ourselves in any of these things, these wrongdoings? If there be, let us repent as of today. Farther on, this same great prophet, Nephi, points out that those who feel justified in sinning a little, being enticed by the vain practices of the world, are placing themselves in a position where, he says, "the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them carefully down to hell." (2 Nephi 28:21.) How well put that is, and how true!

The evils and the vanities of the world, and the corruption thereof are thrust close to our lives. Enticings and pressures to depart from the right are found on every hand. Some of these wrongdoings are almost glorified.

Realizing this, we must, as Latter-day Saints, young and old, be firm for that which we know to be right, and in the right be steadfast and immovable. Each of us must set his own course. Each household must determine whether its members will follow the worldly pattern of loose, reckless living, or be obedient to the commandments of the Lord.

When the tribes of ancient Israel inclined their hearts toward the worship of heathen gods, forsaking God-given principles, you remember that Joshua, their leader, fearing for his people, "... gathered all the tribes of Israel to Shechem, and called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they presented themselves before God." (Joshua 24:1.) Then it was that he pointed out to them what was happening among them, and admonished them to put away their strange gods and their evil ways, and he called upon them to repent, exhorting them to serve the Lord God of Israel with sincerity. Then in the majesty of his calling as a prophet, he said to them, "... choose you this day whom ye will serve; ... but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." (Ibid., 15.)

Just as Israel in that day had to make that decision, so must that decision be made by us today. I must make that decision. You must make that decision. For example, in this day of widespread desecration of the Sabbath, when it is considered merely a part of a week-end, and when it is used by many for amusement and pleasure-hunting, shopping, etc., do I, do you, serve the Lord by being where we ought to be, doing what we ought to do, on his holy day?

Again, when friends or acquaintances urge the use of tobacco or intoxicating liquor, do we yield just to be sociable? If I and my house are determined to serve the Lord in the law of health, there will be no yielding to such pressures.

When marriage is contemplated, will the plan be a temporary legal arrangement where eternal association is forfeited, or will it be administered according to the ordinances of God; according to his sweet and wonderful way of making possible a grand family reunion in the resurrection? That is the question we must determine when it comes to that occasion, or before it comes to that, for we must plan ahead of time for that great episode in our lives.

One other matter—the destroying sin of unchastity and moral laxity has been one of the dominant factors in the downfall of many proud people and many great empires. Among the people today, this same destroyer of happiness presents a dismal picture for the safety and peace of this and future generations.

A few years ago the First Presidency issued a warning to the Latter-day Saints and to the world generally against this sin. Among other positive statements they made, they said this: "The doctrine of this Church is that sexual sin, the illicit sexual relationship of men and women stands in its enormity next to murder. The Lord has drawn no essential distinction between fornication, adultery, and harlotry or prostitution. Each has fallen under his solemn and awful condemnation. You youth of Zion," they pleaded, "you cannot associate in illicit sex relationship, which is fornication, and escape the judgments and punishments of the Lord which he has declared against this sin. The day of reckoning will come just as certainly as night follows day."

Saturday, October 10

A similar warning was given to those husbands and wives who break the moral laws. Then, by the right they have as leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ, spokesman for the Lord himself, they gave this solemn warning, along with a plea for strict morality: "By virtue of the authority vested in us as the First Presidency of the Church, we warn the people of the degradation, the wickedness, the punishments that attend upon unchastity. We urge you to remember the blessings which flow from the living of a clean life. We call upon you to keep, day in and day out, the way of strict chastity, through which only God's blessings can be achieved and received, and his Spirit abide with you. How glorious it is to him who lives the chaste life. He walks unafraid in the glare of the noonday sun, for he is without moral infirmity."

Now, will we listen to those who would minimize the seriousness of this transgression and who would have us believe that the Lord has changed his mind in regard to it? Will we listen to those who say that chastity is outmoded and old-fashioned? Each of us must stand for and encourage such principles as honesty, trustworthiness, virtue. Let us turn a deaf ear to the advocates of wrongdoing, and be prepared with Joshua to say, as he did to his people: "... choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." (Joshua 24:15.)

May we so do, I pray humbly, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder ElRay L. Christiansen, Assistant to the Twelve, has just concluded speaking. The University of Utah Choral Society, with the Bonneville Strings and the Congregation, will now sing, "We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet," conducted by Professor David A. Shand.

The University of Utah Combined Chorus, accompanied by the Bonneville Strings, and the Congregation sang the hymn, "We Thank Thee, O God, For a Prophet."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve will be our next speaker. He will be followed by Elder Henry D. Taylor.

ELDER DELBERT L. STAPLEY

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brothers and sisters, I am happy indeed to extend the hand of fellowship to Elder Howard W. Hunter, called this day as a member of the Council of the Twelve. I look forward with joyous anticipation to association with him in that council. I assure him of my support and my love and my help.

Today I feel to share with you my witness and humble testimony that this Church is the true Church of Christ, established upon the earth in this dispensation of God's providence for the last time. It was divinely set up by our Lord, and possesses every truth, principle, and ordinance for the salvation and exaltation of those who receive and obey its plan of life.

I solemnly testify that every President of this Church has been called of God, and sustained by him and by the faithful Church members who, with uplifted hands before God, angels, and fellow disciples, agreed to accept and sustain their leader as prophet, seer, and revelator. We so sustain our beloved President David O. McKay today. According to the spirit of truth within me, I accept him in this high position of prophet, seer, and revelator with all my heart, and uphold him without question and without reservation. I say to you, my brothers and sisters, that if everyone would keep his eyes on the President of this Church and follow his example, he would never go wrong. I have that faith and confidence, and so testify to you with full knowledge that ultimately I must answer to God for my teachings and personal acts.

The members of the Church must, by implicit obedience to gospel principles and ordinances, stand firm and true to the faith and not be tossed about by every wind of doctrine from deceiving teachers who wrongfully and willfully suggest that the Church in this day has gone astray, which claim I humbly testify to you is untrue. Dissenters from the Church in all ages of the world, influenced by evil design, have zealously taught deceptive and false doctrines and led many unsuspecting and unthinking souls into the broad way of apostasy from the truth. The true servants of the Lord have consistently and humbly warned against self-appointed leaders, and have always admonished the Saints to be faithful and true in keeping the commandments of God, and thus develop faith and strength against the powers of evil which are constantly leveled at them.

In the early history of the Church, because the elders did not understand the manifestations of different spirits abroad which were disturbing the members, the Lord, in answer to prayerful inquiry, warned:

"Behold, verily I say unto you, that there are many spirits which are false spirits, which have gone forth in the earth, deceiving the world." (D&C 50:2.)

What was true then is true now, and ever will be until Satan and his evil hosts are forever bound and shorn of their power to deceive and destroy. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught, "... Nothing is a greater injury to the children of men than to be under the influence of a false spirit when they think they have the Spirit of God." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, page 205.) How true this statement is, and how important to know correct Church doctrine and procedures to prevent stumbling along life's way. It is a great blessing and gift to be able to discern and choose rightly between truth and error.

To protect the faith of Church members the Lord has revealed:

"But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils." (D&C 46:7.)

In all the teachings and prophecies of the prophets concerning the establishment of God's kingdom in the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, there is no mention nor indication that the Church, when once established, would fail or be given to another people. That was not true of the Church in the Meridian of Time. The prophets before the time of Christ, and the apostles after, warned and predicted a falling away from the truth and the true Church.

As members of the Church, we must always remember that this is the Dispensation of the Fulness of Times, or, the last of all gospel dispensations, when all things are to be gathered together in Christ before his coming to earth again. The destiny of this Church is too great and the time too short for so important a work to be bounced from one group of people to another. The Lord would not have it so and has decreed the permanency of his latter-day kingdom.

When John the Revelator, in a vision of important latter-day events, witnessed an angel flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people; he quoted the angel as saying: "... Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." (Rev. 14:7.) Our era of time is the hour of God's judgment; therefore, this prophecy could not be fulfilled if interruptions were to occur in the progress and work of the restored kingdom.

The Prophet Daniel, interpreting King Nebuchadnezzar's dream, informed him that its fulfillment would be in the latter days. Then, calling attention to the kingdoms that should follow that of the king until many kingdoms resulted, Daniel declared:

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.

"... God," said Daniel, concluding his interpretation of the king's dream, "hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." (Daniel 2:44-45.)

Here is prophetic evidence of the continuity of God's latter-day kingdom when established upon the earth. Daniel emphasized that point dramatically when he said, "The dream is certain and the interpretation thereof sure." The kingdom, prophesied Daniel, is not to be destroyed; it is not to be left to other people; and it shall stand forever. How convincing and certain this declaration is!

The Lord, in a revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith shortly after the organization of the Church, made this pronouncement: "For behold, the field is white already to harvest; and it is the eleventh hour, and the last time that I shall call laborers into my vineyard." (D&C 33:3.)

Again, the Lord revealed to the Prophet: "The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth." (Ibid., 65:2.)

This latter declaration accords with and confirms Daniel's interpretation of King Nebuchadnezzar's dream, for the Prophet Daniel spoke of the stone which was cut without hands which smote the image and became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

The Prophet Joseph Smith gave this wise counsel, which is a true principle in Church government and is the order of the Holy Priesthood: "I will inform you that it is contrary to the economy of God for any member of the Church, or any one, to receive instruction for those in authority, higher than themselves; therefore you will see the impropriety of giving heed to them." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, page 21.)

Again he taught: "... revelations of the mind and will of God to the Church, are to come through the Presidency. This is the order of heaven, and the power and privilege of this Priesthood." (Ibid., page 111.)

And then a powerful declaration of an eternal principle which the Prophet Joseph Smith said is eternal, undeviating, and firm as the pillars of heaven: "I will give you one of the Keys of the mysteries of the Kingdom. It is an eternal principle, that has existed with God from all eternity: That man who rises up to condemn others, finding fault with the Church, saying that they are out of the way, while he himself is righteous, then know assuredly, that that man is in the high road to apostasy; and if he does not repent, will apostatize, as God lives." (Ibid., page 156.)

How clear and forthright these statements are, and so powerfully and convincingly stated that there can be no doubt of their truth.

The Lord gave this instruction and warning to the elders of his Church, and to all the inhabitants of Zion against those individuals making false claims and purporting to receive revelations: "And this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments;

"And this I give unto you that you may not be deceived, that you may know that they are not of me.

"For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received and shall receive through him whom I have appointed." (D&C 43:5-7.)

Baptism at the hands of an authorized servant of God permits a person to come in at the gate; and the way prescribed by the Lord, as outlined in the preceding quotation, by which those ordained can be known and accepted by the members of his Church is clearly set forth in the following revelation: "Again I say unto you," said the Lord, "that it shall not be given to anyone to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church." (Ibid., 42:11.)

As in past ages, men will continue to arise to plague the work of God, for th's is the intent of Satan and ever has been since the beginning of man on the earth.

There are infallible guiding principles found in the revelations and in the historical records of the Lord's dealings with his people for their guidance and protection. Here is a very important one given in this last dispensation to the Prophet Joseph Smith. The Lord gave it as a guiding admonition to his people. Said he:

"And all things shall be done by common consent in the church, by much prayer and faith, for all things you shall receive by faith." (Ibid., 26:2.)

If the members of the Church will follow this counsel and act together in prayer and true faith, the Holy Ghost will not permit them to yield to the influence of error and false teachings of those who seek to overthrow the work of God. The great Nephite prophet, Mosiah, warning his people against kingcraft, counseled them concerning the manner in which judges to govern them should be selected, and wisely advised:

"Now it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right; therefore they shall ye observe and make it your law—to do your business by the voice of the people." (Mosiah 29:26.)

All wavering and disaffected individuals should remember the safeguards to faith and testimony given by the Lord through revelation, and, recognizing and working through constituted channels of priesthood authority, submit their views or claims and be willing to abide by the voice of the people, who, conforming to the above-quoted revelation, are to decide the matter after exercising much faith and prayer. If they would do this before permitting themselves to follow a deviating or contrary course, and manifest the faith to abide by the voice of the Saints, they would not go astray nor depart from the right way, and their souls and those of their posterity would, through obedience to the commandments, be saved in the kingdom of God.

There are many other scriptural references and revelations, also statements by Church leaders, bearing upon this subject which could be quoted, but I close with two additional quotations from the revelations of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph Smith. The first concerns the keys of priesthood power committed to the First Presidency and the Twelve of the Church:

"For unto you, the Twelve, and those, the First Presidency, who are appointed with you to be your counselors and your leaders, is the power of this priesthood given, for the last days and for the last time, in the which is the dispensation of the fulness of times.

"For verily I say unto you, the keys of the dispensation, which ye have received, have come down from the fathers, and last of all, being sent down from heaven unto you." (D&C 112:30, 32.)

And now the second and concluding admonition from the Lord, which also is a perfect safeguard to the membership of this Church:

"Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called, behold I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word;

"And by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church and have all things right before me.

"He that receiveth my law and doeth it, the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you." (Ibid., 41:2-3, 5.)

Wherefore, my brothers and sisters, when assembled together, as today, it is to instruct and edify each other and thus learn how to act and how to direct the affairs of God's latter-day kingdom. May I encourage all of you to listen to and accept the teachings and counsel of your brethren given in this general conference of the Church. How important it is for the Saints of the kingdom to be guided aright, knowing that false spirits are abroad in the land to deceive, yes, even the very elect of God if they are not careful in keeping the commandments and walking in faithful obedience to God's laws.

God bless you, my brothers and sisters, that you may walk in obedience to God's laws. This I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

He to whom you have just listened is Elder Delbert L. Stapley of the Council of the Twelve. (To Brother Taylor President McKay said:) I believe we will hold you off until morning. Brother Stapley's sermon is a good one with which to close.

The LDS Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Combined Choruses will sing, "Hallelujah Chorus," conducted by Elder David A. Shand. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Fred Wells Stone, formerly president of the Tongan Mission, after which this Conference will be adjourned until 7 o'clock this evening, when the General Priesthood Meeting of the Church will be held in this Tabernacle. Only those holding the Priesthood are invited to be present. Persons not holding the Priesthood will kindly refrain from attempting to enter the building. This Priesthood session will not be broadcast. However, in addition to overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, the proceedings of the Priesthood Meeting will be relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood assembled in 204 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada.

The general sessions tomorrow will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. The Tabernacle Choir Broadcast will be from 8:30 to 9:00 a. m. Those desiring to attend this Broadcast should be in their seats at 8:15 a.m. It is requested that the audience remain quiet during the broadcast.

Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve will be the speaker over Columbia Broadcasting System's Church of the Air Program over KSL tomorrow at 7:30 a.m.

The singing, as already announced, for this session this morning has been furnished by the combined choruses of the LDS Institute of Religion and the University of Utah, with the Bonneville Strings, under the direction of Dr. David A. Shand. Alexander Schreiner is at the organ. I know you have been inspired by the singing of these young men and young women, and the instrumentation of the Bonneville Strings. I do not know how to thank them. It has taken a good many hours of practice, probably interfered somewhat with your schooling, somewhat with examinations, but it is worth it. We want you to know we appreciate your presence, Brother Shand and these young people here today. God bless you. May you find as much joy in future service in the Church and to your fellowmen as you found in the service you have rendered here, and do as much good as you have done today.

These young folks will now sing, "Hallelujah Chorus," and the closing prayer will be offered by Elder Fred Wells Stone, formerly president of the Tongan Mission.

The Combined Choruses and the Bonneville Strings rendered the selection, "Hallelujah Chorus."

Fred W. Stone, formerly president of the Tongan Mission, pronounced the benediction.

Conference adjourned until 7:00 p.m.

GENERAL PRIESTHOOD MEETING

The General Priesthood meeting of the Church was held in the great Tabernacle Saturday evening, October 10, 1959 at 7:00 p.m.

President David O. McKay presided at this meeting and conducted the exercises.

The choral music was furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, Richard P. Condie, Conductor of the Tabernacle Choir, directing the singing. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

President David O. McKay:

This is the fifth session of the Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

You will be interested to know that these services are being relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood gathered in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and in 204 other Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada. That is in 51 more buildings than at last April Conference. So we are proud tonight I suppose to have the largest gathering of the Priesthood ever assembled in the history of the Church.

The singing during this session will be furnished by the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir, with Elder Richard P. Condie as director and Elder Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

We shall begin these services by the Men's Chorus singing, "Come All Ye Sons of Zion," with Elder Condie conducting. After the singing, Elder Lawrence T. Lambert, president of the South Blackfoot Stake, will offer the opening prayer. "Come All Ye Sons of Zion," by the Men's Chorus will now be sung.

---

The Men's Chorus sang the hymn, "Come All Ye Sons of Zion."

Elder Lawrence T. Lambert, president of the South Blackfoot Stake, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

We express appreciation for the presence of these members of the Tabernacle Choir,—here on time, in dignified dress, showing the respect they have for the Priesthood, not only that, but a willingness to participate and render service in this great gathering.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "Thou Art Repose," under the direction of Elder Richard P. Condie.

The Men's Chorus sang a selection, "Thou Art Repose."

President David O. McKay:

Thank you. It is inspiring.

Among the thousands assembled tonight are some service men, 21 of them, who have flown in from Fort Sill, Meade, and Stillwater, Oklahoma. We appreciate their presence and commend their spirit and interest in the Church and all service men whom they represent, and the great missionary work which they are doing. We will have more to say during this Conference. We welcome you and welcome all who are listening and joining in this great Conference.

You who are listening in will be pleased to know that the Tabernacle is filled beyond capacity, the doorways are filled with members of the Priesthood who are standing to participate in the services.

Tonight the first thing we wish to represent and to emphasize is the responsibility and opportunity of the ward teacher, and we have invited two bishops to speak to that topic. Our first speaker will be Bishop Stanley Smith Cheever of Federal Heights Ward, Emigration Stake.

BISHOP STANLEY SMITH CHEEVER

Federal Heights Ward, Emigration Stake

My dear brethren of the priesthood, I stand before you tonight in humility and with thanksgiving in my heart for the opportunity to accept an assignment and participate in this meeting tonight.

Since receiving the call from dear President McKay last Monday, who is our Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, I assure you I have had an uneasy week with many butterflies. I feel that the opening prayer was offered in my behalf and I ask that each of you join with me with your faith and prayers that I may deliver a message that may be beneficial to all of us.

This is the most inspirational sight I have ever experienced—I wish you could each share it with me, standing before the body of the Priesthood of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the greatest brotherhood in all the world, each of us here holding the Priesthood of God, with power and authority to watch over the Church.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

In thinking of my assignment and of ward teaching, I am reminded of the first assignment that I received as a ward teacher. I was born and raised in Provo, the Provo Fifth Ward, and my bishop was Albert Manwaring. In the year 1910 I was a teacher in the Aaronic Priesthood. I was given an assignment with my senior companion Jesse Knight. I am sure many of you present and many of you within the sound of my voice, knew Uncle Jesse, as he was affectionately called. He was a kindly man, generous, thoughtful, and loved by all who knew him. As you know, he was a man of wealth and charitable to a fault.

Our home was only a block away and easy to make contact for our monthly teaching assignment. It was my pleasure always, to go to his home, to knock on his door, and be invited in. He was never in a hurry. He always would question me as to what I was doing, what my plans were for the future, and he would draw me out and try to find and lead me as to my ambitions, looking forward to the years ahead.

After we visited a little while, we would go out on our special assignment and visit our district. In those days we did not have a regular assigned message to give to the ward. We would enter the homes and Brother Knight would always ask the fathers present to offer prayer before we started our visit and started our discussions. After each one of those evenings I went home with a full heart, grateful for the opportunity of the association and grateful to become acquainted with the great ward teaching program of the Church.

Brothers, I have never forgotten this, and it brings to my mind very keenly the responsibility we have as senior members or senior companions in our ward teaching teams to the boys of the Aaronic Priesthood. It is our opportunity and our challenge that we give them an opportunity to go out with us, to feel of our spirit, to feel of their spirit, and to ask for participation in the homes. I am sure each of you is doing just this in your ward teaching assignments.

As ward teachers, it is our responsibility to watch over the Church, and I feel we should take an inventory of ourselves, to see how well we are assuming this great responsibility. I have prepared several questions. Let us answer them in our own hearts:

Are we humble and worthy to assume the responsibility of ward teaching?

Do we daily pray to our Heavenly Father for divine guidance in our duties and responsibilities?

Do we truly watch over the membership of the ward in our district?

Do we study the message with our junior companion and make thorough preparation and invite the family to join us in the discussion during the presentation of the message?

Do we enter the homes with a friendly smile and a radiant happiness, being sure to greet each member of the family present, not forgetting the younger members, and strive to call the young ones by their first names?

Do we greet them at Church meetings and social gatherings, on the street and places of business, and encourage and invite them to participate in all ward functions, both social and spiritual?

Do we especially invite them to attend the sacrament meeting?

Do we inquire about the health and needs of the family, both spiritual and temporal and report to the bishop where help is needed?

Do we offer our love and assistance in time of stress and sorrow, during sickness and death, and all adversity?

Are we charitable and kindly, offering only words of encouragement and praise?

Do we remember the oft-spoken words of Emerson: "What you are thunders so loudly in my ears I cannot hear what you say."

If we strive to live up to these standards, our teaching will be successful and will bring to us many blessings.

Here are a few scriptural references giving us instructions in our duties and responsibilities as ward teachers. I read from Section 20 of the Doctrine and Covenants, verses 53 through 55:

"The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them;

"And see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking;

"And see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty."

I think it is a very important instruction, and I am going to read it for a second time, with your permission:

"The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them;

"And see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking;

"And see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty."

This contains complete admonition and instruction covering all of the phases and responsibilities that we have as ward teachers, and I recommend to each of you, that you read fully the entire Section, the twentieth Section of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Christ, during his mission on earth, reminded us of the necessity and responsibility to those who need to be called to repentance and help them to find the way back into the fold. In Luke, Chapter 15, verse 7, he says: "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance."

This shows us the need of brotherly love and the need of always extending a helping hand.

When Jesus showed himself to his disciples at the Sea of Tiberias, following his resurrection—as you know, the disciples had been fishing all night and had been unable to catch any fish—they had caught nothing, but when the morning came, Jesus, who stood on the shore told them to cast in the net on the right side of the ship. They cast therefore, and drew the net to land full of fishes. Then Jesus commanded them to bring the fishes they had caught and dine with him. When they had dined, Jesus said to Simon Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs.

"He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep."

Even the second time the Savior said to Simon Peter, "Feed my sheep." This admonition of the Savior to Peter might well be applied to the ward teachers whose calling it is to go forth among the members of the Church in their homes and minister to their spiritual and temporal needs. Ward teaching typifies the concern of the Church for the well-being of our Father's children. It is a means whereby we may in very deed, feed his sheep, not alone those who seek us, but those whom we must seek.

If there is a kind word that should be spoken, may they speak it. If there is a soul that needs encouragement, may they give it. If there is a temporal need that cannot be met alone, may it be revealed to them. If there is a need for a testimony to be borne, may the ward teachers bear it.

Who should be ward teachers? All worthy bearers of the Priesthood should consider it an honor and a privilege to participate in this function of the Priesthood. There are very few exceptions and bishops should not hesitate to appoint bearers of the Priesthood to do ward teaching regardless of the fact that they are already engaged in stake and ward auxiliary organizations and Priesthood quorums. Thus we should all accept the call and receive the blessings that are in store for us.

I would like to emphasize again the responsibility of the senior members to their junior companions. We know that it is difficult to arrange the proper time and day, but with a little planning and a little patience, this can be arranged, and the responsibility actually lies with the senior companion.

Christ told us that we should love the Lord our God with all our heart, might, mind, and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves. How better and where better could we exemplify and carry out this teaching than by fully and completely accepting our responsibility as ward teachers.

Ward teaching is a basic principle of our Church. Its purpose is to contact every family in the Church every month of the year, thereby watching over the Church in word and deed and reporting to those in authority, where need be, changes, conditions, and need and want.

We are here to work out our own salvation and exaltation. Having kept our first estate we are now striving to keep our second estate and I can think of no better way to do that than to assume the responsibility to live a life worthy of a ward teacher and to carry out the duties and responsibilities of a ward teacher.

In closing, I want to leave with you my testimony that God lives, that he hears and answers prayers, as he has answered mine many times, that in the Sacred Grove, when Joseph Smith the Prophet made his appeal, he was appeared to by God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, and as a result of this appearance the latter-day Gospel was restored in all its fullness and we are privileged tonight to have this meeting presided over by our Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, President David O. McKay.

May God's choicest blessings be with each of us, may we assume our responsibilities fully, and may we take from this meeting renewed determination more nearly to live according to the commandments in word and deed, is my humble prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

On the same theme we shall now hear from Bishop Ralph J. Hill of the Val Verda Ward, South Davis Stake.

BISHOP RALPH J. HILL

Val Verda Ward, South Davis Stake

My dear brethren, I have studied and fasted and prayed, and now I must draw strength from you and from my Father in Heaven, from my own testimony of the truthfulness of this gospel, and from my knowledge that this call came from a Prophet of God. I love President McKay with all my heart, and sustain him with all my strength. I can feel the warmth and kindness in his great soul, supporting me as I approach this task.

I am encouraged, too, by the assurance that in this Tabernacle and in assemblies throughout the land are gathered my beloved brethren, with whom I share the fellowship of the Priesthood. In some of these assemblies, are men with whom I have served in the stakes of Zion. To these, my friends, I especially plead that I may have your faith and prayers with me this evening.

Last week I was entertaining a prominent man from the East who was visiting our city for the first time. We heard the organ recital, drove up to the monument, down to Welfare Square, back to this block, and after an hour he felt confident enough to express an opinion. He said, "Well, the genius of this whole thing is this volunteer priesthood." I was not sure as to the use of his term, volunteer, although he meant to distinguish us from the professional priesthood of his church, and that was all right.

I do feel that we can agree with his appraisal—that upon the backs of the brethren who hold the Priesthood of this Church is the responsibility for accomplishing our Father's purposes in this dispensation.

From the 20th Section of the Doctrine and Covenants which we have already heard read twice this evening, I am going to read again a couple of scriptures. This was given to the Church through the Prophet Joseph Smith even before the organization of the Church. We are told that the obligation of the Priesthood is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, to visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties, to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the Church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking.

To enable us, the brethren of the Priesthood, to accomplish this in an organized, orderly fashion, we have been given the ward teaching program. This was instituted early in the history of the Church, probably during the first decade. Elder George Q. Cannon tells us that the ward teachers settled a controversy between two of the sisters prior to 1839. William Cahoon describes his assignment as a ward teacher at the home of the Prophet in Nauvoo. In fact, it is difficult to comprehend the Church functioning in any dispensation without the ward teaching program.

In Chapter 23 in Mosiah in the Book of Mormon we learn that teachers were expected to be men of God. I quote: "And also trust no one to be your teacher nor your minister, except he be a man of God, walking in his ways and keeping his commandments. . . .

"Therefore they did watch over their people, and did nourish them with things pertaining to righteousness." (Mosiah 23:14, 18.)

This sounds like a pretty good description of a ward teacher. In the ward teaching handbook we learn that the responsibility of the ward teacher is not imposed by any special call. The right of authority to officiate as such rests on every bearer of the Priesthood by virtue of his ordination. Of course, it couldn't be any other way. The revelations describing the duties of the priesthood is directed to all of us, and again in Section 38 of the Doctrine and Covenants we read, "I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded.

"And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness." (D. & C. 38:40-41.)

It is interesting to read President Joseph F. Smith's statement from this pulpit nearly 50 years ago. "I am going on 76, and I believe I am older than several of these good men who think they have graduated from the duties of the Lesser Priesthood, and I want to tell them that we are not too old to act as teachers—not one of us," said President Smith. There will never come a time to those who hold the Priesthood in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints when men can say of themselves that they have done enough. We have our faithful examples throughout the Church. The two brethren in their nineties who compiled a record of 150 years of ward teaching between them. This brother in Ogden with 56 years of ward teaching, and a perfect record for all that time, and then he became ill and had to undergo surgery, and during the month of his convalescence he tried to get out and found that he was too weak, so his people in his district, hearing about his condition, came to his home one by one where the teaching was completed.

Of course, the ward teacher will visit every home in his district monthly. He will attend his report meeting and make an accurate report to his district supervisor, but this is only the beginning. This is the letter of the law. The conscientious ward teacher will use the visit as a springboard into the lives of people. The ward teacher shares with the bishop the responsibility for the temporal and spiritual welfare of the ward members. The ward teacher's responsibility only begins with this brief monthly visit which we report for the sake of the statistics. The responsibility of the Priesthood of the ward extends to every family, active or inactive, and this is one time when we must take the program to the members. This includes over 100,000 families, where the father is either a Senior member or unordained. With only a third of our members in Sacrament Meeting, another third who probably never get to Sacrament Meeting, we can see the responsibility we have to expose this large body of Latter-day Saints to the gospel at least once a month.

The ward teacher accepts each inactive family as a personal challenge. If some member of one of his families is working in his yard on Sunday, violating the Word of Wisdom, gambling, or using profane language, he realizes that it is "the teacher's duty to watch over the Church always, be with and strengthen them and see that there is no iniquity in the Church." We send missionaries around the world to find investigators and convert them. The ward teacher's task is to keep them converted and reconvert them when they fall away.

President McKay has frequently referred to ward teachers as stewards, with their stewardship extending over every family that lives in the ward. One of the opportunities of the ward teacher is found in locating and visiting new families that move into the ward. If a warm, friendly contact can be made in time, this may be all that is necessary to bring a careless, indifferent family back into full Church activity, and if we neglect to make an immediate contact with our new neighbors, the opposite may very well be true.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

I lived in a ward once where the teachers failed for over three months to visit an inactive family who had moved across the street from the meeting house. The bishop received a call from the hospital and arrived just in time to spend a few moments with an elderly lady before she passed away. Then the tragic story unfolded. A few days after a young couple had purchased their new home, her mother came to visit with them and took seriously ill. Of course the daughter should have notified the bishop, which she did not.

Here was a woman who had been active all her life, married in the temple, a widow with a large family, most of them living on the Coast, spending the last 12, lonely unhappy weeks of her life across the street from our meeting house, and we ward teachers failed to find her. We failed in our stewardship because we were too busy to find out who lived in that new house on the corner.

Incidentally, our ward led the stake on the ward teaching report that month, but this was small comfort to a bishopric and a ward teaching committee who were tormented by the memory of this little mother in her last illness, unable to even be administered to by the Priesthood. I guess we have all heard the story of the Lamanite bishop in Southern Utah who complained that there is too much 100 percent and not enough ward teaching.

We know of a former stake president who describes his ward teaching assignment as "the most challenging responsibility I ever had." He spends one evening each month with his junior companion preparing the lesson that they will deliver to the families in their district, and during this hour of preparation they pray for direction and inspiration that they might know the solutions to the problems of the families within their district. They go to the roll and record book and look up the birth dates of every member in each family. They want to know if there are children who are ready to be baptized or ordained to the Priesthood, or graduated from the Auxiliaries. The president says he appreciates having a young man as a companion because he knows more about boys and girls his own age and their problems, and the young man's counsel is respected and appreciated.

Finally, in this hour of planning and preparation which precedes their visits, they decide who will conduct the discussion and how the lessons will be presented to each particular family. Then they go forth, prepared to promote the spirit of good will, to meet the criticisms of those who find fault, to defend the Church, uphold its doctrines, and support its leaders, to encourage those who are offended or weak in the faith, to comfort those who mourn or have sorrow, and deliver a message of good cheer to the discouraged, the unfortunate, the aged and the shut-in, and if appropriate they will teach their families to pray and leave their blessings in the homes by praying with them.

Elder Mark E. Petersen has warned us to follow the message, to teach the simple principles of the gospel. He tells us to avoid advancing new doctrines, new interpretations, discussing new theories. May I quote one paragraph from his remarks.

"Most of our teachers are wonderful. They teach the truth. They bring about conversions to minds and hearts of those who listen to them, but there are those few teachers who sow seeds of doubt by speculating in unsound doctrine, and as they do they 'soften up,' to use the army expression, some of their hearers who might later be taken over by the apostate teachers who come among us."

It was two days before Christmas, December 23, 1949. I lived in a ward with 600 members which covered most of the downtown area and several residential sections in a large city on the West Coast. It was a transient ward, with over ten percent of our members turning over every month, and so the ward teacher was indispensable. It was after 10 p.m. when the ward teacher called the home of the bishop and suggested that he look in on one of his families.

Early the next morning I called at the home with the senior companion. The father—we will call him Joseph Hunt, had injured his back and was unemployed. We met the mother and three little girls. There was no sign of Christmas, but plenty of evidence that Brother Hunt's paychecks had stopped several weeks before. Although I was not acquainted with the family, we knew from the green card that he was a bricklayer by trade. I was inspired to suggest to Brother Hunt that we had a problem in the Church where he could be helpful. A large room in the basement with the furnace located in one end was being used by the MIA as a storage room. There were stage properties, scenery, and athletic equipment, creating a fire hazard which was worrying the bishopric.

I explained that we had money to buy the blocks, but no money to pay for the labor for building a wall. Of course, Brother Hunt agreed that he was anxious to be helpful, so we went to the Church where my first act was to call the Relief Society president. She completed her survey of the family's needs while we made plans to build a wall that would separate the storage room from the furnace room.

That evening Santa Claus came to the Joseph P. Hunt family on Queen Anne Hill. The bishopric brought the food and clothing from the storehouse. The ward teachers had taken the responsibility for the tree and the presents and goodies to fill the stockings, and during the Christmas Holidays the wall was completed by Brother Hunt, and it stands today as a monument to a pair of ward teachers who cared enough to go out two days before Christmas and watch over the Church always.

I have always felt that the ward teaching assignment carries with it a responsibility to make friends of the people who are assigned to us, to demonstrate our love for them by being interested in them, and this includes every member of every family in our report book. Please excuse a personal reference, but I love to teach in homes where there are little children. You see, in our home, the youngsters' favorite stories have been based on the experiences of a little pioneer kitten, whose family lived in Kirtland and Nauvoo. He crossed the plains and finally helped settle a little community in Cache Valley, where their daddy was born. Through the experience of this pioneer kitten, we have met the prophets, we have mourned with the Saints at Winter Quarters, and fought the crickets and fed the Indians.

And over the years we have shared our pioneer stories with the families in our district. There are very few ward teaching lessons that will not become interesting and understandable to a child when seen through the eyes of a pioneer kitten, and I have been grateful that with these stories I have been able to make friends of the children in my district and in my ward.

Our responsibility is to teach all of the family. Let us find some way to make our message interesting to these little folks. We must love them and make them our friends. Stevenson could have been writing about the ward teachers when he said, "So long as we love we serve. So long as we are loved by others I would almost say we are indispensable, and no man is useless while he has a friend."

Let us use our youth and our energy, our enthusiasm and our strength, in obeying this commandment to watch over the Church always. Brethren, we are our brother's keeper. We assumed this assignment when we accepted our ordination in the Priesthood. It is a responsibility that we cannot delegate or avoid. It is my testimony to you that this gospel is true, that we progress only as we serve, and that the ward teaching program of this Church offers man one of his greatest opportunities to be useful to his fellowman.

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Thank you, brethren, for your responses. The congregation will now sing, with Elder Richard P. Condie conducting, "Do What Is Right."

The Congregation and the Men's Chorus sang the hymn, "Do What Is Right."

Second Day

President David O. McKay:

Our next speaker is Brother Henry D. Moyle, second counselor in the First Presidency. I think we are fortunate in having Brother Moyle in the First Presidency of the Church. When we last met, Brother Stephen L. Richards was with us, and you will remember the messages he used to give. He is listening in tonight, undoubtedly, joining in our appreciation of the instructions that are given by this able counselor, Henry D. Moyle. The time is his.

PRESIDENT HENRY D. MOYLESecond Counselor in the First Presidency*

My brethren, this is a solemn moment for me, I can assure you. I have been coming to these Saturday evening Priesthood meetings for a good many years—all my life—since I was ordained a deacon. I was here when President McKay was called into the Twelve. I was here when President Richards was called into the Twelve. I have come here many times with my father. I have realized that the instructions that were given to the Priesthood by the Brethren on these occasions were equally good for father and for son.

This is the first call that has come to me to address this great body of Priesthood, and I assure you that if I am able to give you any thoughts this evening that will be beneficial to the work, we shall have to ascribe the honor to our Father in Heaven. I am sure we must all of us feel dependent upon him for the guidance, the direction and the inspiration essential for each one of us to have ever present in order to fulfill the calls which are made of us by those who preside over us in the Priesthood.

I have a deep sense of appreciation for the work of these Brethren who have preceded me, and especially President Stephen L. Richards. For many years past it has been my great pleasure to be here and to expect to hear words of inspiration and wisdom from him, and I have never been disappointed. We miss President Richards, and we continue, as we undertake to carry on, to remember his beloved wife and all of his posterity, and pray that the blessings of the Almighty may continue to be with them, to guide and direct them in the footsteps of their illustrious father and husband.

We do not need, however, to eulogize men who perform their duties and responsibilities in the Priesthood. Certainly that which we undertake to do is not done for the purpose of being praised of men. It is to give us that solemn deep-seated satisfaction in our hearts that we in some small way have helped to establish the Kingdom of our Heavenly Father here upon this earth in these latter days. To this purpose we dedicate our lives and all that we have and are, and our constant prayer to our Heavenly Father is that we might have added strength, added capacity, added capability to accomplish more and more in his service. If I have any complaint tonight it would be that the days are not long enough. Some of you were here last night when I was suggesting to the bishops that we ought to increase the hours of proselyting of our stake missionaries, and I said I thought that we ought to strike an average of about 40 hours a week. I, of course, misspoke myself—I meant 40 hours a month.

But I have been thinking about that incident, and I know many men in this Church whose time would permit them to live up to the ideal which I spoke unintentionally. We have these—I was going to say, eight-hour days—but I suppose nobody works eight hours any more, do they? Six times eight would be forty-eight, and it seems to me I heard something about a 40 hour week, and sometimes weeks that call for lesser labor.

It may not be entirely a coincidence that these shrinking hours of labor required of us in our daily employment should come about coincident with the tremendous need that we have in the Church for work in the service of the Master. This subject of ward teaching that Bishop Cheever and Bishop Hill have so beautifully discussed with us tonight has at its root the performance of a service, a labor. It is time-consuming, but how tremendously rewarding to know that every month of our lives we have contacted somebody, made their lives happier and better than they otherwise would have been.

Now, I know one of these bishops pretty well. He had no more been called into the bishopric than he said to himself and to me and to some others in the ward, "I wonder if it's necessary for a young man to ever reach the age of 20 and not be worthy and ready and willing to go on a mission?" It is little wonder that he has ward teaching in his heart, because he could not have hoped for such a result had the homes in which those young men lived not been visited regularly.

Sometimes I get off on my statistics, but my best knowledge and understanding is that since he became bishop there hasn't been a single boy escape, and if there have, perchance, been one or two that I do not know about, I still say the record is miraculous, and it comes about as a result of work. Everyone of those young men who have gone into the mission field—and I can speak with some feeling about this subject because one of them is my own son—loves his bishop, and when they come back from their mission fields, as they do nearly every month, they go to their bishop and tell him they are ready to go to work in the ward.

I tell you, brethren, this ward teaching is basically fundamental. It is the foundation, so to speak, upon which we can build in any of our Church activities, to accomplish any results that are desirable. Now, we have in the Church today about one out of every four young men who reach the age of 20 who go on a mission. I want you bishops to ask yourselves this question: "Where have we failed with reference to the other three?" That was the plea that Bishop Isaacson made to you last night with reference to your Senior Aaronic Priesthood Group. I am sure that a bishop should either have that young man ready to go on a mission, or have the satisfaction of knowing that he had exhausted the resources at his command in attempting to qualify him therefor.

We have a tremendous need for missionaries, and I have a feeling, brethren, that if we started to exercise our Priesthood in our relationships with our families, our intimate relationships, early in our family history, that our young men would have become so well assured of the power and the efficacy of the Priesthood held by their fathers, that it would become in very deed their principal ambition in life to receive that same Priesthood, and I cannot think of any greater satisfaction that comes into the life of a righteous father than to himself be worthy when the time arrives, and his son has qualified himself to receive either the Lesser or the Higher Priesthood, to confer that Priesthood upon him under the direction of his bishop or his stake president.

I want to leave this thought with you this evening, brethren. I do not believe that any one of us who are recipients of the Priesthood ever exercise that Priesthood in the performance of a single ordinance, the performance of a single act, in which we invoke the power of our Priesthood, without having in our hearts simultaneously therewith a deep-seated, genuine, true testimony of the divinity of the work in which we are engaged, and a knowledge that God has in very deed restored his Priesthood to the earth, and that we have been the beneficiaries of that great gift.

My thoughts go back at the moment to when I was a little boy. I was awfully sick, I thought. I do not think my sickness was very serious. I may have had a bad case of measles or something like that, but I was sick, and I was miserable, and my father had lived so closely to me that I was just as certain as that I lived that when my father came home and I asked him to administer to me that I would be healed. Do you think a boy can go through that kind of an experience with his father and have his prayers answered, have his faith justified, and not love that father? And even more important than that, not have a keen realization and appreciation of the power that his father has by virtue of the Priesthood which has been conferred upon him? I am sure that from that moment on I lived, as far as I can review my life in my own mind, to receive that same Priesthood, to perform that same service in behalf of my family when I might be blessed with one, and I never cease to be grateful to the Lord for the almost innumerable instances when I have had the privilege of exercising my Priesthood outside the family circle in behalf of my brethren and sisters throughout the Church, and being absolutely conscious when I laid my hands upon their heads that there was a power there making itself manifest in my ministry, that would bring about the purposes of our Heavenly Father here upon this earth.

And so I say if we exercise this Priesthood in behalf of our families we cannot help but have our families grow up to follow in our footsteps, and what father is there among us that would not have his son go on a mission. I have made this statement many times in the Church in many of your stakes—I have never yet been contradicted, I have never yet had a case brought to my attention that would disprove what I have said—and that is this: that the Lord has so blessed and prospered the Saints that today we are well enough off to send anybody on a mission that is worthy and willing to go, and supplement whenever necessary whatever means he and his family may have to keep him on the mission. We are not having missionaries come home in the middle of their missionary terms because their families have run out of finances.

Now the Lord has blessed us for a purpose. His blessings have not been showered upon us for the purpose of our following the ways of the world. Why do you think we pay our tithing? Isn't it to put our hearts in tune with the Spirit of our Heavenly Father, to enter into a partnership with him and dedicate the other nine tenths to the best possible use available to bring about his purposes, first with the family, and second, with the ward.

I am sure the generosity of the Latter-day Saints knows no bounds. Some people say that there are too many calls made upon us, but I never yet, and I think I can truthfully say this, in all my experience in the Church heard anyone complain about the cost of a mission. There is something about a mission. Sometimes I think it affects the family at home even more than the missionary himself.

I remember one night many years ago in Charleston, West Virginia. We had a little group of missionaries there as we toured the East Central States Mission—about 20, as I recall it—and one elder got up and said: "Brother Moyle, I have only been on a mission for a year, but every day that I am on my mission I have a stronger assurance come to me that as a result of my mission I will bring my father into the Church. Do you know why I want to bring my father into the Church? It is because I have seen and heard my mother pray for that event to happen as far back as I can remember. I just have a feeling that if, through my diligence, my effort, my worthiness as a missionary, spending my two years in this mission, I can accomplish that result, I will have been able to give my mother that which she wants above all else on earth, and incidentally, make it possible for me to be sealed to my father and my mother, and give to them the benefits of the Holy Endowment."

I would like to charge, if it were possible, every Latter-day Saint home to produce a missionary. It would be easy to divide the homes in the Church between those who are presided over by returned missionaries, and those who are presided over by men who have not filled that call. I am sure that the latter group have always been anxious, always just a little disappointed that they did not go on a mission themselves. There need be no disappointment in the heart of any Latter-day Saint father, whether he has been on a mission or not. If I were the head of a family and I had not been on a mission, I would devote myself to receive the blessing of a mission through my son.

I want to say to you tonight, brethren, in all solemnity, that we can receive those blessings if we rear our children to qualify for that great service, the greatest service of all. That is the service to which the Twelve have been called, and all their Assistants and Associates. It is the prime charge that the Savior gave his Apostles of old—to go into the world and to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, the gospel of life and salvation, to all the children of our Heavenly Father here upon this earth.

I know that God lives. I know that the power of the Priesthood is with us, and I know that there is vested in President David O. McKay all the keys of the Priesthood. There has flowed into this dispensation all of the power and all of the authority and all of the keys and blessings of all other dispensations. That we know. And I am sure that you brethren will have difficulty in realizing how deep-seated my gratitude to my Heavenly Father is for this testimony, this knowledge that God lives, and that he sustains his mouthpiece upon this earth with power and authority to speak in his name every day of his life.

I do not know what in the world I could have done to be worthy of this close association with these men whom I revere and idolize. For 53 years President McKay has been as dedicated a man as ever lived upon the face of the earth to the tasks which have been his, and now I have the privilege of undertaking in my weak way to be of some assistance to him.

President Clark and I have been thrown together in our Welfare work these many years, and I have learned to love and respect and revere him. I do hope and pray that the Lord will bless me that my labors may in some small measure reflect the deep sense of gratitude I have in my heart for this call, and make me capable, qualified, worthy, to continue to associate and to counsel with you, my beloved brethren. I love the brethren of this Church. I am so grateful that I have had these years of opportunity to associate with President Joseph Fielding Smith and the members of the Twelve. It was brought rather sternly to my realization that I was not a member of the Twelve any more when my beloved friend, Howard W. Hunter, was called to take my place in the Twelve. I love and respect and revere him, as I do all of the members of the Twelve, and my prayer daily is that with this call which has come to me, the Lord may make it possible for me to stand even closer and be more intimate, and draw greater strength from these Brethren who have sustained and upheld me all these years as a member of their Quorum.

Now, I do invoke the blessings of the Lord upon us all, and pray that we will constantly unite our faith and prayers that the Lord will bless and sustain President McKay and President Clark with the health and strength and vigor and vitality of body and of mind and of spirit, which will make it possible for them day to day to fulfill the righteous desires that they have in their hearts, the desires that they have to carry this work on, and this I pray humbly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. will now address us.

PRESIDENT J. REUBEN CLARK, JR.

First Counselor in the First Presidency

My brethren, holders of the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God: I address you as such, I wish to speak to you as such. I have enjoyed this meeting. I have enjoyed the brethren, the bishops who spoke about ward teaching. I have enjoyed, of course, Brother Moyle. I paid a brief compliment to him this morning and likewise to President Richards. I shall have to be brief, because you want to hear President McKay and so do I. (laughter) "The audience only laughs when the king speaks!"

But there are one or two points that I would hope briefly to make to you in the very few minutes that I wish to speak.

There is a saying that "all roads lead to Rome." As Brother Christiansen pointed out today and made suggestions, too many of us seem sometimes to offer this excuse or that excuse or the other excuse for not obeying the commandments of the Lord because we will all go to the same place, and we know that that view is held by many of the sectarian churches of the world. That, so far as this Priesthood is concerned, is not true, it is an apostate principle.

I have already suggested that we face perhaps the greatest crisis in the history of the world. These are the "latter days." I have already suggested, following the excellent address of President McKay, that the Marxist principles and policy wherever found look to the temporal, not to the spiritual. They exalt the temporal; they belittle the spiritual.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

You know, I find no place in the Scriptures, the New Testament and otherwise, where the Lord ever promised that those who followed him would gain wealth. His mission was to the poor and the lowly.

Do you remember the first great miracle performed by the old Apostles? It occurred at the Gate Beautiful. There was there a man who was born from his mother's womb with crippled feet. They brought him there daily. Peter and John were going in and as they went by him, lying there seeking alms, they looked at him and then they said "Look on us." And he looked at them. Then Peter delivered that great message that brought him before the Sanhedrin, and performed the first miracle:

"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."

He reached his hand, and took him. The man arose. His ankles straightened. He leaped for joy.

Now, I want to talk a little, just a minute more, to you about that.

I do not wish to be a croaking raven. But I am so disturbed by the revelations recently made by this man Khrushchev that a deliberate attempt will be made to conquer the Western world, the Christian world; first, by peaceful means. But if they can get us for peace, and then for retiring from Europe, demobilization, largely, the destruction of our installations for protection, then you will see what he will do.

Now, brethren, I want to urge on you this consideration. I have had some time to reflect recently, and my condition has been such as to bring home to me how terrible would be the condition if I had been deprived of my daughters and of my doctor, and the saving thing about it was the prayers of my Brethren and of the Church. There is where the healing came from.

Visualize, if you will, for a moment what would be the condition if we suddenly had a bomb landed here, many wounded, many doctors out, perhaps the hospitals gone. What are you going to do?

"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."

Brethren, if you face a situation where there is no nursing available, no doctors available, only the Priesthood, are you going to be living so that you can go and in the name of Jesus Christ, bless and heal?

I was reared in a household of faith. In my father's home we had no doctor in the town. We had none short of Salt Lake City, forty miles away. My father and my mother reared almost entirely their ten children without a doctor—time and time again pneumonia, scarlet fever, typhoid, six of us sick at one time in bed in the same room with diphtheria. And what did they do? Father and the elders went to the Lord. That is how we lived.

Read what happened on what is called the Day of Miracles on the banks of the Mississippi, when the Prophet went out and administered here and there and healed. Joseph sent his handkerchief as Paul of old sent handkerchiefs and aprons, and, their faces being wiped, the sick were healed.

Now, if you have no doctors, no nurses, none but you and the Lord, you Priesthood-bearers, is it not worth living so that when that time comes, your prayers will be heard, and your sick healed?

May God be with us and help us to live as the Priesthood should live.

I conclude by bearing my testimony as I did this morning, but will not repeat for time, save to say that I know God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that Joseph was a Prophet through whom came the Priesthood and the Gospel, that those who succeeded him have had that same right and that same power held today by President David O. McKay.

God give us all this testimony and give us the strength to live so that if, when, and as a crisis shall come, we may be a Church, a community of doctors representing the Priesthood, holding the Priesthood and exercising the great gift which filled the work of Jesus, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus. Amen.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

This is an historic occasion. The young men of the Aaronic Priesthood in attendance will remember this, as we all shall.

We have just received a report of the attendance as follows: In the Salt Lake Tabernacle, 7,563; in the Assembly Hall, Barratt Hall, and grounds, 2,285; in the 204 groups reporting in, 38,516; making a total reported to this moment of 48,364, every one of whom holds the Priesthood, which is an authorization to represent our Father in Heaven in whatever position or assignment each may be placed, and to do it authoritatively.

It is a humbling experience, even to have the privilege of being one of those 48,000 men of the Priesthood—a power in the land and a power never so greatly needed in the history of the world to thwart the plans and schemes of the Adversary as today. God grant that we may have wisdom and knowledge and most of all, divine guidance as we perform our duties assigned to us.

There are a few details that we should like to mention, and ask for the Bishops' cooperation in making more effective the work.

But before so doing, I wish to say a word about our servicemen mentioned in the beginning, twenty-one of whom flew in to attend this meeting tonight. I said we should have something more to say. A short time ago we received a letter from a group of service boys, a part of which I wish to read. They are aboard the United States steamship "The Pine Island."

"On behalf of the group aboard the U.S.S. Pine Island we would like to take this time to write to you with humbleness and sincerity in our hearts. . . .

"We a few of the Lord's servants striving to do the work that we have to do before the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Through your words, guidance, and leadership and the help of our Father in Heaven, and if we live worthy we will be able to do this work which is here for us to do. . . .

"We are now touring the Pacific Ocean for six months, visiting different lands and people. We learn a lot of the ways of other people. How they live and what they do, their religion. We find out personally how important missionary work really is and how much has to be done yet. Most of these people do not even know that there is a Father in Heaven."

"We do our very best, especially over here to set examples of the Church and to live as righteously as we possibly can; to live the commandments of the Lord and the teachings of our Church; to give unto all of those desiring to attend our meeting of worship, to let them partake of the spirit and blessings we receive at our little group meetings.

"We hope that we have not kept you from some important task with the time spent reading our letter. We just wanted to write to you to let you know that we are always thinking of you and our prayers are with you. We thank you for your time. May God bless and help you in all things you are in need of.

Very Humbly Yours,

(signed) Edwin E. Bigler, Elder
L. D. S. Group Leader
U. S. S. Pine Island
(Pacific Ocean)
Elder Danny G. Davis,
Secretary"

It is not easy for the boys in the service to live up to the ideals of the Priesthood, especially if they have been tempted before they went into the service. It is not easy for the Elders who are in the missionary field, either, especially if they have been tempted before they go into the mission field, and I emphasize that exception.

Young men and young women who grow up through their teens and keep themselves unspotted from the world can resist temptation in the field and in the service, or wherever they are. It is not difficult when they meet temptation.

But some of our young men and our young women fail to live up to the standards of the Priesthood and they slip and fall. They ask forgiveness and go into the field and are tempted, and they are tempted, and they fail again. It is just as necessary for young men and young women to live up to the principles in their high school training here at home, and some of them are narrow in their training and teaching, as it is for them to keep themselves pure and unspotted when they go into the field.

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

You cannot tamper with the Evil One. Resist temptation, resist the Devil and he will flee from you.

The Savior on the Mount gave us the greatest example in all the world and the 48,000 men tonight must ever have him in mind as their ideal. Just after the Savior's baptism, he was led up to the mount that is known now as the Mount of Temptation. I do not know whether that is where he stood, where he fasted for forty days, or not. But it was on some mount that he went, and after fasting forty days, the Tempter came to him, so we are told, and as the Tempter always does, he struck at him in what the Tempter thought was his weakest point.

After having fasted, the Tempter thought he would be hungry, and the first temptation, you will remember, was, "If," and he said it sarcastically, "If thou be the Son of God," referring to the testimony of the Father when he said, "This is my beloved Son,"—"If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." And there is a stone there in that area which is not unlike a Jewish wheat-loaf, so that would make the temptation of it appeal all the stronger. Christ's answer was: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." (Matt. 4:3-4.)

The next temptation quoted scripture also. It was an appeal to vanity, an appeal to gain ascendancy over our fellows: "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down . . ." (from a pinnacle of the temple) ". . . for it is written . . ." (and the Devil can cite scripture for his purpose) ". . . for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone." And the answer was, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." (Matt. 4:6-7.)

The third temptation was of love, of wealth and power. The tempter took Jesus to a high mountain and showed him the things of the world and the power thereof. He was not sarcastic in this temptation. He was pleading, for the resistance of the Savior had weakened the Tempter's powers. He showed him the things of the world. "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Rising in the majesty of his divinity, Jesus said: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." And the Tempter slunk away; and we are told that angels came and administered to the Lord. (Matt. 4:8-11.)

There is your story, young man. Your weakest point will be the point at which the Devil tries to tempt you, will try to win you, and if you have made it weak before you have undertaken to serve the Lord, he will add to that weakness. Resist him and you will gain in strength. He will tempt you in another point. Resist him and he becomes weaker and you become stronger, until you can say, no matter what your surroundings may be, "Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." (Luke 4:8.)

Now, I mention this because there are too many broken hearts in our Church, because men, some of whom hold the Priesthood and prominent positions, are tempted right wherein they are weak, and they forget that they have made covenants with the Lord and step aside from the path of virtue and discretion and will break their wives' hearts because of foolish indulgence and because of their yielding.

We have one of the most sacred covenants in all the world pertaining to the happiness of the home, and there are men within the sound of my voice who have forgotten how sacred that covenant is. The Brethren of the Twelve, the General Authorities of the Church, the stake authorities, are urging youth everywhere to go to the temple to be married. Don't you go to that temple unless you are ready to accept the covenants that you make.

Marriage in the temple is one of the most beautiful things in all the world. A couple is led there by love, the divinest attribute of the human soul. A young man looks upon that bride, rightfully, who will be the mother of his children, as being as pure as a snowflake, as spotless as a sunbeam, as worthy of motherhood as any virgin. And I will tell you that it is a glorious thing for a woman thus to bear the robes and be the pride of a young Elder's heart, one who trusts her to be the head of his household.

And she trusts him as being as worthy of fatherhood as she of motherhood, and rightfully, too, because on his shoulders are the robes of the Holy Priesthood, testifying to his young bride, and to all, that he is as worthy of fatherhood as she of motherhood.

And together they stand in the House of the Lord and testify, covenant before him that each will be true to the covenants they make that day, each keeping himself or herself to the other and none else. That is the highest ideal of marriage ever given to man. If those covenants were kept as sacred as sacred covenants should be kept, there would be fewer broken hearts among wives and fewer among the husbands, when wives forget. A covenant is a sacred thing, and a man who is married in the temple, has no right to be looking at young women, whether they are in the choir or in the Relief Society or on the General Board, or doing any of the duties of the Church. You have a covenant to be true to that wife.

Brethren of the Priesthood, keep it true, be true to it.

"It's easy enough to be prudent,

When nothing tempts you to stray;
When without or within no voice of sin

Is luring your soul away.
But it's only a negative virtue

Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor of earth,

Is the life that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen

Who had no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered today;

They make up the item of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion

And the sorrow that hides in a smile,
It is these that are worth the homage of earth

For we find them but once in a while."

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox

I plead with the army assembled tonight in this Priesthood meeting, to keep true to the covenants made in the House of God. You have no right to neglect your wives and go and seek the company of others who seem to be more attractive to you because you are thrown with them in daily life, in your business affairs, or in Church affairs. This may seem general, but while I speak to you, a wife with her tears and her pleadings comes to me now, asking, "Won't you just say a prayer, won't you offer a prayer to try to bring my husband back?" Well, she may have been to blame for the trouble—she said she was partly to blame—but I know he was to blame, for he is a man who holds the Priesthood and he has no right to break his covenants. We have too many divorces in the Church, and men, I think we are to blame for most of them—not all, but most of them.

With regard to temple work, bishops, be more careful about issuing recommendations. First, in the details: Many persons come to the temples with recommendations incompletely prepared, lacking essential information, often without indication as to the purpose of the ordinance.

Next: Missionaries not infrequently come to the Mission Home without temple recommendations. That should never be, bishops. Most of them, not having received their endowments, must go to the temple, and the program at the Mission Home provides for at least two temple sessions.

Please be careful, bishops and stake presidencies, for we ask that you give special attention to the correction of these two matters and save much inconvenience, expense, and time to temple and general office staff and the people of the Church as well.

I see that the time is gone and I must not detain you longer.

If you will have your testimonies strengthened, to have it revealed to you now individually that Christ is aiding you in your work, guiding his Church, well the best way to do that is to follow the admonition of my brethren who have spoken to you tonight—doing your duty, as President Moyle urged, attending to missionary work, no matter what the cost may be or how many hours you have to spend.

There is an old saying that "man's extremity is God's opportunity." You remember the story I have told about

Saturday, October 10

Second Day

James McMurrin, who had to fill an appointment in Falkirk, Scotland, on Sunday. He was in Burntisland Saturday night and he had a sixpence or a shilling in his pocket to pay for his boat ride across the Leith Walk to Edinburgh. When that was spent he was alone. The only way he could get to Falkirk was by the one train that was then running between Edinburgh and Glasgow.

He had an appointment with the Branch in Edinburgh from ten to twelve. He filled that appointment. When they asked him to go to lunch, he said, "No, thank you, I have to be in Falkirk and I have to take the train that leaves at one o'clock"—or thereabouts. One by one the Saints bade him goodbye, all but Brother Robertson, who was president of the Branch. "Why," he said, "Well, if ye canna go hame with me, I'll gae ye Scotch convoy," and together they walked across Princess Street down to Waverly Station, and crossed under the glass covered canopy, over to the gate from which the train was to leave.

The only possible way that Brother McMurrin could have kept his appointment that night was to get that train. He had faith that the Lord would open up his way. He did not ask anyone for a shilling, nor for sixpence, nor for twopence, nor for two and six, and as the time approached, Brother Robertson said, "Well, Brother McMurrin, it is time just to get your ticket, so I will say good-bye." "Goodbye, Brother Robertson," and Brother McMurrin was left alone. There was his extremity.

"Father,"—I will give you his words as he gave them to me—"Father, I have come just as far as I can in fulfilling my duty. Open up the way that I may get on this train and go to Falkirk." He had in mind, he said, that the gatekeeper would probably let him go through. He did not think of the fact that the gatekeeper was a Scotchman. He would never do that. What happened? Brother Robertson had just returned to the steps leading up to Princess Street and the thought came to him, "I wonder if Brother McMurrin has enough money." Quickly retracing his steps, he walked across the station, pulled out of his pocket a two and six piece, and said, "Here, Brother McMurrin, perhaps you need this." "Thank you, Brother Robertson, I need that to get my ticket." "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."

You brethren in the Church will come against the wall. It seems to be across your path. It may be morally. You cannot overcome it, or you cannot get through it, you cannot see. You can walk from here to that wall, having faith that God will give you a ladder, or show you a hidden ladder or an opening, and he will do it, if you will walk just as far as you can in the performance of your duty. No matter what it is or how difficult your duty, do it; walk that distance, and then say in all sincerity and faith, "Father, help me. Open up the way for me. Give me strength to do my duty, give me strength to overcome temptation."

God help us as men representing him through the Priesthood, the Holy Priesthood, to do our duty and do it well, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "The Lord Bless You and Keep You." Elder Leo Reeve, president of the Zion Park Stake, will offer the closing prayer, after which this Conference will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Again we thank the Men's Chorus for their inspirational singing.

The session at ten o'clock Sunday morning will be broadcast as a public service over television and radio stations throughout the West. The Tabernacle Choir broadcast will be from 8:30 to 9:00 in the morning.

Also, Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve will be the speaker on the CBS Church-of-the-Air Program, broadcast over KSL tomorrow morning at 7:30.

"The Lord Bless You and Keep You," by the Men's Chorus, followed by the benediction, and this great Conference will be adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir sang the hymn, "The Lord Bless You and Keep You," following which the closing prayer was offered by Elder Leo Reeve, president of Zion Park Stake.

Conference adjourned until Sunday morning, October 11, at 10:00 o'clock.

THIRD DAY

MORNING MEETING

(For a full report of the Church of the Air and Tabernacle Choir and Organ Broadcasts, see pages 126 to 130.)

Conference reconvened Sunday morning, October 11, 1959 at 10 o'clock, with President David O. McKay presiding, and conducting the services.

The music for this session of the Conference was furnished by the Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie. Frank W. Asper was at the organ console.

President David O. McKay:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, with Frank W. Asper at the organ, will open these services by singing, "The Lord's Prayer." The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Theodore C. Jacobsen, formerly president of the Eastern States Mission.

---

The Choir sang "The Lord's Prayer."
(By Robertson)

Elder Theodore C. Jacobsen, formerly president of the Eastern States Mission, offered the opening prayer.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Theodore C. Jacobsen, formerly president of the Eastern States Mission, offered the invocation. The Choir will now sing, "Jesus, Name of Wondrous Love," Richard P. Condie conducting. Following the singing President Henry D. Moyle of the First Presidency will address us.

---

Singing by the Choir, "Jesus, Name of Wondrous Love."

President David O. McKay:

The audience will be interested in knowing that this service is being broadcast on television and radio stations in many western states during this first hour. President Henry D. Moyle of the First Presidency will be our first speaker. He will be followed by Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson.

PRESIDENT HENRY D. MOYLE

Second Counselor in the First Presidency

"We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in His Son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost." (First Article of Faith.)

Upon this article of our faith is the Church founded. Jesus Christ, our Lord and Master, is the Son of the Living God. Christ is our Head. His life and works in mortality had a twofold purpose in the eternal plan of man: first, to redeem man from the fall. Therefore, has he been called the Redeemer of mankind. We believe with Paul of old:

"If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

"For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (I Cor. 15:19-22.)

The atonement of Christ was in turn twofold, as I have said: first, to redeem man from the fall. It is through this atonement that man is resurrected from the dead that he might gain eternal life in its fulness, that there might be a reuniting of the body and the spirit after death. This constitutes the fulness of man.

The second purpose of the atonement was that we might be resurrected, free from our transgressions in mortality, and not live forever in our sins. Christ also atoned for all of our individual sins. Thus, we say he took upon himself the sins of the world. John tells us, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.)

We say in our second article of faith: "We believe that men will be punished for their own sins, and not for Adam's transgression."

Thus we see that the atonement of Christ brings upon us the redemption from the dead. We all become fruits of the resurrection. Redemption from our own sins depends upon us. We are not saved from ourselves by grace alone as we are from Adam's transgression. To understand this simple difference gives us the power to differentiate in large measure truth from error. When we seek the inspiration of God in answer to our prayers; he inspires us. We repent, and repentance leads us to an appreciation of the laws and ordinances of God by which man can, through his own effort, through the exercise of his own will power, lift himself from sin to righteousness. When he does this, he is on the way to eternal salvation and exaltation in the kingdom of our Heavenly Father.

Paul said of Christ: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Hebrews 5:8-9.)

In all things Christ has set us the pattern. For this purpose he came to earth. No deviation from his plan can be justified or tolerated either in the judgment or the mercy of God. Furthermore, no excuse, no reason, exists why all men should not lend obedience thereto, rather than to try to justify themselves in pursuing any other course in life. Christ came to help us work out our salvation.

There are two phases of Christ's earthly mission. First, he taught his followers the plan by example as well as by precept. His teachings began with his own baptism in the waters of Jordan at the hands of John the Baptist by immersion, and John had theretofore been duly commissioned of the Lord to perform this ordinance. Could he have emphasized the importance of baptism in any better way?

"And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

"And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matthew 3:16-17.)

"... for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness." (Ibid., 15.)

We next see Christ in the hands of the tempter. Thus he taught us by his example to overcome the power of evil. We must all recognize in our lives the existence of two great powers, and learn early in life that with the power and inspiration of God we can overcome and resist and turn aside every evil force. Even his fasting for forty days gave us an understanding of how we can likewise efficaciously reach the source of power essential for our own progress. How could the Savior have taught us better how to begin a life of humility and of service?

We next see Christ on the mountain teaching his disciples whom he had chosen, and with them other listeners—yes, the multitude—the principles by which men could control their lives, and should control them. Out of these teachings we have the Sermon on the Mount. Would that it were understood by all men! But all men do not understand the teachings of Christ. His teachings are sufficient to have taught all who have heard and all who have read or now read that they should all have recognized him as the Son of the Living God.

There were only a relatively few who followed him. Too many were steeped in the paganistic practices of the past, too self-satisfied to open their minds and their hearts to the truth, even when spoken with the conviction and knowledge and power of God, made manifest through his Son Jesus Christ, our Lord and Master.

Time will not permit the enumeration of all his teachings. How grateful we are that he gave us the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and commanded us to meet frequently and partake of that Sacrament and renew our covenants to keep his laws and obey his commandments, even as we covenanted to do at the waters of baptism.

His second purpose was not finally completed until after his crucifixion and resurrection, just prior to his ascension to heaven, when he charged his apostles of old to go into all the world and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, and that they that believed should be baptized and thereby bring about their own salvation.

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." (Ibid., 28:18-20.)

Here again he set the great pattern to be followed by his disciples in every generation of time. The plan Christ thus gave us can be stated very simply:

We hear the gospel.

We repent.

We are inspired.

We are converted by that inspiration, the gift of the Holy Ghost.

We accept, and we learn the gospel.

We teach the gospel to others.

Its divinity is revealed to those who seek the truth by the gift and power of God. That is what is meant by the scriptures: ". . . seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." (Ibid., 7:7.)

We ourselves must act. We must initiate our own search for truth of our own free will. Once we do, the Lord magnifies us, fills our souls with his Holy Spirit, and leads us on to faith and to repentance. When we have received and understood the word, we accept the gospel and lend obedience thereto.

Our third and fourth articles of faith read: "We believe that through the Atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel."

"We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: first, Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; second, Repentance; third, Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; fourth, Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost."

We express our love and devotion to God for our conversion by proclaiming his word to others, even as he has given it to us. We spend our lives teaching the gospel to each other in the Church, in our homes, in all our worshipping assemblies. We proclaim the truths of the gospel to our neighbors and our friends far and near. We fill our missions on earth by trying to follow in this respect, as in all others, the charge and the example and the teachings of Christ, our Lord.

After Peter and the apostles of old received this commission to preach to every nation, we see them next actually preaching the gospel, and our first recorded history of their missionary labors is recorded thus:

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. . . .

"Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

"Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

"For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:1-4, 36-39.)

"But those things, which God before had shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

Sunday, October 11

Third Day

"And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

"Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

"For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

"And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." (Ibid., 3:18-23.)

"Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

"If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

"This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner." (Ibid., 4:8-11.)

Today, and for the past 130 years of the existence of the restored Church of Jesus Christ, the Spirit which prompted Peter and his associates of old has impelled the elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to do likewise. Ever since 1830 we have had in the world young men and women who, because of their love of the gospel and the witness of its divinity which they have received of the Holy Ghost, preach the gospel in its truth and in its purity. They devote their time and their means to accomplish this mission, to call all people to repentance and to teach the plan of life and salvation given us of the Savior. The gospel has been restored to the earth in its fulness, in its simplicity and purity in this day through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Like Paul of old, they say, and they say it with pure hearts and clean hands, as they dedicate their lives to their missionary labors:

"For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

"And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

"And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

"That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

"But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

"For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." (1 Cor. 2:2-5, 9, 11.)

Every convert to the Church today has this desire in his heart to tell others what he has found. There is joy in knowing the truth, and there is joy in intuitively sharing it with others. This is the gift of the Holy Ghost. It is the sure sign of our conversion. Not all of the members of the Church leave their homes to go on missions into the world, my friends, to bring to you the gospel in your homes, but within the sphere of their influence our people continue through life to bear their testimony of the existence of God which gives to them that peace which can come alone from our Father in heaven.

As elders in Israel today we are charged with the responsibility of proclaiming his word to the world and crying repentance to the sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father. Our brothers and sisters throughout the world, those who are listening in, who may not be of our number, let us beg of you to give our missionaries the opportunity they so earnestly seek to give to you the simple principles of the gospel as taught by Jesus Christ himself. These missionaries come to you holding the priesthood of God. They have received his power and authority to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof. They have brought joy to hundreds of thousands in the past. All of us here today are here as a result of similar labors upon the part of former missionaries.

My friends, you cannot afford to turn a deaf ear to the truth, for we declare to you in all soberness that God lives and has once again spoken from the heavens, once again restored his power and his priesthood in its pristine strength and purity upon those of us whom he has called to carry on his work in this, the dispensation of time in which he has brought together all that he has given his children in all previous generations of man, all as foretold through his prophets of old.

We have the power and the authority to confer these same blessings upon all nations, as the blessings which were given by the apostles of old to the nations in which they served as missionaries.

Daniel tells us: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." (Daniel 2:44.)

John, the Revelator, gave us one of the most beautiful predictions of all of the restoration of the gospel in these latter days, for he said: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

"Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." (Rev. 14:6-7.)

These prophecies have, in large measure, been fulfilled. The gospel has been restored to the earth. God continues to magnify those upon whom he has bestowed his authority in these latter days to serve his people and to guide and direct the honest in heart the world over into the paths of truth and of right. We declare most solemnly that we have been called of God, and that we proclaim his word to the world by virtue of his power and authority. We invoke his blessings upon all mankind, and particularly that their hearts might be opened, their desires might be toward righteousness, and that they might lend an ear and understand and appreciate the truth when it is presented to them by his duly ordained and constituted servants—the missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

God bless them, and bless us, and bless all who lend ear to their teachings, we pray humbly this day, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

President Henry D. Moyle of the First Presidency of the Church has just spoken to us. We hope that all the television sets, radios, that were tuned in along the West Coast, in the Northwest, and throughout the nation, heard President Moyle's address.

We shall now hear from Bishop Thorpe B. Isaacson of the Presiding Bishopric.

BISHOP THORPE B. ISAACSON

First Counselor in the Presiding Bishopric

President McKay, President Clark, President Moyle, President Smith, my beloved brothers and sisters, and the radio and television audience: I am very grateful for the prayer this morning of a wonderful man, former mission president, Brother Theodore Jacobsen. I know that the Lord will answer that prayer, and I shall be grateful to you for your prayers this morning because I confess to you that I feel very humble and very weak.

As I have listened to these inspired messages today and yesterday and the day before, I have thought of the words of Riddle: "Those who know books know much, but those who know nature know more, and those who know God have reached the goal of human wisdom."

This great choir, I am sure, has uplifted us this morning along with thousands and perhaps millions who have heard them. They are a great credit to the Church and to the city, to the state and the nation. These choir leaders, the choir members, and the officers, are not just good musicians: They are good Latter-day Saints, and they are wonderful missionaries. They are devoted. I have a very choice brother singing in the choir, and I know how deeply devoted and what great love he has for this organization. May God bless every single one of them.

I know we have been deeply touched this morning by the inspiring address of President Henry D. Moyle. May I be pardoned if I tell you this morning that I thought his humble and yet beautiful address was just like the prayer he offered a few days ago in an upper room of the temple when the General Authorities met there preparatory to this great conference. As he spoke to you this morning, he had a prayer in his heart for you, the membership of the Church, and for our friends not of the Church; and as he offered that prayer in the temple, in the true order of prayer, I felt sure our Father in heaven had called him to his present position. Brother Moyle has no selfish interests. He has lived above selfishness. He will be a great blessing to the membership of this Church. Those of our friends not in the Church, as well as all of us, will sustain him and pray for him in the great load that he has to carry. The mantle of Presidency has fallen on his shoulders. Last night the priesthood assembled was deeply blessed as a result of his marvelous address. President Moyle will be a great comfort and blessing and assistance to President McKay and President Clark, whom he dearly loves.

A year ago it was the privilege of my wife and myself to visit many countries of Europe, and only by coincidence we came into countries, missions, branches, and districts where Brother and Sister Moyle had recently visited. I have never heard anyone speak so beautifully as the humble Saints of Europe spoke about President and Sister Moyle. I think we will never know the amount of good and the help that he rendered to so many of our humble Saints in far-off countries of Europe. In many places he spoke to them in their native tongue. How grateful they were for his presence. Sister Moyle likewise spoke to them. They are dearly loved in the far-off countries of Europe.

Faith promotes faith, and testimony inspires testimony.

Today, if I may, I would like to take just one sentence from President McKay's beautiful dedicatory prayer offered at the London Temple, and may I quote from that one sentence. Speaking to the Lord, he said: "May we express overwhelming gratitude just to be alive."

I have a personal reason this morning for repeating this sentence from President McKay's dedicatory prayer, because today I am truly grateful just to be alive. A few months ago I became critically ill, and I learned then, as I have never learned before, that the line between life and mortality and death and immortality is very thin indeed. It only takes a few seconds—yes, a very few seconds—to change from life and mortality to death and immortality, and I saw how close one can get to the pale of death. I thought I was passing from this life to the other, and I am truly grateful to the Lord that he permitted me to live. I fully realized then that I was not prepared or ready for that passing, and it brought to my mind a few words that I have read in a poem that goes something like this:

"There is no time that we could set for parting.

Ever our prayer would be," (as mine was)

"Not yet, dear Lord, not yet, just another day."

I realized then more than ever before how dependent we are upon God, our Eternal Father, even for the preservation of our lives. When one faces such a change, and we are all going to face it, when we come close to it, many things come to our minds. I wonder if you are ready for that change. I wonder if you are prepared to change from life to death. I believe that we can become prepared and ready, and I concluded then that if the Lord would permit me to live longer, I intended to live better so that I could die better.

Even though one may not be completely conscious or aware of what is going on about him, I shall always be truly, humbly grateful, I hope, more grateful than ever before in my life for the blessings and the prayers of my friends and family and my Brethren.

I am more grateful now because I realize the power of the Holy Priesthood of God that we have heard so much about in this conference, often referred to as the greatest power on the face of the earth. Some of the Brethren, who are prophets and servants of God, came to my room in the hospital and laid their hands upon my head and anointed me with holy consecrated oil, and then said unto me, "By the power of the Holy Priesthood, (Brother Moyle just told us about that power) and in the name of Jesus Christ, we bless you that you shall be well."

Do you know of any such power as that in the world? I bear testimony to you that the power of the priesthood is here in the Church. I testify to you that one knows and one feels that influence and that power, and is mindful of the blessings of the Lord received through the administration of his servants holding that Holy Priesthood.

I am grateful to be alive, and I promised the Lord that I would bear testimony of that power and that healing influence whenever I could have the strength to do so. I thank God, and I hope that you thank God just to be alive. If you feel that you are not quite prepared or ready for that change from life to death, let me urge you now—today—to change your life. Remember it only takes a few seconds to change from life unto death. Let me urge you to make the necessary adjustments in your life. Yes, make new resolutions. Turn back, if you have reason to believe that you are on the wrong road, turn back now. It isn't too late.

May I quote from Amulek's testimony in the book of Alma, wherein he states: "For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God; yea, behold the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors . . . for that same spirit which doth possess your bodies at the time that ye go out of this life, that same spirit will have power to possess your body in that eternal world." (Alma 34:32, 34.)

Repent! Forsake those things that are wrong so that when the time comes for you to make that change you can say as Paul said to Timothy: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (II Timothy 4:7-8.)

And as quoted in the last verse of the hymn, "Come, Let Us Anew":

"O that each in the day of his coming may say,

'I have fought my way thro'—

I have finished the work thou did'st give me to do.'

O that each from his Lord may receive the glad word:

'Well and faithfully done;

Enter into my joy and sit down on my throne.'

That reminds me of a prayer that I read recently, and may I quote: "Your day is almost done. When the night and the morning meet, it will be an unalterable memory. So let no unkind word, no careless doubting thought, no guilty secret, no neglected duty, no wisp of jealous fog becloud its passing."

May God grant us the ability to change our lives where they need to be changed. I wonder if we are absolutely satisfied with the life we are leading, with the thoughts we are thinking, and with the deeds that we are doing. Everyone of us can thank God, our Heavenly Father, for our very life, and may we let God be our confidant—everyone of us—that "thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly." (Matt. 6:4.)

As we pass from day to day, each day bringing us closer to the time when we will change from life unto death, may we ask: "Heavenly Father, for what purpose hast Thou given me this day? To what end do its hours point? Help me not lightly to dismiss this question. Let me not be carried unthinkingly with the drift of the times. Give me grace to reflect seriously upon the course of my life, for days are numbered and precious."

May this group here today, and those who listen on the radio and television, resolve to live better hereafter so that we can die better. May God bless every single one of you, that you may live as long as you want to live and as long as you ought to live. Remember, each day of life is so precious we must not let it carelessly slip away.

I bear testimony to you humbly that God lives, that he is our Father, that Jesus Christ is our beloved Savior and our Elder Brother. Oh, how grateful we should be for the power and the blessings of the Holy Priesthood of God that are constantly in our midst today. Oh, how important it is to have the faith and ability to recognize, not only our blessings, but the source of those blessings.

God bless everyone of you, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

We will now hear from Elder Henry D. Taylor, Assistant to the Twelve. He will be followed by Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of the Seventy.

ELDER HENRY D. TAYLOR

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

The calling of Brother Moyle to the First Presidency, and that of President Hunter to the Council of the Twelve, is added evidence, my brethren and sisters, that this Church is guided and directed by revelation and by inspiration. These are two wonderful men. I know the Lord has a great mission for them to perform.

We live today, my brethren and sisters, in a world of unrest and insecurity, where mistrust, suspicion, and disloyalty exist between nations as well as among individuals. Loyalty to oneself and to the principles he believes to be true, is a noble virtue.

In Shakespeare's Hamlet is expressed this impressive thought: "To thine own self be true, And it must follow, as the night the day, Thou canst not then be false to any man. . . ."

Latter-day Saints should be taught early in youth the fundamental principles of the gospel. These teachings of the Savior, if observed, will serve as an anchor and guide throughout life, and bring happiness to the individual.

We have been privileged to come to this earth to be tested and proved, to see if we will be loyal and true to the commandments given by our Heavenly Father. We have the responsibility of being loyal to righteous and correct principles. Satan and his followers are zealous and loyal, but to causes and principles which are unrighteous and opposed to the will of our Heavenly Father.

There are two opposing forces operating to win the souls of the children of men—one force for good, and one for evil. The Prophet Mormon gave a test that may be applied in determining one from the other, when he said: "Wherefore, all things which are good cometh of God; and that which is evil cometh of the devil; for the devil is an enemy unto God, and fighteth against him continually. . . ."

"For behold, the Spirit of Christ is given to every man, that he may know good from evil; . . ." (Moroni 7:12, 16.) Through righteous living we may have the companionship of the Holy Spirit, which will assist us in discerning right from wrong, good from evil.

Joseph Smith was permitted to behold the contrast between the glory of God and the power of darkness, and received this explanation: "All this is shown, the good and the evil, the holy and impure, the glory of God and the power of darkness, that you may know hereafter the two powers and never be influenced or overcome by that wicked one. . . . You have beheld the power of God manifested and the power of satan: and you see that there is nothing that is desirable in the works of darkness; that they cannot bring happiness; that those who are overcome therewith are miserable, while on the other hand the righteous are blessed with peace in the kingdom of God where joy unspeakable surrounds them." (Comprehensive History, vol. 1, page 78.)

The Savior came to earth with a mission to perform. He was loyal to the confidence and trust placed in him. This was in spite of his awareness of the magnitude of his mission, including the atonement. As the hour of the betrayal and his great sacrifice drew near, he entered the Garden of Gethsemane, and in anguish prayed to our Heavenly Father, saying: "... O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." (Matthew 26:39.)

The Prophet Joseph Smith fully realized the fate that awaited him and could have undoubtedly escaped martyrdom by going West beyond the reach of his enemies. Rather, he chose to return to Nauvoo and Carthage, being loyal to the Saints he loved so dearly, and who returned his love and affection. Many of his associates pleaded for the privilege of accompanying him and his brother Hyrum to the jail, aware that death could easily result. Willard Richards and John Taylor were granted this permission, and when the armed mob stormed the jail, they fought valiantly with all their might and strength to defend the Prophet and Hyrum. John Taylor was seriously wounded in the assault. This display of loyalty and affection could well impress and inspire each of us. These men were ready to give their very lives for those they loved.

They believed the words of the Savior when he said: "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." (John 15:12-13.)

As we come into your stakes each week to attend quarterly conferences, we are deeply impressed with the devotion, steadfastness, and firmness of you good people in the wards, stakes, and missions of the Church. We are pleased to observe your love and loyalty for the gospel and for the inspired leaders of the Church and of your desire to sustain them and assist them in building up the kingdom of God here upon the earth.

To President McKay and the other brethren in the First Presidency, I express my love, and pledge them my loyalty and support. I sustain them with all my heart.

May we all be blessed with the ability to discern good from evil and have the courage and desire to be loyal to those principles which are righteous, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Henry D. Taylor, to whom you have just listened, is one of the Assistants to the Twelve Apostles, and formerly president of the California Mission. We shall now hear from Elder Levi Edgar Young of the First Council of Seventy. He will be followed by Elder S. Dilworth Young of the same Council.

ELDER LEVI EDGAR YOUNG

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren and sisters, we are all very glad to assemble in this great conference of the Church, and oh, the wonderful messages we have received, and the testimonies that strengthen our lives.

I wish to say a few words about President Joseph Young. My grandfather was chosen by the Prophet Joseph Smith, and when grandfather met the Prophet for the first time, the Prophet told him that the Lord had already a place for him in the priesthood.

Grandfather was a Methodist minister. He had become a preacher, going through the different parts of western Ohio, then crossing Lake Erie into Canada, holding meetings, preaching the Methodist beliefs. Then one morning he was holding a meeting, and he saw his brother, Brigham Young in the audience, and he could not understand it at first. Grandfather was the elder of the two. After the meeting, Brigham walked up to his brother, Joseph, and said, "Joseph, I have found the gospel. Come with me."

Sunday, October 11

Joseph immediately felt the truth of what his brother said, and taking him by the arm and bidding his congregation good-bye, they made their way back to Kirtland, Ohio, where Grandfather met the Prophet. He was baptized immediately, and within a few days the Seventy organization was made, and Grandfather found himself in the First Council of the Seventy. He was always so proud of it. He became a wonderful teacher and went among the people in a simple childlike manner. He was a great reader of the Bible and the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. He loved literature, and because of his prayers to God, he was able to grasp the meaning, and he used to say to the people: "That is a simple thought, isn't it?" And the way he said it, the Saints agreed, and it became known that the gospel of Jesus Christ is the greatest in thought of today, and yet so great that it becomes simple and pure—an ideal for the person who goes to God and prays for understanding.

Grandfather Young passed away in 1884, and then his son, Seymour, succeeded him. It is a story that becomes very personal, I realize, but one of the seventies asked if I would say something about Joseph Young in my address. He was a great reader, and he had come to know the story of Israel, and taught it to the people. He was a reader of literature, as I have said, especially English literature, and just after the Prophet Joseph Smith had asked that some of the people learn Greek and Latin, Grandfather was learning those languages.

I must not take too much time, but I will read these few words to you. "To learn is to bring into your being a thought that gives strength and a better understanding of the power of your own mind." That was what Grandfather used to teach. Go to your Bible again and turn to verse or chapter that you have already learned to love, and read it again. Pick out some noble lesson; learn the substance of its thought. Who wrote the words? Where are they found and why were they written? That is for us all—the words, when were they written and why?

In time, an incentive to learn more and more will be the result of our study. The beauty of it is that you are learning for yourself. You become your own teacher. Try this exercise every day for a few minutes and you will be surprised at the number of noble truths you will learn. The worth of this self-teaching is the habit of thought and attention it stimulates within us. The steadfast pursuit of such an ideal is the truest recreation that we can have, and is the road to a personal understanding of the gospel.

"My brethren and sisters," said Joseph Young one time, "if you can learn how to learn, you have acquired something that will make of you a real teacher. You have acquired a habit that will not only give you much joy every day, but will also strengthen your character and lead you on daily to greater truths and more abundant life."

It is our own study, with faith and prayer to God, that gives us strength, that gives us life and light; and therefore we are ready to become more devoted readers of the great Church works. Remember the words of Jesus: "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." (John 5:39.)

To know Christ is life eternal. To become like Christ is happiness everlasting. We know the steps that Jesus trod: obedience, devotion, purity, truthfulness, kindness, resistance of temptation, self-sacrifice. It was John Ruskin who wrote:

"He only is advancing in life whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into living peace."

And the men who have this life in them are the true lords and kings of the earth.

God bless us in this holy purpose of learning the gospel in its simplicity, for how true it is that the greatest thoughts become simple to our souls and spirits as we approach God by faith and prayer. I pray that we Seventies may all become wise and good teachers of the gospel. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder Levi Edgar Young, grandson of Joseph Young, who holds the same position as his grandfather as Senior President of the First Council of Seventy. We shall now hear from Elder S. Dilworth Young of the same Council. He will be followed by Elder Sterling W. Sill.

ELDER S. DILWORTH YOUNGOf the First Council of the Seventy*

It seems to me that there have been two themes in this conference. One is our love and devotion and our determination to serve the Lord Jesus Christ. The other is a great concern for our children. May I speak briefly on the second of these two themes? May I quote you a scripture, briefly?

"... inasmuch as parents have children in Zion . . . that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents." (D&C 68:25.)

That was quoted twice earlier in this conference. I would like to add that we should also teach children ethical living. I believe that the tendency of the times and the forces of evil around us are so great that unless we unite on our objectives, and obtain a program to which we can expose our children and have them unite with us, we can easily fail in this great project of keeping our children in the Church. Unity of ideals and purposes is hard to achieve. May I illustrate?

Many years ago I was invited to a high school to talk to a group of parents who were present on a "leadership week" basis. It was not connected with Brigham Young University but was a local affair. There was invited to accompany me, and to take part in this discussion, a psychologist from one of our colleges. We both went, and I was the first speaker. I can remember how hard I labored to convince these parents that if they wanted to have their children obey, they themselves would have to obey the principles which they espoused.

One of the subjects they brought up was the matter of driving cars when under age. Everybody knows that the state law is clear in this respect—sixteen years of age is the legal limit under which a child should not drive. Many fathers had been beset with importuning from their children. Many fathers and mothers had allowed their children to drive, even under legal age.

I expressed myself quite vehemently on the subject and said I thought it was wicked, really, for a parent either to set an example of breaking or allow a child to break the law—not because of that particular law being either good or bad,—but because the tendency to break law would be implanted in that child, and perhaps sometime he would choose to flaunt a law more serious and important.

My companion followed me, and this was his solution. He said: "I will tell you how I solved that problem in my family. My boy is fourteen and a half years of age. I took him down to the bureau where they issue licenses, told the folks he was sixteen, and got him a drivers' license so that he could drive legally on the highway."

Another scripture (this is from Paul): "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

"Honour thy father and thy mother (which is the first commandment with promise) that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

"And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." (Eph. 6:1-4.)

I think we might just as well recognize the fact that while we parents are "in for it," so to speak, if I might use a slang term, if we do not teach our children, I think the children are equally responsible to do a little for themselves to have respect for their parents, and to learn to obey their parents. It is a two-way thing. If parents are going to teach children, the children ought also to learn that they must be obedient to their parents.

I have another example. A certain man living in my town had a son. The son was invited to join a high school club. This high school club was one of a number. He wanted to have some social life with the other boys, I suppose, and after he talked to his father about it decided he would join. After a while there was to be an initiation.

He went to his father and said, "Father, I need some advice. I have heard in a roundabout way that they do things to you at these initiations. What would be your advice to me as to what I ought to do?"

The father said to him, "Do not let them do anything to you that will involve your dignity as my son or as a man. Do not let them compromise you in your priesthood, in your family, or in your good name."

So he went. The story comes to me that it was a cold winter's night, and the boys of the club, without chaperonage, had hired a cabin in the canyon near our town, and there they prepared to initiate their friends. I suppose the father had an anxious moment or two as he sat through the evening, wondering what was going to happen. The boy left him and took his sleeping bag and his sleeping equipment, because this was to be an all-night affair. The thermometer measured zero during the night.

About two o'clock in the morning the father said he heard the front door open. He got up to see who was entering the house without permission, and there stood his boy, sleeping bag slung on his back, overcoat on. He said, "What's the matter, Son?"

The boy said, "They tried it, Dad, and I fought them off and came home." He had walked nine miles in that zero weather. After he got warm, the boy retired. The father went upstairs, stood at the foot of his son's bed, and said, "You've done well. I am glad you are an obedient son."

Now, fathers must make decisions. Mothers must make decisions. But so must sons and daughters. If the sons and daughters do not make correct decisions, they are more at fault than their fathers and mothers, if their parents have taught them what is right. A most important purpose of this Church is to bring up children in righteousness and to keep parents righteous also.

I bear my witness that President McKay is a prophet of the Living God, and I bear witness also that his great concern, if I might be so bold as to interpret him, is for the youth of Zion, that they might grow in righteousness and carry the torch of this Church until it fills the earth.

I humbly pray we may find the right and the way to do it. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder S. Dilworth Young of the First Council of Seventy. Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve, will now address us, and he will be followed by Elder Hugh B. Brown.

ELDER STERLING W. SILL

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Recently a seat companion in an airplane was telling me something about the very interesting science of ballistics. He pointed out that when a bullet is shot through a gun barrel, the bullet receives a set of characteristic markings which will forever identify it with the particular gun barrel through which it is shot.

Our conversation then moved to another set of facts which might be called mental ballistics or spiritual ballistics.

That is, when an idea is passed through the mind, the mind receives a set of characteristic markings; for example, when one thinks negative thoughts, he gets a negative mind. If he thinks depraved thoughts, his mind becomes depraved. If he thinks damned thoughts, a damned mind will be the result. Solomon was speaking as a kind of ballistics expert when he said, "For as he [a man] thinketh in his heart so is he. . . ." (Prov. 23:7.)

In the course of our journey we were obliged to lay over for an hour between planes. During our wait we made an examination of the kind of literature that was being distributed through the magazine stand in the airport. We were impressed—as anyone must be impressed, with the fact that one of the most serious problems of our day, whether considered from the point of view of the church or the nation generally, is the very low-grade of ideas which makes up such a substantial part of our mental diet. William James once said, “The mind is made up by what it feeds upon.” We would not think of feeding our bodies contaminated food, and yet we often feed our minds and our souls with contaminated thoughts, and thereby we run contaminated emotions through our hearts, sometimes with fatal results.

One of our most urgent present-day needs is to houseclean our thinking. Because two opposite thoughts cannot co-exist in the mind at the same moment, the best way to get rid of undesirable thoughts is by antidoting them with good. The best way to get darkness out of a room is to fill it with light. The best way to kill the negative is to cultivate the positive, and the best way to improve our lives is to improve our thoughts. And one of the best ways to improve our thoughts is to develop a love of great literature.

Young Abraham Lincoln once said, “What I want to know is in books, and my best friend is the one who will get me a book I haven’t read.” And in one of the most authoritative voices of latter-day scripture the Lord said, “It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance.” (D&C 131:6.) And it is just as impossible to be saved by reading the kind of sex stories and murder mysteries that makes up such a large part of our contemporary literature.

This morning I would like to share with you some quotations having to do with the values of great ideas and stimulating ideals as they are made available to us through good books. Someone has said, “Books are among life’s most precious possessions. They are the most remarkable creation of man. Nothing else that man builds ever lasts. Monuments fall, civilizations perish, but books continue.”

“The perusal of a great book is as it were an interview with the noblest men of past ages who have written it.”

Charles Kingsley once said, “There is nothing more wonderful than a book. It may be a message to us from the dead, from human souls we never saw who lived perhaps thousands of miles away, and yet these little sheets of paper speak to us, arouse us, teach us, open our hearts and in turn open their hearts to us like brothers.”

“Without books God is silent, justice dormant, philosophy lame.”

John Milton said, “Books are not dead things but contain a certain potency of life in them as active as the soul whose progeny they are. They preserve as in a vial, the purest efficacy of the living intellect that bred them.”

Of course, the great literature of the world centers in the Holy Bible. The writings of Shakespeare alone contain some 550 Bible quotations and allusions. The works of Tennyson have 330 Bible references. Emerson’s works are filled with Bible ideas, and the New Testament records eighty-nine occasions when the Master himself quoted from the great scriptures.

Think of the effect that the Bible has had in individual lives. Looking backward we see young Abraham Lincoln lying before the open fire reading the Bible, and it is easy to follow the Bible influence in his life throughout his entire career. One Bible passage in the mind of another young man by the name of Joseph Smith helped to change the religious history of the world.

Or, think of the effect that Bible teaching has had in the rise and fall of nations. Most of the nations of the past have fallen because they have disobeyed divine law. Certainly this will continue to be a determining factor in every national success.

With keen insight Daniel Webster once made this prophetic statement, “If we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on prospering, but if we, or our children, shall neglect its teachings and its authority, no one can tell how suddenly some calamity may overwhelm us and bury all of our glory in profound obscurity.” We inscribe our coins with the motto “In God We Trust.” At least we ought to know the kind of God we are talking about.

It has been pointed out that, "We do not know what the future holds, but we do know who holds the future." And we may be sure that our national prosperity as well as our individual exaltation depends upon how well we utilize this great reservoir of spiritual truth. In our uncertain age we need the great scriptures as never before.

Our problem, of course, is that no matter how great our literature may be, even if we have the word of God himself spoken in our own day, it doesn't help us very much unless we know what was said and then govern ourselves accordingly.

The fifth chapter of the book of Moses recounts how God tried to teach the posterity of Adam to live the principles of the gospel. But Satan came among them saying, "Believe it not," and many believed it not. This same problem has been plaguing the world ever since.

One of our great Articles of Faith says, "We believe the Bible to be the word of God as far as it is translated correctly; we also believe the Book of Mormon to be the word of God." But not only is Satan among us saying, "Believe it not," he goes much further and also says, "Don't even read it." And readership surveys show that most people in and out of the Church are following that unfortunate direction. There are very few people who regularly read the Bible with a purpose, and the vast majority read it almost not at all.

It was reported that a Sunday School teacher once asked the members of her class if they knew what was in the Bible and one little girl held up her hand. The teacher said, "All right, Mary Jane, you stand up and tell the class what is in the Bible." And Mary Jane said, "There's a lock of baby's hair in it; some pressed violets from sister's beau are in it; and some of grandmother's love letters are in it." We ought to remember that there are some things in the Bible that Mary Jane apparently had never heard about.

First, the doctrines of eternal life are in it. The Bible teaches us about God, our Eternal Father, and what our relationship to him ought to be. Lord Calvin was once asked to name the greatest discovery that had ever been made, and he replied, "The greatest discovery that is ever made is when a man discovers God." Jesus indicated this same truth when he prayed, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." (John 17:3.)

Think of the advantage that young Timothy had over many of our children. Paul said to Timothy, "... from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." Then he said, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." (II Tim. 3:15-16.)

Think of the profit our lives would show if we could absorb the lessons of the great parables, or the philosophy of the Golden Rule, or the spirit of man's individual responsibility to God, or the stimulation contained in the doctrine of eternal progression. Or, suppose that we get God's answers to life's great questions including the one expressed by the rich young ruler when he asked, "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" (Luke 18:18.)

There are some important "thou shalt not's," in the Bible. The Lord has said that there are some things that we just must not do. Most of the Ten Commandments come in this category. The Bible tells us of forbidden fruit, of forbidden ground, of forbidden desires, and forbidden thoughts. As Cecil B. De Mille has pointed out, "It is not possible for us to break the Ten Commandments, we can only break ourselves against them."

There is a set of what someone has called "promissory notes" in the Bible. Every commandment has a blessing attached for faithful performance. But the Lord has said, "I, the Lord am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." (D&C 82:10.) He said, "I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing." (Ibid., 58:32.) That means that all blessings do not apply to us individually. Only those laws apply to us that we actually live; for example, the Lord said through Malachi, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . ." then he promised, "and prove me now herewith . . . if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Mal. 3:10.) But that does not apply to us, unless we pay our tithing.

Suppose that we tear out of the Bible those portions which do not apply to us personally. That is, if we do not keep the Sabbath day holy, or if we fail to observe the laws of honesty, chastity, temperance, repentance, and baptism; then we had better tear those parts out of the scripture, so we will not deceive ourselves unnecessarily by imagining that they apply to us. It would be interesting for each of us to find out just how big our own particular version of the Bible would be under these circumstances. Someone was once asked whether or not he was a Christian and he said he was, in spots. I suppose that it is better to be a Christian in spots than not to be a Christian at all. But we ought to keep in mind that when our Christianity comes in spots, then our blessings will come in spots also.

So far as I know, the most thrilling, exciting idea there is in the world is that if we choose, we may live every single one of these great commandments of God, and thereby we may make ourselves payees on every one of these scriptural promissory notes.

There is great inspiration in the Bible. Some time we express an important human need by saying, "If only I had someone to give me a lift occasionally, someone to look up to. Someone to stir up my faith and wind up my enthusiasm." The greatest need of most of us is just for some plain, honest-to-goodness inspiration. When you feel such a need, suppose that you turn to this great volume that someone has called, "God's Who's Who"; that is, the scriptures tell of the men who are important to God, and they are the ones who can best upgrade our lives. Thomas Carlyle once said, "You cannot look upon a great man without gaining something from him." Certainly you cannot study the lives of such towering figures as Abraham and Moses, Peter and Paul without being uplifted.

Through the Bible we may draw upon the accumulated experiences of some of the greatest men who ever lived. A consistent student of the scripture gains a new power to think, to feel, and to enjoy. It is a source of the most exquisite and enduring delight to have one's mind stored with worth-while thoughts, beautiful expressions, and stimulating ideals.

Or, we may relive the great events of the Bible in our own lives. Suppose, for example, that in imagination we go and stand upon Mount Sinai where to the accompaniment of the lightnings and thunders of that holy mountain God gave Moses the law. We see the great prophet as he came down from the presence of Jehovah with the glory of God resting upon him with such intensity that the people could not abide his presence.

Then in a moment we might choose to pass over the next 1500 years and go out onto the hills of Judea for the first Christmas, and with that angelic company celebrate the most important event that ever occurred upon this earth, the birth of the Savior of the world. Then suppose that we follow him during those thirty-three years while he walked the dusty roads of this earth and try to learn the lessons that his life teaches.

One of the most inspiring lines in all of the scripture was spoken by the mother of Jesus at the marriage feast at Cana. She said to the servants, "Whatsoever he sayeth unto you, do it." (John 2:5.) What an inspiring motto that would make for our individual lives! Or, suppose that in feeling we go with him into the Garden of Gethsemane while under the burden of our sins he sweat great drops of blood at every pore. Or, we might go and stand with uncovered heads and contrite hearts before the uplifted cross upon that barren Judean hill, while this thorn-crowned Sufferer paid the last full measure of the price of our redemption. How our appreciation would be increased and our lives sanctified by a sympathetic reliving of these great events which all took place in our interest. We must not blame the people of that day alone for putting Jesus to death upon the cross. We must also bear our share of guilt. It was your sins and mine that made it necessary for him to volunteer his own death. But now the greatest opportunity of our lives is to see to it that his atonement was not made in vain.

Emerson once touched upon one of our greatest present-day dangers when he said, "On the brink of an ocean of life and truth we are miserably dying. Sometimes we are furthest away when we are closest by." Think how near they were who lived contemporaneously with Jesus. He walked among them. They heard his teachings. They knew of his miracles, and yet they were so far away. When Satan came among them saying, "Believe it not," they pronounced their own doom upon themselves by saying, "His blood be upon us and our children." (Matt. 27:25.) And so it has been, and so it may be with us.

We are so near. We have the great scriptures. We have the judgment of time shining upon the life of Christ. The gospel has been restored in a fullness never before known in the world. We have the written testimony of many witnesses, both ancient and modern, and yet if we "believe it not" we may be so far away. Even in this great age of wonders and enlightenment, Satan is still inducing us to mark our souls with the contamination of inferior thoughts, whereas the greatest opportunity of our lives is to read more and study more and believe more and live more, that word of God which is still able to make us wise unto salvation.

One of the most thrilling accomplishments that I can think of, is that as a Church and as a nation we may aspire to say out of a full understanding, "We believe the Bible to be the word of God." May we so order our lives that this great accomplishment may be brought about, I pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Twelve. Elder Hugh B. Brown of the Council of the Twelve, will now address us.

ELDER HUGH B. BROWN

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My brethren and sisters, and I hope our friends, who are present and who are listening in, who are not members of the Church, will permit me to include them in that salutation, "brothers and sisters," because we believe in the brotherhood of men under the Fatherhood of God, and that Fatherhood which is universal.

Although I come to this assignment semiannually, it is always humbling and sometimes almost overwhelming. But it is reassuring to know that one has the sympathy and prayers of this great congregation and, we hope, the interest of an even larger audience of friendly listeners who are attending conference by means of radio and television.

We are mindful of the unseen audience and prayerfully attempt to assist all who seek a better understanding of some phases of what has been called the "Phenomenon of Mormonism."

In the past, unfortunately, when discussing basic religious questions, it was more difficult to find common ground of understanding than when considering, for instance, science or philosophy. The prejudice of the past closed some minds to truth and made communication impossible. Victor Hugo promised that "A day will come when the only battlefield will be the market open to commerce and the mind open to new ideas." Thank the Lord that day is dawning, at least in our western world. As A. Powell Davies said, "The world is too dangerous for anything but truth, and too small for anything but brotherhood."

I should like to enter a plea for friendship, understanding, brotherhood, and tolerance, all so badly needed in our confused and troubled world. In one of our Articles of Faith we claim for ourselves, and freely accord to all men, the untrammelled right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience.

Intolerance, one of the bitter fruits of ignorance and bigotry, has plagued the world from the beginning and has been responsible for much of its sorrow and misery. Maurice Samuel, defender of the Jews, wrote in The Professor and the Fossil:

"For all peoples, are, alas, in the habit of killing their prophets and teachers. The English martyred their protestant teachers (having failed to martyr Wycliffe they desecrated his corpse), the French martyred Joan of Arc, the Bohemian princes betrayed John Huss. If these do not rank among the world's greatest, Socrates, put to death by the Athenians, does."

When we think of historic intolerance, two names come immediately to mind. In chronological order, but not in the order of importance, they are Socrates of Athens and Jesus of Nazareth. They, of course, cannot be compared, but their experiences illustrate the subject.

As we read in "Great Books of the Western World," the first named gave to Plato and Aristotle their lofty inspiration, and the name of Socrates has come down through the centuries as the most virtuous man of his time. Yet he was convicted of impiety and immorality, and he was condemned to die—mercifully by hemlock.

The second, the only perfect person who ever lived, took upon himself the sins of the world and suffered the ignominy of crucifixion—to him more agonizing than physical pain. He is now, after nearly twenty centuries, supreme above all others in moral grandeur and to millions is revered as the Only Begotten Son of God, the Savior of the world.

These two, and many others since their time, were rejected by their contemporaries because they dared to question current belief, were impatient of the status quo, and pioneered new areas of thought and teaching.

Phillips Brooks reminds us that there are different brands of tolerance. He named six as follows:

"First, the tolerance of pure indifference. We may be tolerant because we do not care, because the issue at stake does not concern us.

"Second, the tolerance of policy. We may be tolerant because we think we would lose more than we gain by fighting the man or the measure.

"Third, the tolerance of helplessness. We may be tolerant because we realize that the enemy holds the field and that resistance will be futile.

"Fourth, the tolerance of pure respect for man. We may be tolerant because we respect even a man's right to think wrong, because we agree with Voltaire when he wrote to Helvetius, 'I wholly disapprove of what you say, but will defend to the death your right to say it.'

"Fifth, the tolerance of spiritual sympathy. We may be tolerant because we feel a spiritual comradeship with the man whose purpose is fine even if his proposition is false.

"Sixth, the tolerance of an enlarged view of truth. We may be tolerant because we have come to realize that truth is larger than any one man's conception of it, even if we are the one man in question."

The first three are mean; the last three magnificent.

The early members of the Mormon Church were forced to drink to its bitter dregs from the cup of prejudice and intolerance. They were mobbed, dispossessed of their homes and properties, beaten, imprisoned, banished, and some of them, including their leaders, were murdered; the main charge against them being that they were unorthodox, dared to question the teachings of other churches, and claimed new revelation.

John Stuart Mill, in his well-known essay on liberty, said:

"I cannot refrain from adding to these examples of the little account commonly made of human liberty, the language of downright persecution which breaks out from the press of this country whenever it feels called on to notice the remarkable phenomenon of Mormonism."

Mill further called attention to the fact that such persecution, far from being in any way countenanced by the principle of liberty, was a direct infraction of that principle and was a mere riveting of the chains of one half of the community and an emancipation of the other from reciprocity of obligation toward them.

History shows that not only individuals and smaller groups, but also governments and powerful church organizations have been guilty of cruel intolerance toward those who differ with them. The alleged universal church resorted to violent acts of intolerance and went to almost unbelievable extremes in their attempts to enforce adherence to the orthodox view. By persecution, torture, expulsion, and extermination of so-called heretics they sought to stifle inquiry and investigation, as though men could by fire and sword be compelled to profess certain doctrines. The remarkable thing is that they who first broke the yoke of that church were themselves unwilling to permit differences of religious opinion as soon as they became established. Unbridled power often breeds intolerance and leads to tyranny.

The Christlike life is always a combination of earnest, personal conviction and generous regard for the other man's opinion. Dedication to and defense of truth never require or justify breaking the second commandment to love our fellow men. A divine code was given by revelation for the guidance of all who exercise authority.

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness and meekness, and by love unfeigned;

"By kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile—

"Reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy;

"That he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death." (D&C 121:41-44.)

However, the Church must not condone evil or wrongdoing in the name of tolerance. It must not acquiesce or become an accessory, even by silence, when error and sin are arrayed against truth and righteousness. We must be on guard against alien ideologies and subtle, subversive concepts, leading to immoral conduct and apostasy. Whenever symptoms of apostasy appear in propaganda or conduct, remedial measures are applied. But when counsel, admonition, and instruction fail, the Church has a duty to its members to take positive action and either heal or amputate malignant growths.

The Savior said: "... if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell." (Matthew 5:29.) But the Church has no jurisdiction outside its own membership; nor does any church have jurisdiction over any other. Various churches stand in much the same relation to each other as private persons among themselves. As John Locke said long ago:

"If any one of the churches has power of treating the other ill, which of them is it to whom that power belongs, and by what right? It will be answered undoubtedly that it is the orthodox church which has the right of authority over the erroneous and heretical. This is, he says, in great and specious words to say just nothing, for every church is orthodox to itself. The decision as to which is right is a question which belongs to the supreme judge of all men."

Some traditionally orthodox churches have seemed to be concerned primarily with the perpetuation of conventional beliefs, formulas, rituals, and institutions. They require meticulous conformity to traditional modes of belief and ceremony. Their chief objective seems to have been to maintain the status quo.

But the Church of Jesus Christ, whenever organized on the earth, whether during the brief sojourn of the Savior in the Meridian of Time and the subsequent activities of his apostles, or since the restoration in the fulness of times, has always subjected traditional beliefs and ritual to searching criticism in the light of continued revelation and ever-increasing knowledge. Its inspired appraisals of human and spiritual values go directly to the core of individual and social living here and now with a constant reminder of the effect of such living on the life hereafter. Its latter-day organization was preceded by a sweeping indictment of sectarianism and the creeds of the time and a proclamation of a new revelation from God. Criticism of traditional beliefs and ritual has often been met by persecution rather than sound argument.

When Jesus was on the earth, he was frequently met with objectors and hecklers who, looking backward, appealed to the law of Moses. His characteristic forward-looking reply was, "It has been said by them of old . . . but I say unto you. . . ." In other words, he spoke with divine authority. He was concerned as we are with the individual, with the social order, and with establishing the kingdom of God on earth preparatory to the coming of the kingdom of heaven. He invited his listeners to put his teachings to the test of actual experience, saying if any man would do his will he would know of the doctrine. That is a continuing promise to all men everywhere.

In the spirit of friendship and brotherhood we ask our listeners to consider prayerfully our message, put our doctrines to the test of which Jesus spoke, and we promise you that you shall know whether our doctrine is of God or merely of men.

Briefly the message of Mormonism is that the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is the true God, the Messiah of the New Testament; that the King James version of the Holy Bible is in fact the word of God and that Jesus of Nazareth is in fact the Christ; that the prophecies recorded in the Bible concerning the last days are now in the course of fulfilment; that a new dispensation of the gospel has been given to men and that the kingdom of God is now divinely organized on earth preparatory to the coming of the kingdom of heaven. This message, if it be true, and to its truth we humbly testify, is the most important message that has come to this world since the resurrection and ascension of the Savior of the world. This may seem to some to be an extravagant statement but it refers to a visit of the same glorified being who ascended into heaven with his resurrected body in the presence of his followers and of angels who promised he would come again. He appeared to men in our time preparatory to his promised second coming when he is to rule and reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

We declare that God has intervened in the affairs of men in anticipation of the final struggle against the hosts of Hades, the Anti-Christ, who are organized and marshaled for war against religion and God and all the principles of freedom, justice, love, and tolerance for which the Savior died.

Coupled with this declaration of faith in a personal God and in his nearness to this world is a re-affirmation of the Biblical doctrine that man was created in the image of God and therefore has a potential godlike status, with capacity to live and progress forever. We believe in the essential dignity of man, that he was intended by his Creator to be free and not a slave to any man or nation. We shall never surrender to the belief that man is a soulless device made to serve a machine or a state. We believe that his freedom is, next to life itself, his most precious gift. In fact, man is willing to sacrifice his life to secure and preserve freedom.

We believe in the immortality of the soul; that death is integral to life, a phase of life, its continuance, not its end; and that men who keep the commandments of God need not fear death, for we shall, as Tennyson said, meet our Pilot face to face when that which drew from out the boundless deep turns again home and we have "Crossed the Bar."

Grant us peace, oh Lord, the peace which comes from understanding, from tolerance and brotherhood, from love of our fellow men and love of thee, the Lord. May thy kingdom come and thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

The great declaration and impressive testimony to which you have just listened was given by Elder Hugh B. Brown, a member of the Council of the Twelve.

The closing song will be given by the Tabernacle Choir, "Crossing the Bar," part of which was quoted, conducted by Richard P. Condie. The closing prayer will be offered by Elder Berkeley L. Bunker, formerly president of the Southern States Mission, following which this Conference will stand adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

Brethren and sisters, in bringing to a conclusion this sixth session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference, we express our sincere appreciation to the owners and managers of the many television and radio stations who have offered their facilities to us this morning. We are grateful for this wonderful public service so generously extended. Eighteen major cities in the West have carried the proceedings of this Conference through radio and television. According to a survey that has been made, it is estimated that there have been about one million people listening in this morning.

We are grateful also for the attendance of all who are present in the Tabernacle, in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall, and in other gatherings where the Conference is seen and heard.

Brother Kimball has handed me the following—we have H. Aldous Dixon, our Congressman; David S. King, companion in Congress; our Governor, George Dewey Clyde; our Mayor, Adiel F. Stewart; educators, Dr. Ernest L. Wilkinson of the Brigham Young University; Dr. Homer Durham, Vice-President of the University of Utah, representing President Olpin who is absent in Japan now; Dr. Daryl Chase, president of the Utah State University; Dr. John L. Clarke, president of Ricks College; Dr. M. Lynn Bennion, Superintendent of the public schools here in Salt Lake City; and undoubtedly many others, to all of whom we extend a most hearty welcome and I am sure you have been thrilled by the exercises and testimonies of this day.

We are pleased, also, to welcome our stake presidencies here in such attendance, and bishoprics of the wards from all over the world, temple presidents, general auxiliary officers. We extend a cordial welcome to all. It is glorious to meet with you and have you partake of the spirit of this great Conference, and to let us partake of your spirit by your presence.

The beautiful flowers which you see arranged on the rostrum and pulpit have come from Hawaii. It is a good illustration of the convenience of transportation in this day. They are sent with the love and greetings of the members of the Church in the Oahu Stake. We express appreciation and thanks to them. Our thoughts and best wishes throughout this Conference have been enhanced by the fragrance and beauty of these flowers.

We desire to mention the General Priesthood Meeting which was held last evening, the fifth session of the General Conference, held here in the Salt Lake Tabernacle, with overflow meetings in the Assembly Hall and Barratt Hall. The proceedings were relayed by closed circuit to members of the Priesthood assembled in 204 Church buildings from Coast to Coast and in Canada, 51 more buildings than we had during the April Conference. It was reported at the conclusion of our meeting that 48,364 members of the Priesthood were in attendance.

We have here several telegrams from those who were listening stating that the transmission was perfect, and that they enjoyed very much the kindness of the General Authorities in making that arrangement.

This morning at 7:30, Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve was the speaker over CBS Church-of-the-Air Broadcast on KSL Radio. I hope all of you heard his sermon on "Ultimate Objectives."

The singing for this morning's session has been furnished, as you all know, by the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie directing. We appreciate it and they know it, and we express heart-felt appreciation to these men and women who give so generously of their time and talents and who have brought such honor to themselves and to the Church in their excellent singing. They will conclude this service now with the song, "Crossing the Bar."

Elder Berkeley L. Bunker will offer the closing prayer, and we will adjourn until two o'clock this afternoon.

The concluding number by the Tabernacle Choir was "Crossing the Bar."

Elder Berkeley L. Bunker, formerly president of the Southern States Mission, offered the closing prayer.

Conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p.m.

THIRD DAY

AFTERNOON MEETING

The seventh and concluding session of the Conference was held in the great Tabernacle Sunday afternoon, October 11, at 2 o'clock.

President David O. McKay presided, and conducted the services, as he had done at all the previous general sessions of the Conference.

The Tabernacle Choir furnished the singing for this session of the Conference, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, assisted by Jay E. Welch, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ console.

President David O. McKay:

Members of the Church are convened in the Tabernacle on Temple Square in Salt Lake City in the concluding and seventh session of the One Hundred Twenty-Ninth Semi-Annual Conference of the Church. For those who are unable to enter the building, and there seems to be hundreds, we announce that these services are being broadcast in the Assembly Hall and in the Barratt Hall over television.

We welcome the service men who came yesterday and also the fifty-six Marines who came in this morning from El Toro, Camp Pendleton, California.

These services are also being broadcast as a public service by television and radio stations throughout the West. The names of these stations were announced to the television and radio audiences at the beginning of the meeting. To the owners and managers of these various stations we again express our sincere appreciation for this wonderful public service so generously extended.

The music for this session will be rendered by the Tabernacle Choir, with Richard P. Condie conducting, and Alexander Schreiner at the organ. We shall begin this service by the Tabernacle Choir singing, "Be Still and Know That I Am God," with Jay E. Welch, Assistant Conductor, directing. The opening prayer will be offered by Elder Junius M. Jackson, formerly president of the New England Mission.

The Tabernacle Choir sang the anthem, "Be Still and Know That I Am God," with Jay E. Welch, Assistant Conductor of the Choir, directing.

Elder Junius M. Jackson, formerly president of the New England Mission, offered the invocation.

President David O. McKay:

Elder Junius M. Jackson, formerly president of the New England Mission, offered the invocation. The Tabernacle Choir will now sing, "I Know that My Redeemer Lives," conducted by Richard P. Condie. After the singing, Elder Ezra Taft Benson will address us.

---

Singing by the Choir, "I Know That My Redeemer Lives."

President David O. McKay:

Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve will be our first speaker this afternoon. He will be followed by Elder Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of Seventy.

ELDER EZRA TAFT BENSON

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My beloved brethren and sisters, humbly and gratefully I approach this sobering responsibility. First, may I say that I welcome and sustain with all my heart, my good friend and brother as a member of the Council of the Twelve. President Howard W. Hunter can look forward to the sweetest association known among men in this world. God bless him.

With Sister Benson and two of our daughters, I returned to the shores of this blessed land last Friday. Two weeks ago today we spent a glorious Sabbath with the Saints and friends in West Berlin. A week ago today we spent an inspiring Sabbath with Saints and friends in Helsinki, Finland.

It is truly good to be home, and it is an inspiration and an uplift to attend this great conference. How I wish and pray that everyone of the millions of good people, citizens of Russia and other communistic-dominated nations, could sit through one of the general conferences of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Sometime I would like to say more on this subject of communism. It would be inappropriate for me to do so now. I feel a bit like Alma of old, when he said, "O that I were an angel, and could have the wish of mine heart." (Alma 29:1.)

My brethren and sisters, I commend to you the counsel and the warnings that have been issued in the instructions of President David O. McKay and President J. Reuben Clark, Jr., on this subject during this conference. I would add only one word, a word which I hope we will never forget. Any system which denies the existence and power of God, which robs men of their God-given free agency, and which destroys the basic institution of the home, is of the evil one. No true Latter-day Saint can ever become a part of any such system.

I know there are difficult days ahead, politically, economically, socially, and spiritually. But God rules this world. He is at the helm. May he help us to be prepared for any eventuality.

We live in a choice land. But we live in a time of anxiety—a time when the basic concepts and values of a free society, which we cherish, are being seriously challenged. This challenge is not only from godless, imperial communism abroad, but also from dangerous ideologies and practices here at home.

It is true that outwardly everything seems prosperous. More people are working at higher wages and enjoying a better standard of living than ever before in the history of our country. More of our people are enjoying travel, cultural and educational opportunities than any time in our history. New churches are being erected at a rapid rate, and an increasing number of people are church-affiliated. Our nation is at peace.

All these things should give a feeling of stability, inner assurance, and a sense of satisfaction, but they do not seem to do so. Discontent among our people, nationwide, seems to be high. We view with alarm the ever-rising level of public and private debt and the threat of inflation. We note with fear the increase in crime, juvenile delinquency, alcoholism, drug addiction, and sex offenses.

We pay lip service to the principles embodied in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution without realizing what they are and the danger of ignoring them. We demand more and more of government, so "government grows larger all the while, marking the stampede away from personal responsibility which occurs at all levels of life." We passively contribute to the spirit and demoralizing philosophy of "something for nothing."

Because sin is rampant and increasing, I make bold enough to call this nation to repentance. Only through righteousness is there safety for our beloved country. There is no other way.

Today I speak out against one of the insidious and rapidly increasing threats against our young people.

As a Church we have always placed great emphasis on youth. Our young men, if worthy, receive the priesthood at twelve years of age. We enlist a higher percentage of our young boys in scouting than any other group. We have a comprehensive program, combining Sunday School, Primary, MIA, priesthood activities, and weekday seminary classes, to guide the activities of our youth, instill within them a testimony of the gospel, and help them to grow up to be good citizens and faithful members of the Church. Yes, we recognize full well that our boys and girls, our young men and women, are our greatest asset. They are our hope.

The youth of today are the trustees of the future. Sooner than we think the leadership of the Church and the future of our country will rest in their hands. It is our grave obligation to help prepare American youth to be worthy trustees, to help them fit themselves for their coming responsibilities. This is the obligation of every adult citizen.

We have confidence in our youth, yes. But we know they face troubled times. They are beset by many temptations—temptations, which, if not new, are certainly more blatant, more prevalent, than ever before.

We know how important it is for our youth to possess clean minds in healthy clean bodies. "... be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord." (Isaiah 52:11.) Moral purity is an eternal principle. The Spirit of God "cannot dwell in an unclean tabernacle." Purity is life-giving; impurity is deadly. God's holy laws cannot be broken with impunity. Great nations have fallen when they became morally corrupt, because the sins of immorality left their people scarred and misshapen creatures who were unable to face the challenge of their times.

I speak about one aspect of this question of morality which affects all our youth. There are forces at work in this country today which are victimizing many thousands of our youth, undermining their moral fiber, poisoning their minds. There is being spread about in this land a veritable flood of obscene photographs, movie films "for private showings," filthy books, and so-called comics that drip with depravity and obscenity.

Every day some 200,000 circulars are flooding our cities and towns, seeking to sell obscenity and filth to the American people. It is a $500,000,000 a year business and growing fast. The sales volume of mail-order obscenity has doubled in the last five years.

Who are the targets of this drive? Three-fourths of these circulars are sent to our youth. Our school children are the targets, our boys and girls, particularly between the ages of eleven and sixteen.

The United States Post Office department estimates that between 700,000 and a million children in American homes will receive unsolicited obscene and pornographic literature through the mails this year.

Our boys and girls need not have shown any interest in this vile stuff. It is thrust into their hands by racketeers who go to great lengths to get the names of our children. They buy mailing lists from standard sources. They get names from high school yearbooks and classbooks. They set up fake business "fronts." A boy sends away for a model airplane, a baseball bat, a toy automobile, a stamp collection, often advertised at bargain prices—and the muck merchant has his name and address on his list.

Then the solicitations begin.

The smut dealers last year mailed out an estimated fifty million sales circulars under the protection of first-class mail. Some of these circulars are in the form of pseudo-personal letters in girl's handwriting, signed with a girl's name.

The smut dealers go farther. They even seek to involve our youth as salesmen of their trash. One scheme is to sell our youngsters playing cards decorated with lewd pictures for perhaps $3.00 a deck—to be resold at 25c or 50c a card.

Many children fall into the trap of ordering obscene material. Traffic with children is a major and growing part of the filth merchants' business.

Postal inspectors in New York City recently raided one dealer in pornography. They confiscated seventeen tons of highly obscene printed and filmed materials. They found mailing lists containing the names of thousands of high school graduates taken from high school yearbooks.

Some parents are almost frantic because of their inability to keep this unwanted material out of their homes. A mother in a midwestern state writes to the Post Office department as follows:

"Enclosed you will find the filth that has been sent to my son for the past year. He is fourteen. Think what this could do to him, and how many other innocent boys and girls he could corrupt by passing this literature on to them. Can't you do something to stop it?"

Another parent in the East writes:

"Ads like this come to my minor son at the rate of one or two a week."

A lawyer tells how his son answered an innocuous appearing ad in a national magazine and received a batch of obscene pictures and an order blank for more. His name is on the mailing list, and nearly every week an ad for pornographic material comes in the mail. The lawyer says, "My wife and I are beside ourselves as to how to stop this flood of mail."

Sunday, October 11

Third Day

Now, what are the effects of this material on our youth?

Juvenile delinquency has become a blot on our country. Gangs roam the streets of some of our big cities. Arrests of juveniles for major crimes rose about ten percent last year. Authorities have observed on repeated occasions that the obscenity racket is a prime contributor to the increase in juvenile delinquency.

FBI figures show that more boys of eighteen and nineteen are now committing the heinous crime of rape, than males in any other age group. The percentage of convictions of boys under twenty has grown substantially in recent years.

Now, of course, some people will argue that many children exposed to these pictures and books never become delinquent. This argument has no merit at all. Your child may be exposed to tuberculosis or polio and never contract either disease. Is this a reason for deliberately exposing children to infection? Of course not.

It is true that people go wrong for many reasons. Children become delinquent in part because of such factors as broken homes, drinking parents, indifferent parents, and bad companions. But the wish is father of the deed. Thought precedes action. We cannot help being influenced by what we read and what we see. A dirty book, a filthy picture, may be the trigger that sets off a terrible crime.

Reports from police chiefs and sheriffs indicate the tie-up. Here are typical statements from city officials in Massachusetts, Colorado, and Pennsylvania: "Teen-ager criminally assaults 16-year-old girl. Search of his room revealed 50 pornographic pictures beneath his mattress."

"Student molesting two teen-age girls found to have pornographic literature in glove compartment of his car."

Let me quote from a report of a Senate subcommittee that has studied this problem. The report says in part:

"There is a peculiar resemblance to narcotics addiction in exposure of juveniles to pornography. There is the same pattern of progression. Once initiated into a knowledge of the unnatural, the impressionable young mind with the insatiable curiosity characteristic of those reaching for maturity inevitably hunts for something stronger, something with more 'jolt,' something imparting a greater thrill.

"The dealer in pornography is acutely aware of this progressive facet; his array of material to feed this growing hunger is carefully geared to the successive stages. Like the peddler of narcotics, his only interest is to insure that his customers are 'hooked.' He knows that once they are 'hooked' they will continue to pay and pay."

These are some of the direct results of the smut campaign. There are indirect results, too. Our children, our wives, our friends, may be the horrified victims of criminals who are triggered by obscene materials.

Well, what is the response of the smut publishers and dealers to these facts?

Their attitude is summed up in some such sentiment as this: My job is to make a dollar, not to look out for unstable children or adults. No wonder J. Edgar Hoover has said:

"The activities of the muck merchants are national in scope. Your child can easily become one of their victims."

What are we going to do about it? Shall we fold our arms, shake our heads dismally, and do nothing?

Shall we permit organized crime to continue and extend the obscenity racket—already a half billion dollar a year business—and make it really big and immeasurably more vicious?

Shall we allow more and more of our children to be victimized, allow them to be "hooked" by this menace to clean and right living, this threat to moral purity?

Shall we sit by and watch sex crimes grow and grow in number and violence?

Shall we permit these cheap peddlers of filth to undermine the moral fiber of our youth, the moral strength of our nation?

I believe I know what our pioneer forefathers would have answered to these questions.

And I think I know what you and other responsible citizens will answer. They would have said, as we say today: "Forbid it, Almighty God. We shall not sit by any longer. We shall act in defense of decency and order and in the name of our country."

Our government is striking with all the weapons it possesses against the obscenity menace. Until last year, purveyors of filth had to be prosecuted at the point from which they mailed their smut. This was a severe handicap to prosecution. Courts, notably in Los Angeles and New York, where the great bulk of the mail-order business in obscenity originates, handed down soft rulings on obscenity. Few offenders were convicted, and these usually paid a small fine and began operating again.

Legislation passed by Congress last year has now made it possible to prosecute where the mail is received.

The first case prosecuted under the new law was in Boise, Idaho. A man and his wife, who were mailing extremely obscene material from the west coast, were given ten years in jail, plus a heavy fine.

A Virginia man and his wife dealing in obscenity were sentenced to a year in the Federal Penitentiary and fined $2,000. In Louisiana, two more dealers in filth were given a year and eighteen months in jail respectively.

This is a good start. But it is only a start.

If government is to make full use of the new legislation, it needs and must have the co-operation of all our citizens and especially of all our parents.

The privacy of the mail is a basic American right. It will not be violated. The Post Office cannot open first-class mail even if it is certain the envelope contains obscene material. The Post Office can act only if parents supply the evidence after the mail has been delivered. Here is what we as parents can do, what we must do:

1. If mail coming to your home is obscene, or solicits the sale of obscene materials: save all the material, including the covering envelope; put it promptly in the hands of the local postmaster either personally or by mail.

2. Do not wait for this danger to strike your home. Join with other parents, teachers, local law enforcement officers, and civic groups in drawing public attention to the menace of this traffic in filth.

3. Work closely with teachers in your community to detect obscene materials in the possession of children and to determine the origin of such material.

4. Join with other parents and teachers in making a special effort to impress upon the community the fact that even children who are never exposed to the obscene material may be victimized by sex criminals.

5. Co-operate with the schools in taking positive, long-range steps to help children develop wholesome interests in good literature and art—making it readily available to them at home, in the classroom, through literary and library clubs, and through student groups.

6. Help civic groups bring about the establishment of a decent literature committee, broadly representative of the interested civic organizations in the community.

7. Get local judges, law enforcement officers, and representatives of the police force to talk before civic groups telling what they, as guardians of the community's laws, know of the relationship between the traffic in obscene literature and juvenile delinquency and sex crimes.

We must defend our youth, in the interests of this nation which God has blessed above all others. We must rise to this task, stand up, and be counted on the side of decency. We must show by our lives and actions that we possess the virtues that made America great.

There will be those who will cry "censorship" and "suppressing of freedom of information." To these people there does not seem to be any difference between liberty and license—but there is a real difference. It is not a denial of liberty to forbid the sale of narcotics or alcohol to children, and neither is it a denial of liberty to ban the distribution of filthy, obscene, character destroying materials.

There has developed in this country, I am sorry to say, a species of so-called "broadmindedness" which tolerates anything and everything. It is high time right-thinking citizens showed they are fed up with such false broadmindedness. I, for one, fail to see where this so-called "tolerance" of evil has made society any better or individuals any happier. We cannot steer a safe course without a compass. We cannot build an enduring society except on principles of righteousness.

As Dr. Daniel A. Poling recently wrote in the Christian Herald, "It's time for a new crusade," a crusade for decency.

The youth of the Church and of America deserve that we parents live up to our responsibilities in this regard.

Many centuries ago, a celebrated Roman matron, Cornelia, was asked by an acquaintance to display her jewels. Cornelia called to her children to step forward. "These are my jewels," she said.

The youth of the Church and of America are our jewels. Let us prize them as they deserve. A clean America will be a strong America, a secure America, a prosperous America, a peaceful America, a free America, an America that will continue to merit God's blessings in the future as it has in the past.

God grant it may be so, I humbly pray in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just heard Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve. Elder Antoine R. Ivins of the First Council of Seventy will now speak to us. He will be followed by Elder Gordon B. Hinckley.

ELDER ANTOINE R. IVINS

Of the First Council of the Seventy

My brethren and sisters, you will pardon me if I say it has been a nervous wait. Twenty-eight years ago, at the October conference, I was sustained as one of your Presidents of the seventies quorum. That means that this is the fifty-sixth time I have stood here to bear my testimony to you. I have to confess that while I like to bear my testimony, the overwhelming sense of responsibility is almost more than I can stand. I seek therefore, your interest and your faith and your prayers that perchance I may drop a word or two that may be comforting to us.

I am happy this afternoon to be one of you, to be engaged in this wonderful work of the Church. I am especially happy and grateful this afternoon for the privilege of bringing my wife with me to this meeting. Some of you will remember that, just a little more than two years ago, reporters came over from the Deseret News and asked for a story they could publish in the event she would pass away. Through the faith and prayers of the Brethren, through her faith and courage, she is still with us, and for the whole time that I have been one of your servants, she has stood by my side and traveled with me being a great help and support and a blessing to the people with whom I have ministered. For this I am truly thankful. I am thankful also, regardless of the dangers that threaten us and the unholy conditions that prevail, that I live in this nation.

On Saturday morning, this body exercised the privilege of expressing approval and acceptance of the officers listed by the Presidency of the Church. It was the voice of the people—President Clark expressed it, as the Doctrine and Covenants does, as the common consent of the people. That is basic in the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—the voice of the people. If we are going to meet, successfully, the conditions of which we have just heard, it must be because the voice of the people shall rise up in defense of honesty, integrity, righteousness, and correct living conditions. I think it is within the power of the people to bring that about once the voice of the people could be so aroused.

Then I remember the two years or more I studied the constitution of a nation in which I was resident, a constitution which was not, as ours, the expression of the body of the people, but a constitution which was gathered out of ours and the French Constitution and adapted to that nation. It has taken more than a hundred years for those people to sense the import of their constitution.

I once heard a man say, "Democracy is not what is written on a piece of paper. It is the expression of what is within the heart of men." Our country came into existence just that way, in that the power is resident in the people and that every right and every privilege that is given to our officers is a concession, a direct concession from the people.

I remember reading about when in the Magna Charta, the right of kings was circumscribed in Great Britain, the voice of the people determined that certain things only could be exercised, even by men who claimed that they presided by divine right, the divine right of kings.

That voice, brethren and sisters, has come down to us. It was the voice which produced the Constitution of the United States of America, the grandest country in the world, and with all its shortcomings, and with all the evil that there is in it, I believe that it comes the nearest to being a civil government that is in harmony with the principles that govern in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. With us the power is resident in the priesthood and in the voice of the people. If we could bring our priesthood to a proper appreciation of its function, its privilege, we could determine these things. Just think that last evening nearly 50,000 holders of the priesthood scattered all over these United States, heard the proceedings of the priesthood meeting. If each one of that 50,000 persons who heard could rise up in righteous indignation against this curse of which we have heard, it would in a great measure be reduced if not eradicated. [See conference address of Ezra Taft Benson]

I fear, brethren and sisters, that we approach these topics with too much apathy. We hardly realize the power that there is in the organization which we have. Even though it be small in numbers compared to the total population of the United States, it could exercise a tremendous influence, and does, as a matter of fact, for righteousness throughout the country.

I wish that we could appreciate it, that we could fully magnify it. Some of us are very late in coming to an understanding of our privileges. Just after the morning meeting I was made very happy by a brother who came to me and told me that his father had recently been able, eager, and willing to gather his family together with him and have his endowments in the temple. That man has been a friend of mine over the years. Just why he never came along before, I do not know. I know that I have loved him and honored him and befriended him in our association over the years, and I am happy beyond expression to realize that he now is assuming a part of his rights in the Melchizedek Priesthood of the Church.

We have so many of those men, brethren and sisters, who are slow in understanding the advantages of it. If we could add that hundred thousand men to the number who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood now, there is no question but that we could influence, very greatly, a reduction in these things of which we have heard.

I do not care to talk a long while this afternoon, brethren and sisters, but I do want to express to you my love and appreciation for our leaders and to hope that I may always be able to sustain them and uphold their hands, and may I be able yet many years to mingle with you brethren and sisters and do what I can to help with the organizations of the Church with which we deal.

May God bless us all, may he strengthen us, give us courage, may he give us a proper understanding and appreciation of the source of power in these United States, and the reasons for the Constitution, so that we may be willing to support it and sustain it, I pray, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

He to whom we have just listened is Elder Antoine R. Ivins, a member of the First Council of Seventy. Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, Assistant to the Twelve, will be our next speaker.

ELDER GORDON B. HINCKLEY

Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles

My dear brethren and sisters, I seek the direction of the Lord that the things I say may be in harmony with the inspirational things to which we have listened these past three days.

This has been a marvelous conference. I have missed one voice. That is the voice of President Stephen L. Richards. His wisdom, his kindly persuasion, his unflinching courtesy were always an inspiration to me, and I shall be eternally grateful to him.

I rejoice in the appointment of President Henry D. Moyle as a member of the First Presidency. I am grateful for the opportunity of working under his direction in the great missionary program of the Church. I pledge him my loyalty and my energy.

I rejoice likewise in the appointment of Howard W. Hunter to the Council of the Twelve.

I am satisfied that the Lord guides this work. I echo the words of the Psalmist: "... he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep." (Psalm 121:4.)

I wish to say a few words in furtherance of the theme set before us by President McKay in the opening address of the conference—"Preach the Word." I have in mind one of the great facilities available to us in carrying forth this assignment.

The other day in a stake conference, I heard an officer of the Air Force stand before the group and tell of the circumstances surrounding his coming into the Church. He said in substance:

"I had a date with a lovely young woman. When I called for her, I noticed on the table a copy of the Book of Mormon. I had never heard of it before. I began to read. I became interested. I secured a copy of the book and read it through.

"I had only the traditional idea of God and Jesus Christ. I had never given serious thought to the matter. But as I read this book there came into my mind light and understanding of eternal truths, and into my heart a testimony that God is our Eternal Father, and that Jesus is our Savior."

I am confident that the experience of this man who was influenced by the Book of Mormon is similar to that of many others of our people.

Brethren and sisters, if there are miracles among us, certainly one of them is this book. Unbelievers may doubt the First Vision and say there were no witnesses to prove it. Critics may scorn every divine manifestation incident to the coming forth of this work as being of such an intangible nature as to be unprovable to the pragmatic mind, as if the things of God could be understood other than by the Spirit of God. They may discount our theology. But they cannot in honesty dismiss the Book of Mormon. It is here. They can feel it. They can read it. They can weigh its substance and its content. They can witness its influence.

Faced with its presence, but unwilling to believe the story of its coming forth, they have sought an explanation for it, other than the one given by the Prophet that it was engraven on golden plates by ancient prophet-historians, and that their record was revealed and translated by the gift and power of God.

The Book of Mormon was first printed on a little hand-operated flat-bed press in a backwoods village of New York in the year 1830. From that first edition, while critics have published volume after volume in an effort to discredit the Prophet's story, the book has gone through one edition after another. From English it has been translated into thirty-one other languages, and printed in twenty of these.

While its detractors have called it blasphemous, the work of a paranoiac, the outpouring of a myth-maker, the result of a man's environment, the book has gone forth to change for good the lives of men and women in a score of nations. What a concourse of the people of the earth we would have if all of those who have read this book and been influenced by its message were gathered together in one place.

The first edition was comprised of 5,000 volumes. That edition met all demands for a number of years. I think you may be interested to know that during the first nine months of this year, more than 350,000 copies were sold in English alone. I am satisfied that by the close of the year we shall have sold more than 500,000 copies of the Book of Mormon in various languages, all within a period of a single year. We now distribute every three or four days, more copies than were included in the entire first edition.

The same book which converted Brigham Young, Willard Richards, Orson and Parley Pratt, and many others of the early leaders of the Church, is also converting people in Germany, in the British Isles, in Finland, in Japan, in Tonga, and wherever else men and women are reading it prayerfully and with real intent. The promise of Moroni, written in his loneliness, following the destruction of his people, is being fulfilled every day.

Each time we encourage a man to read the Book of Mormon we do him a favor. If he reads it prayerfully and with a sincere desire to know the truth, he will know by the power of the Holy Ghost that the book is true. And from that knowledge there will flow a conviction of the truth of many other things.

For if the Book of Mormon is true, then God lives. Testimony upon testimony runs through its pages of the solemn fact that our Father is real, that he is personal, that he loves his children and seeks their happiness.

If the Book of Mormon is true, then Jesus is the Son of God, the Only Begotten of the Father in the flesh, born of Mary, "a virgin most beautiful above all other virgins," for the book so testifies in a description unexcelled in all literature.

If the Book of Mormon is true, then Jesus is verily our Redeemer, the Savior of the world. The great purpose of its preservation and coming forth, according to its own statement, is "to the convincing of the Jew and the Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations." (See title page of the Book of Mormon.)

If the Book of Mormon is true, then this land is choice above all other lands, but if it is to remain such the inhabitants of the land must worship the God of the land, the Lord Jesus Christ. The histories of two great nations, told with warning in this sacred volume, indicate that while we must have science, while we must have education, while we must have arms, we must also have righteousness if we are to merit the protection of God, as Brother Benson has so eloquently indicated here this afternoon.

If the Book of Mormon is true, Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God, for he was the instrument in the hands of God in bringing to light this testimony of the divinity of our Lord.

If this book is true, David O. McKay is a prophet, for he holds all of the keys, the gifts, powers, and authority held by the Prophet Joseph who brought forth this latter-day work.

I repeat, if the Book of Mormon is true, the Church is true, for the same authority under which this sacred record came to light is present and manifest among us today. It is a restoration of the Church set up by the Savior in Palestine. It is a restoration of the Church set up by the Savior when he visited this continent as set forth in this sacred record.

If the Book of Mormon is true, the Bible is true. The Bible is the Testament of the Old World. The Book of Mormon is the Testament of the New. The one is the record of Judah, the other is the record of Joseph, and they have come together in the hand of the Lord in fulfillment of the prophecy of Ezekiel. Together they declare the Kingship of the Redeemer of the world, and the reality of his kingdom.

Here is a voice that has spoken from the dust with a familiar spirit, and touched the hearts of men and women in many lands. Those who have read it prayerfully, be they rich or poor, learned or unlearned, have grown under its power.

Let me tell you of a letter which we received a few years ago. A man wrote saying in substance: "I am in a federal reformatory in Ohio. I recently came across a copy of the Book of Mormon in the prison library. I have read it, and when I read Mormon's lamentation, over his fallen people—'O ye fair ones, how could ye have departed from the ways of the Lord, how could ye have rejected that Jesus, who stood with open arms to receive you! Behold, if ye had not done this, ye would not have fallen. . . .' (Mormon 6:17-18.) When I read this I felt that Mormon was talking to me. Can I get a copy of that book?"

We sent him a copy. He walked in the office some months later, a changed man. I am happy to report that a boy who had stolen gasoline, and then stolen automobiles, and then done other things until finally he was placed in a federal reformatory, was touched by the spirit of this book, and the report today is that he is now a successful man, rehabilitated, earning a living honestly for himself and family in a west coast city.

Such has been the power of this great book in the lives of those who have read it prayerfully.

I give you my testimony that it is true. That I know by the witness of the Holy Ghost, and that knowledge to me is certain.

Sidney Rigdon did not write it. Oliver Cowdery did not write it. It is not the result of a paranoiac or of a dissociated personality, as some have said. It is not the product of a myth-maker. It is not the result of the environment of a farm boy who grew up in western New York. Joseph Smith did not write it. He, the Prophet of this dispensation, translated the writings of prophets of old under the power of God, to testify in our day.

We invite all men everywhere to read it. Its witness lies within itself.

I so testify. This marvelous record, preserved over fourteen centuries, has confirmed my faith in God, in my Redeemer, in the land in which I live, in the work of which I am a part. I leave you my witness in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ELDER HOWARD W. HUNTER

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

I do not know what one should say who has been so newly called and sustained, so I will tell you what is in my heart this afternoon.

I love the Church. I want you to know that I love our great leader, President McKay, and with all my heart and soul I sustain him as prophet, seer, and revelator. And I sustain President Clark and President Moyle, President Smith, the President of the Council of

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to Elder Gordon B. Hinckley, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

The Choir and Congregation will now sing "How Firm a Foundation," conducted by Elder Jay E. Welch, Assistant Choir Conductor. After the singing, we shall hear from Elder Howard W. Hunter.

---

The Tabernacle Choir and the Congregation sang the hymn, "How Firm A Foundation," conducted by Jay E. Welch, Assistant Choir Conductor.

President David O. McKay:

Yesterday, it was my privilege to represent the First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve, and notify Elder Howard W. Hunter that he had been chosen of the Lord to be a special witness to the divinity of the love, and the labors, the life and death of Jesus Christ, the beloved Son of our Father. That was the first he knew about his having been so chosen.

Yesterday, you voted unanimously to sustain him as one of the Council of the Twelve. We welcome him this afternoon to this honored position and pray God to inspire him and to bless him as he goes forth to declare the divinity of this great work and the Sonship of Him who stands at the head of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

the Twelve, each individual member of that Council, and all of the General Authorities.

Not many of you know me, so perhaps you would permit me to be just a little bit personal this afternoon. I have lived most of my life in California, having been born in Boise, Idaho, and having lived there until I was graduated from high school.

I am grateful for a humble home, for modest circumstances, for my father and my mother, both of whom reside in California.

It was in California that I met my companion. We came to the temple here in Salt Lake City where we were married and sealed for eternity. We have had three sons, one of whom was called home in infancy. Our second son, having completed a mission in Australia, is now in his last year at Brigham Young University. He married his sweetheart in the temple and caused us to become grandparents just a few days ago. Our other son is now serving in Australia in the mission field.

We have been grateful for our home and the fact that our boys have stayed close to the program of the Church. My wife has been a sweet and loving companion and has always sustained me in the callings which have come to me.

I had the privilege of serving as a bishop in the Church for a little more than six years. I am grateful for the people of that ward and the lessons they taught me and the opportunities that came to me. For nearly ten years I have served as president of the Pasadena Stake in California. Again I am grateful for those people, for their love and their affection, for their sustaining influence, for the counselors that have worked with me. I am grateful to the Church for all of these things and what it has meant to us in our life.

Before I was graduated from law school, three boys were born to us. Since that time I have been engaged in the private practice of law—until yesterday. Somebody asked me yesterday what my plans are, and the only answer I could give is that I have not yet been told what my plans are.

I want you to know that I have a firm, uncompromising conviction that God lives, that Jesus is the Christ, that the gospel was restored in this latter dispensation by the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I have an abiding conviction of the truthfulness of this fact and that our President, whom we sustained at this conference, holds those same keys, powers, and authority.

I do not apologize for the tears that come to my eyes on this occasion because I believe that I face friends, my brethren and sisters in the Church, whose hearts beat the same as mine today, in the thrill of the gospel and in service to others.

President McKay, I want you to know, and all of the membership of the Church to know, that I accept, without reservation, the call which you have made of me, and I am willing to devote my life and all that I have to this service. Sister Hunter joins me in this pledge.

May I request today your prayers on my behalf, for I know that only with the help of my Heavenly Father, can I meet the challenge and develop those qualities which distinguish the other members of this council from men of the world.

I am grateful. I bear my testimony to you humbly. May we go forward together in righteousness, I humbly pray, in Jesus' name. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We have just listened to the acceptance testimony from the man who was called to fill the vacancy in the Council of the Twelve, Elder Howard W. Hunter.

The Tabernacle Choir will favor us with "Mine Eyes Have Seen The Glory Of The Coming Of The Lord," conducted by Elder Richard P. Condie. The closing prayer will be offered by Brother Rulon T. Hinckley, patriarch of the Emigration Stake.

The singing, as you know, for this afternoon has been furnished by the members of the Tabernacle Choir, and we have thrilled with the excellency of their singing. We express appreciation and gratitude for the public press, the reporters' fair and accurate reports throughout the sessions of this Conference. We appreciate the cooperation of city officials, Police Chief W. Cleon Skousen, and his associates, the traffic officers in their masterful handling of the increased traffic on these streets.

We express appreciation for the Fire Department and the Red Cross, standing ready for any emergency, and there have been several. Their prompt attention has given relief to those who needed it. We express appreciation to the ushers of the Tabernacle who have rendered service early and late in seating the great audiences.

Again we express appreciation for the radio and television service rendered by the various radio and television stations here in our own city, and state, and also in other states, named in the various sessions of our Conference. Besides the great audiences attending this Conference on Temple Square, a survey indicates, as we reported this morning, that one million people have heard and seen the proceedings of this conference through radio and television in eighteen major cities throughout the West. This figure is based on the ratio of each city carrying the Conference and the number of viewers per city.

We appreciate those who furnished the singing throughout this entire Conference: First, the Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Jordan Valley Region; second, the Combined Choruses of the Latter-day Saints Institute of Religion and University of Utah, and the Bonneville Strings; third, the Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir last night who thrilled us with their excellent singing; and today, this great Tabernacle Choir.

We have been truly blessed throughout this Conference with the best singing that anybody in the world would hear under these circumstances. Everybody in this audience, the million who have listened, will agree that the singing has been of such high order that it may be classed as among the best in all the world.

Again at the conclusion of our Conference we express appreciation for the beautiful Hawaiian flowers you see arranged here on the pulpit. We thank all those who have contributed in any way to the success and inspiration of this great Conference. The address given this morning at 7:30 by Elder Richard L. Evans, you may hear again this evening over the radio at eight o'clock.

Tonight, the Deseret Sunday School Union Conference will convene in this building at seven o'clock. All Sunday School workers will wish to be in attendance. The public is cordially invited.

PRESIDENT DAVID O. McKAY

And now, my brethren and sisters, just a word in parting.

This has truly been a great conference. We have met during a critical time in the history of our own great country and the history of the world. I have been impressed with the answer that you have given through the Brethren here and through your acceptance, to some of the false ideologies and teachings that are rampant in the world. One of those is, that man is not a spiritual being, but that he is just as any other animal, subject to his passions, subject to his yearnings, desires, and justified in achieving his ambitions no matter how many others may suffer in that achievement.

You have said today and yesterday and the day before, in your testimonies that man is a dual being—he is physical, has his appetites, passions, desires, just as any animal has, but he is also a spiritual being, and he knows that to subdue the animal instincts is to achieve advancement in his spiritual realm; that a man who is subjected to his physical appetites and passions only, who denies any reality of a spirit, is truly of the animal world; that man is a spiritual being, and his real life is the spirit that inhabits his body.

Ex-President Adams was right, when he was accosted on the streets of Boston one day and was asked, "How is John Quincy Adams today?" and he answered, as he tottered along with his cane, "John Quincy Adams is well, thank you, quite well. But the house in which he lives is tottering on its foundations, the windows are shaking, the roof is leaking, the doors are not hanging straight, and so on, and I think that John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon. But John Quincy Adams himself is quite well, I thank you, quite well." He sensed that the real John Quincy Adams was an immortal being, a son of a Father in heaven.

That is one great truth to which you have borne testimony in this conference—that man is spirit, the son of his Father, and has within him that which will cause him to yearn and to aspire to become dignified as a son of God should be dignified. The dignity of man, not the degradation of man, has been emphasized throughout this conference.

Another false ideal which has been mentioned as rampant by a small group of men, controlling millions now, is the denial of the existence of a Creator, that there is no God. The man who represents that group was recently entertained in this nation. Just before he came he declared over his own signature that he is still an atheist and will continue to be, and will fight religion as an "opiate" to the human mind.

Every man who stood at this pulpit, I think without exception, has borne witness that God lives, and he knows that he lives. And there has been quoted the evidence of men who have lived through the ages who have borne that same testimony. And they are honorable men. They are honest men. They would not lie. They sent their written messages to people whom they loved, as you and I love our loved ones, our children, our husbands, and our wives.

Paul sent his letter saying, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

"And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

"And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve:

"After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present," [as much as to say, "You can see them and converse with them"] "but some are fallen asleep.

"After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

"And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

"For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God." (I Cor. 15:3-9.)

But he bore his testimony and gave his life for this testimony and was happy in doing it.

One of the Brethren quoted him today, from his last letter to Timothy:

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (II Tim. 4:7-8.)

Thank heaven there are hundreds and thousands who believe that testimony and repudiate the claims of the atheists who boast that man is his own god, and have already poisoned the minds of a generation of young men and women. They started this, as some of you will remember, forty years ago, and during that forty years they have poisoned those young boys and girls with the thought that there is no God.

At the conclusion of this session today, I wish to emphasize the fact that this great conference has testified to the hundreds of thousands listening in, and all the world—for these testimonies will be printed—that God lives and furthermore, that Jesus is his Beloved Son, the Savior of the world, and those who have seen Jesus, who walked with him, who testify of him, as I have narrated, heard him say, "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

You remember during the Last Supper, Philip said to Jesus, "Lord shew us the Father." And his answer was, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? . . . and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?" (John 14:8-9.)

We have given an answer to the world. I think it is glorious.

Furthermore, you have given an answer to the false teachings that man is not a free individual, that he is a creature of the state, that the state is supreme, that the state can tell what you should do, what you should not do. Man is a spiritual being and has within him as a gift from God, his Creator, the power of choice. Part of man's divinity, part of his spirit-being, is the power to choose—the only creature on earth that has that power. It is God-given. Men who will deny him that, take from him part of his divinity. You have answered that. Your testimonies are now on record.

Another thing—you have borne testimony throughout this conference to the right of the family, its influence and fundamental contribution as a unit to the state. The family is the foundation of the state and should not be broken up. In China where they love their children and where they train them and teach them to be obedient, where the children respect their parents and obey their parents, the family is broken up now, and they have to meet in com-

Sunday, October 11

munistic groups. They will not stand for that very long; they will break away from it. You, during this conference, have borne testimony to the sacredness of the family, the father and the mother and the children. You have borne testimony of the responsibility of the father and the mother to train those children in the ways of the Lord, teach them baptism and repentance, or the responsibility will be "upon the heads of the parents."

Furthermore, you have borne testimony to the world that man is not living for himself, that his selfish desires should be overcome and controlled, and he should render service to others. One of the greatest sayings of Jesus when he was among the Twelve during his two-and-a-half years here, was the one that touched upon that same principle: "He that findeth his life shall lose it. . . ." [that is the selfish part] "and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." (Matt. 10:39.) A paradoxical statement, but oh, how true. You have had an evidence of it here today when Elder Hunter said, "I give my life now for the service," the same with these other apostles, the same with all the General Authorities of the Church, with all the congregation, with thousands and hundreds of thousands throughout the world who have accepted the gospel of Jesus Christ. You are willing to lose your life—that is, to devote your time and your talents and your strength for his sake; and in so doing you will find your life.

I often quote a man who was impressed with that great principle, who wrote—

"Supposing today were your last day on earth,

The last mile of the journey you've trod;
After all of your efforts, how much are you worth?

How much can you take home to God?
"Don't count as possessions your silver and gold;

Tomorrow you leave these behind;
And all that is yours to have and to hold
Is the service you've given mankind."

Anon.

Quoted from Gospel Ideals, page 58.

That is true, but to you it is not all that you take home to God, because you take home to him your character, and he will judge you accordingly, and you will take home to him, if you have been through the temple worthily, your loved ones.

Now these are just some of the thoughts that came at the conclusion of this great conference.

Yours is a great mission. Our thanks to God our Father for it. Our membership in his Church, and our privilege of association in the brotherhood of Christ cannot be overstated. Morning, noon, and night, all through our lives our souls are filled with gratitude for the blessings that are ours in our associations in the Church of Jesus Christ. It is a glorious opportunity!

Now, my brethren and sisters, I bless you with increased testimony of God's existence, increased testimony of the divinity of Christ's mission, his life, his death, his establishing of the gospel; with increased testimony of the value of the individual—oh, how important and how glorious—how full of significance are the glorious words, "For behold, this is my work," said the Lord, "and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Moses 1:39.) Is not that wonderful? What would this old earth be if there were no human beings on earth, even if there were no animals—only rocks, the barren shores, the rolling seas—no life, no human beings? What a wonderful statement, what a wonderful religious revelation to the human family: "This is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life" of each individual.

God help us so to live that we may be found worthy to hear from him the whisperings of his Spirit, the whispering of his voice, as he guides us and warns us and tells us what to do in order to come back and help him crown his glory.

That is a wonderful saying of Peter's, the rough old fisherman, when after two years and more, after he had a testimony in his heart that God lives, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, he wrote to the people over whom he was presiding and used the phrase, which I wish all of you would think about and cherish, that God has made us "partakers of the divine nature." Read it in his epistle.

And I hope you brethren, presidents of stakes, bishops of wards, and you who preside over missions, auxiliaries, priesthood quorums, will some day appreciate, every one of you, just what that means, to be in touch with that divine nature through the Holy Ghost.

God bless you in your homes. Do not be cross. Be courteous. Have the same courtesy in your homes that you have when you are out in society. Thank your wives, thank your children, say, "if you please," "excuse me,"—those little things which make life sweet. Let us be kind in our homes. The gospel is the spirit of kindness. Let us be considerate. Let us be true. "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and in doing good to all men; . . . If there is anything virtuous, lovely, or of good report or praiseworthy, we seek after these things."

I pray God to sanctify to our good and to the good of all who have listened in this day and to the Church everywhere, the blessings and testimonies of this great conference, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

President David O. McKay:

We shall now be inspired as the Tabernacle Choir sings "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Coming of the Lord," and the closing prayer will be offered by Brother Rulon T. Hinckley, patriarch of Emigration Stake, following which this Conference will be adjourned for six months.

Singing by the Tabernacle Choir, "The Battle Hymn Of The Republic."

Elder Rulon T. Hinckley, patriarch of Emigration Stake, offered the benediction.

Conference adjourned for six months.

The Relief Society Singing Mothers from the Jordan Valley Region furnished the music for the morning and afternoon sessions, Friday, October 10, with Sister Florence Jepperson Madsen conducting.

At the Saturday morning and afternoon sessions the music was furnished by the University of Utah Choral Society (The Institute of Religion and the University of Utah Choruses and the Bonneville Strings), David A. Shand, Director.

The Men's Chorus of the Tabernacle Choir furnished the music for the General Priesthood meeting Saturday, October 10, with Richard P. Condie conducting.

The music for the Sunday morning and afternoon sessions was furnished by the Salt Lake Tabernacle Choir, Richard P. Condie conducting, assisted by Jay E. Welch.

Richard P. Condie conducted the singing of the Tabernacle Choir at the Tabernacle Choir and Organ broadcast. Frank W. Asper was at the organ.

Accompaniments and interludes on the organ were played by Alexander Schreiner, Frank W. Asper and Roy M. Darley.

CHURCH OF THE AIR

Columbia Broadcasting System's Church of the Air was presented at 7:30 a.m., Sunday, October 11, 1959. The program was as follows:

The Tabernacle Choir, under the direction of Richard P. Condie, furnished the music for this service, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ. J. Allen Jensen was the announcer.

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: The Church of the Air is presented by CBS Radio so that representatives of many faiths may address a nationwide congregation. Today's service, in connection with the Semi-Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, comes to you from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah. Our speaker is Richard L. Evans, a member of the Council of the Twelve of the Church. Music is by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by Richard P. Condie, with Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

With the music of Dudley Buck, the Tabernacle Choir first presents an anthem with words from an Old Testament text: "Behold! there shall be a day, when the watchman upon the mountain top shall cry aloud: 'arise, ye get ye up unto Mount Zion, unto the Lord your God!' Be glad and rejoice! . . . I, even have redeemed thee! . . ." "Fear Not Ye, O Israel."

(The Choir sang: "Fear Not Ye, O Israel."—Buck-Griffity.)

Announcer: "The morning breaks; the shadows flee; Lo, Zion's standard is unfurled! The dawning of a brighter day, Majestic rises on the world." These words of faith and assurance by Parley P. Pratt are sung now by the Tabernacle Choir to the music of George Careless: "The morning breaks, the shadows flee."

(The Choir sang: "The Morning Breaks."—Careless.)

Announcer: We now hear on this Church of the Air Service Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, frequently referred to as the Mormon Church. Today's talk is titled: "The Ultimate Objective."

ELDER RICHARD L. EVANS

Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles

Each year on a day so designated, we recall the birth and accomplishment of Christopher Columbus, a man no doubt inspired of God to do what he did, against all ignorance, against all odds and obstacles. He is a symbol, one among many, of the difficulties men can endure if they have sufficient faith in an ultimate objective.

The heroes of history, and the lives of those less known, have proved they could endure working and waiting and great difficulty and discouragement, if there were some purpose, some hope, some reasonable assurance of the ultimate objective.

The long hard journey is not too long if "home" is at the other end. But aimlessness would give men little reason for lengthening out the effort, without some assurance, without some real and solid incentive.

Remembered are the words of Robert Browning:

"Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's a heaven for?"

But his reach should know that he is reaching for something real—or his reach will weary of the reaching.

Everything has to have a reason, a purpose, an ultimate answer. And for such answers men have searched and sought: Why do we live? What are the purposes of life? Why did the Creator create? Why, indeed, were worlds brought into being?

For answer we would have to go back to the basic, literal facts of our relationship to God, who gave us the opportunity of life, and who is in fact the Father of us all.

"In the beginning," we read in sacred writ, "God created the heaven and the earth. . . ." (Genesis 1:1.)

But for answer we would have to go back before this beginning, with God's great plan and purpose: the Gospel, we have come to call it, which we heard in the heavens before time began, where we were with our Father, the Father of our spirits, and where we agreed to enter mortality to prove ourselves and learn the lessons of life, and where we were assured our Father would send his own beloved Firstborn Son to redeem us from death—that Son of whom Paul said, "God . . . hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; Who being . . . the express image of his person, . . . when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high. . . ." (Heb. 1:1-3.)

The whole intent of scripture is one of establishing our relationship with God, our Father, and with his Son, our Savior, and with the eternal plans and purposes for each and all of us, and our relationships to life—and to one another also.

And what are these plans and purposes? What would a loving Father want for his children? What would any father want for his children? Peace and health and happiness; learning and progress and improvement; and everlasting life, and everlasting association with those we love. What less could heaven be? What less would a Father plan or propose, for those he loves, for those whom he made "in his own image"? (Gen. 1:27.) He has declared his work and his glory "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." (Pearl of Great Price, Moses 1:39.) This is the ultimate objective. This is the whole purpose of the Gospel he has given.

This makes life meaningful, everlastingly so. This is the assurance that gives incentive—that gives faith in the face of all searching uncertainty. This makes life worth all the anguish, all the effort, as we make our way through the world—learning that life is for learning, that our Father sent us here for a period of proving, not to lose our way, but with a light within us to lead us, if we will be led, to our highest possibilities, with freedom and faith and with a few simple rules to keep, which we call commandments.

And as to keeping these commandments, we have our choice—our free agency, as it has come to be called. How could it be otherwise? How could we grow without it? Who can learn to make decisions if someone else always does the deciding? As we have to learn to let our children learn much for themselves (after we have given them all the counsel we reasonably can), so our Father in heaven has sent us here with freedom to decide for ourselves. And to help us to decide, he has given us standards, advice, laws, rules. And they are not arbitrary, unrealistic rules, but are simply counsel from a loving Father, who knows us, who knows our nature. It is not his purpose that his children should be unhappy. No father intends to have his children unhappy. And for this reason he has given us commandments for our health and happiness, and peace and progress and quiet conscience.

In a remarkable commencement address, some months before he left this life, Mr. Cecil B. DeMille made this moving observation concerning freedom, and the purpose of life, and the keeping of the commandments:

"We are too inclined to think of law as something merely restrictive," he said, "something hemming us in. We sometimes think of law as the opposite of liberty. But that is a false conception. That is not the way that God's inspired prophets and lawgivers looked upon the law. Law has a twofold purpose. It is meant to govern. It is also meant to educate. . . .

"God does not contradict himself. He did not create man and then, as an afterthought, impose upon him a set of arbitrary, irritating, restrictive rules. He made man free—and then gave him the commandments to keep him free.

"We cannot break the Ten Commandments. We can only break ourselves against them—or else, by keeping them, rise through them to the fulness of freedom under God. God means us to be free. With divine daring, he gave us the power of choice." (Excerpts from the Commencement Address at Brigham Young University, May 31, 1957.)

In our own day and dispensation, the Lord has restated the law of cause and effect, with these words: "There is a law, irrevocably decreed in heaven before the foundations of this world, upon which all blessings are predicated—And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated." (Doctrine & Covenants 130:20-21.)

The commandments are not old-fashioned, out-dated, or merely man-made. They apply to our own as to other ages. And whenever we do anything basically against them, we pay a price—not because someone has said so, but because we are what we are, and because we are irrevocably affected by the very laws of life. No matter what someone says, and no matter who would set them aside, there are still heartaches and heartbreaks and inescapable consequences for those who lie and cheat and bear false witness; for those who are immoral and unfaithful to loved ones; for those who abuse themselves physically, who indulge appetites, who acquire harmful habits; for those who set aside sure and safe standards, who are coarse in conduct, and run contrary to the commandments, to the basic laws of life.

To find peace—the peace within, the peace that passeth understanding—men must live in honesty, honoring each other, honoring obligations, working willingly, loving and cherishing loved ones, serving and considering others, with patience, with virtue, with faith and forbearance, with the assurance that life is for learning, for serving, for repenting, and improving. And God be thanked for the blessed principle of repenting and improving, which is a way that is open to us all.

There is a Kingdom, and there is a King. And there are requirements for citizenship in the Kingdom—commandments, laws, ordinances, and obligations, and what is required of us for peace in this world, and exaltation in the world to come, is to follow him and keep his commandments.

We would witness this day that the Lord God lives, and that our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, his Divine and only Begotten Son, did redeem us from death, and even now is our advocate with the Father, and sits by his Father's side, and that the fulness of the Gospel is again on earth with power and authority to administer in its saving and exalting ordinances.

There is this certainty of assurance also: that he is willing to reveal his mind and will to us today, to guide us, to hear and answer prayer, to open his arms to the prayerful and repentant, even as he has done in other days.

And against the tension and trouble of our time—against injustice, threats, and force and fear; want and worry; discouragement and despondency; unfaithfulness and duplicity; and much of misunderstanding, and much of inhumanity from man to man—against all this there is the blessed assurance of the glorious ultimate objective: of salvation for all, as offered by our Savior, and of exaltation for those who will work at it and win it; of justice, of compensation, of the ultimate defeat of evil; of peace and of progress and health and happiness, of everlasting life with sweet reunion with loved ones.

And this day we would plead with all men, the searching and the sorrowing, the sick, the discouraged, those burdened with sin and unquiet conscience; those who feel lost and lonely, and those who have lost those they love—to all we would plead: take courage and faith and assurance, according to the promises and purposes of Him who is the Father of us all, who is mindful of us all.

By walking in his ways and keeping his commandments, God grant that all of us together may move on to the glorious ultimate objective that is offered all of us—to the highest opportunities of everlasting life, with our loved ones with us, always, and forever, in Jesus' name. Amen.

(The Choir sang: "How Great the Wisdom and the Love."—McIntyre.)

Announcer: The Tabernacle Choir has recalled a sacramental song by Eliza R. Snow with the music of Thomas McIntyre: "How great the wisdom and the Love that filled the courts on high, And sent the Savior from above to suffer bleed and die."

And now, the Tabernacle Choir closes with the words of Helen A. Dickinson, sung in a worshipful setting by D. F. E.

Auber: "O Loving Savior, Slain for us. O Sacrificial Lamb adored. Now in Thy presence pure and glorious, we lift our hearts to Thee, O Lord."

(The Choir sang: "O Loving Saviour." —Auber-Dickinson.)

Music: Organ and humming choir: "Sweet Is the Work."

Announcer: Today's service came to you from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, through the facilities of Station KSL in Salt Lake City, Utah. Our speaker was Richard L. Evans of the Council of the Twelve of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Music was by the Tabernacle Choir, directed by Richard P. Condie. Alexander Schreiner was at the organ.

SALT LAKE MORMON TABERNACLE CHOIR AND ORGAN BROADCAST

The following broadcast, written and announced by Richard L. Evans, and originating with Station KSL, Salt Lake City, Utah, was presented from 8:30 to 9:00 a.m. Sunday, October 11, 1959, through the courtesy of the Columbia Broadcasting System's network, throughout the United States, parts of Canada, and through other facilities to several points overseas. The broadcast was as follows:

(The organ played, "As the Dew From Heaven Distilling," and on signal the Choir and organ broke into the hymn, "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," singing the words to the end of the second line, and humming to end of verse for announcer's background.)

Announcer: Once more we welcome you within these walls with music and the spoken word from the Crossroads of the West.

The CBS Radio Network and its affiliated stations bring you at this hour another presentation from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with Richard P. Condie conducting the Tabernacle Choir, Frank Asper, tabernacle organist, and the spoken word by Richard Evans.

The Choir sings first an anthem from Ernest Bloch's symphony of America: "America! America! Thy name is in my heart."

(The Choir sang: "America."—Bloch.)

Announcer: Frank Asper, Tabernacle

Organist, first turns on Temple Square today to a devotional theme he has arranged from the music of Franz Josef Haydn: "Truth Divine."

(Organ Selection: "Truth Divine."—Haydn.)

Announcer: And now from Temple Square the Tabernacle Choir sings Caesar Franck's impressive setting for the 150th Psalm: "O Praise Ye The Lord, Praise God in His Temple, O Praise Him for His might, and the greatness of His wonders. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

(The Choir sang: "Praise Ye The Lord."—Franck-Leichter.)

(Organ Selection: "Reflection."—Asper.)

Announcer: And now from the Choir comes a pleading, fervent sacred song of our Savior: "Abide with me; 'tis eventide! The day is past and gone; The shadows of the evening fall; The night is coming on! Within my heart a welcome guest, Within my home abide; . . . O Savior, stay this night with me; Behold, 'tis eventide."

(The Choir sang: "Abide With Me, 'Tis Eventide."—Millard.)

Announcer:

We have read somewhere in some rules of safety the following sentence: "Never point a gun at anything you don't intend to shoot." This is basic to a whole series of parallel precautions essentially summarized in this single short sentence: "Don't start what you shouldn't do." It applies to habits, to projects and promises, to attitudes and obligations, to every threat, to every temptation, and to every intent. The assumption that we can go a little way in the wrong way, that we can sin a little, lie a little, break the law a little; that we can be a little unfaithful, a little dishonest; or that we can start many things and stop them any time we want to, whenever and wherever we want to, without involvement, without hurt or harm, without falsely encouraging others, without being misunderstood, without the danger of going farther than we intended to go, is a false and unsafe assumption. Those who find themselves in serious or embarrassing situations frequently say they didn't intend to do what they did. And often it is true that they didn't intend to go so far. But what is often also true is that they did entertain the idea, or they did take the first step: they did make the problem possible. Like the man who points the gun, they assumed the attitude of intent. Starting is so often easier than stopping. Habits are so often easier to acquire than they are to set aside. Relationships are often easier to begin than to break off. And we save ourselves much embarrassment, much explanation, much heartache, much danger, much tragedy if we simply don't start what we shouldn't do. No one should flaunt any convention, or invite any flirtation, or tempt any temptation, or begin a habit he wouldn't permanently want to have, or begin any relationship of life that would be unsafe or unsavory or unwise to follow through. There is some scripture on the subject which says: "Abstain from all appearance of evil."<sup>1</sup> This also could be cited: "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he."<sup>2</sup> This all points up to the attitude of intent. Don't threaten anything you shouldn't follow through. Even would we say: Don't think to do anything you shouldn't do. Avoid not only the appearance of evil, but all invitation to it. In short, avoid the very attitude of intent. If you shouldn't, just don't do it.

(The Choir sang: "Glorious Things Are Sung of Zion."—Daynes.)

Announcer: With the words of William W. Phelps we have heard the Choir sing a hymn tune by Joseph J. Daynes: "Glorious Things Are Sung of Zion."

And now with Dr. Asper at the Tabernacle Organ we hear a hymn tune by Louis Gottschalk—a sacramental song: "God, Our Father, hear us pray; Send thy grace this holy day; As we take of emblems blest, On our Savior's love we rest."

(Organ Selection: "God Our Father, Hear Us Pray."—Gottschalk.)

Announcer: In closing the Tabernacle Choir recalls a Welsh chorale by R. H. Prichard as arranged by Griffith J. Jones, with the words of Charles Wesley: "Love Divine, all love excelling, Joy of heav'n, to earth come down; Fix in us Thy humble dwelling, All Thy faithful mercies crown . . . Breathe, O breathe Thy loving Spirit, into ev'ry troubled breast; Let us all in Thee inherit, Let us find the promised rest . . . Come, Almighty, to deliver, Let us all thy life receive; Suddenly return, and never, Never more thy temples leave . . ."

(The Choir sang: "Love Divine."—Prichard-Jones.)

Announcer: Again we leave you within the shadows of the everlasting hills. May peace be with you, this day—and always.

This concludes the fifteen hundred seventy-third presentation, continuing the 31st year of this traditional broadcast from the Mormon Tabernacle on Temple Square, brought to you by CBS Radio and its affiliated stations, originating with Radio Station KSL in Salt Lake City.

Richard P. Condie conducted the Tabernacle Choir. Frank Asper was at the Organ. The Spoken Word by Richard Evans.

In another seven days, at this same hour, music and the spoken word will be heard again from the Crossroads of the West.
